Many of our citizens took advantage of the soft weather yesterday to clear the ice off the sidewalks. Some amusing incidents occurred while some of the walks were being cleaned on the main sections. He was quite confused on looking around and seeing the fair damsel sheltering him from the rain. She only wished to get by and was quietly waiting for a chance.

STUART STRATHY, General Manager.

General Manager's Address.

After reading the above Report, the General Manager reviewed it as follows: The statement just read, exhibiting the condition of the affairs of the Bank, will, I am sure, meet with your approval, as it shows a steady growth in all departments. You will see by it our deposits now aggregate over $36,000,000 which, by comparison with the deposits of a year ago, show an increase of $6,200,000, an amount almost equal to the total deposits of the Bank ten years ago. You will see that we have employed these additional funds to the extent of $5,500,000 in commercial credits. Naturally the earning powers of the Bank have increased, and this is reflected in the net profits, which amount to $524,351, as against $457,982 last year.

During the year we have opened eleven new offices, the expenses in connection with which have been taken out of this year's profits. The points are: Belleker, Alberta; Erskine, Alberta; Hailsbury, Ontario; Matheson, Ontario; Munson, Alberta; Porcupine, Ontario; Rosetown, Saskatchewan; South Fort George, B.C.; Stockdale, Ontario; Stewart, B.C.; Wroxeter, Ontario.

The sum of $548,340 has been distributed to Shareholders in dividends, $100,000 added to Reserve Fund, which now amounts to $2,300,000; the usual appropriation of $10,000 has been made to officers' guarantee and pension funds, and $16,000 written off furniture account, and the sum of $153,434.79 carried forward to the credit of Profit and Loss new account.

Referring to circulation account, this now stands at $3,790,660, as against $3,000,000 last year. Indeed, in all departments of the Bank the satisfactory growth of the country has been satisfactorily reflected. To show this we will make a comparison with the figures of the Bank ten years ago:

Capital paid up	$1,000,000	$ 4,354,800
Rest Account	150,000	2,300,000
Deposits	8,528,120	36,677,834
Circulation	887,000	3,790,660
Total Assets	9,177,385	47,162,736

Referring to Bank Premises account, we now own 32 properties including Toronto office, all standing in the name of the Bank, the value of which is shown in the statement before you.

It is not needful for me to refer to the wonderful progress the country at large is making. This prosperity is manifest to all. Suffice it to say, our Branches extend fairly well throughout the Dominion, and we are in an excellent position to take advantage of the growth of the country, and confidently look forward to a steady increase in the earnings of the Bank. We have paid a conservative rate of interest to our Shareholders since 1885, and in the meantime have built up a reserve, to protect your capital, to the extent of $2,300,000. Our foundations are well and truly laid, and with the natural growth and prospects of this country, perhaps the equal of which does not elsewhere exist, we have every reason to look forward to the future with the greatest confidence, feeling that the property committed to our care will continue to make a reasonable return to its Shareholders.

All of the Branches of the Bank, including the Head Office, have been inspected during the year. I am conscious that the result of the Bank's operations for the past year, as shown to you by the statement now before you, could not have been accomplished except for the loyalty and efficiency of the staff of the Bank. It affords me greatest pleasure to bear testimony to their devotion to the interests of your institution.

President's Address.

Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in moving the adoption of the report for the year 1910.

Much of the general prosperity of our Canadian Banks is doubtless due to the great advancement this country has made within the past few years. A large increase in our population and the continued development of the Northwest have added very materially to the wealth of Canada. The extensions of our great railway systems and our rapidly growing trade with other countries have placed this Dominion on a very high level of commercial importance. Banks are becoming every day a more important factor in meeting the increased demands made upon capital and credit for aid in the manufacture of substantial industries and the enlargement of general business. The result is that our banking institutions have become in a material sense the moving power in all national works as well as the necessary adjunct of private enterprise. A wide field is thus opened up with satisfactory result. Securities are improving in character and value. Investments are found to be amply protected. Payments are being more promptly met than formerly. Everything of a financial and commercial character is becoming more substantial. Money is now utilized in larger and more profitable enterprises than at any time in the history of banking. The outlook for the future is most favorable. Add to these facts the rapid strides which our rich north and western Canada is making and the prosperous condition of the older Provinces, and it is reasonably safe to say that with careful management and prudent investments, banks occupy a stronger position to-day than they have ever done.

The fact that the failure of one or two smaller banks has not affected the standing of the existing institutions shows that our banks are on a solid basis. With anything like careful and conservative management, failure cannot happen. If the interests of the shareholders and depositors are safeguarded by watchfulness and business methods on the part of the management and directors, the assets of a bank must always be greater than its liabilities, and whilst this is the state of affairs, the public are safe. Your Directors have always adhered to this principle, and have spared neither time nor consideration in watching all the outgoings of your money. The securities have been closely scrutinised, investments in the slightest degree of a speculative character have been avoided. As a result, we have that current account with appeal to the shareholders in a convincing manner, and afford them good ground for the confidence they have in the management. It should be remembered that this bank has only been in existence about half the lifetime of others of about the same volume of business. As a reward to the management and all concerned in the welfare of the Traders Bank, it is pleasing to note that our deposits have increased over last year by six millions, a condition which could not have been created except by thoroughly good management on the part of the Bank officials and the confidence which such management always brings about.

There have been seven new branches opened during the year. This was considered necessary by reason of the expansion of the Bank, as well as of the business requirement of the country at large. For a short time, several of these branches cannot be expected to pay, except in a very small way, but experience is that in large measure reported in proper time the new branches begin to yield a profitable return on their own account, and increase the earning power of the Bank as a whole by establishing commercial connection, and adding to our facilities to do business. Our premises still continue to give us a good return for the investment.

For instance, the Head Office building gave 5½ per cent net for the year. Every room is occupied by desirable tenants. Owing to the increase in the business, it has been found necessary to utilize the large room at the entrance on the ground floor for Savings Department purposes. Already the convenience of this to depositors is felt, and we are beginning to reap the advantages accordingly. You will observe that your Directors have not this year written off any sum on premises account. The reason is very simple. The property is worth much more than it was a couple of years ago owing to the large increase in the value of real estate in a central location like this. The frontage is about 94 feet. The land alone has, on a very moderate estimate, increased in value $2,500 per foot over what was paid for it a few years ago, so that the property is really worth $225,000 more than it stands on the books to-day. To write off any amount under these conditions would not be justifiable, when the sole object is to present a true account of the Bank's affairs to its shareholders.

The policy of the management looks to the making of valuable connection in various parts of Canada, as shown by the character and extent of our new branches, and also to do everything reasonably possible towards making our Reserves and Rest strong and substantial. The amount carried to Rest account this year is very gratifying. After payment of all necessary obligations and providing for bad and doubtful debts and contingencies, we are able to place $100,000 to Rest account and we have increased our profit and loss account by $50,991.39 over last year, this account now standing at $153,434.79. And you will bear in mind that these objects have been accomplished notwithstanding the fact that we paid an increased dividend, now amounting to 8 per cent and involving an extra yearly payment out of profits of about $44,000.

The office of auditor to the board has been found to be of the greatest value. By means of the industry and care of this official we are continually kept in close touch with all that concerns the welfare of the bank. Details and complicated matters with which directors could not ordinarily be thoroughly conversant are placed before the board from week to week, and the board is thereby enabled to judge intelligently of all that goes on from the head office down to the smallest branch. The auditor, as I explained on a former occasion, is an entirely independent officer, not in any way under the control of the head office management, but appointed and subject to dismissal only by your Directors, who fix his remuneration and define his duties. Our experience is such that not only in our own personal interest, but in the interest of all banks a thorough and efficient audit by an independent officer is of the greatest value, and we heartily concur in the suggestion of the appointment of such auditors. I need only add that the Directors feel convinced that a competent and conscientious auditor performing his work thoroughly would be of immense advantage to banks and the public, but his work must be efficiently done, otherwise false confidence may be created and grave injustice done to those who may depend too much on his results. We shall be glad to see a searching and practical system of bank auditing adopted in this country, and hope that some measure having this object in view may become law at the earliest moment.

I do not intend to deal with the condition or prospects of business in any detail. The annual statement and returns of our various banks show the progressive strides Canada is making far more than mere words could do. Our own share in the forward movement is very gratifying. Without further comment, therefore, I move the adoption of this report presented for your consideration.

Vice-President's Address.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Vice-President, in seconding the motion for the adoption of the report, said:—

In seconding the motion I feel that no very extended remarks are called for. The President has covered the ground so completely that little that has not been said is left for me to say in commendation of the statement, whose favorable features so amply justify the motion. I may say that I fully and freely endorse what has been said. It is very gratifying to me, as it must be to all concerned, that the Traders Bank signalizes the first year of its entrance upon the second quarter century of its existence with a statement so eminently satisfactory, and under auspices which promise a continuous growth and advance. The commercial, industrial and prospective continuous development of our great and widely distributed and diversified resources will tend to create an active demand and profitable employment of capital. In this regard the Traders Bank is well equipped to have its share. Its assets, very considerably increased during the past year, are strong, while a very important increase of deposits evidences the growing confidence and favor of the public—two of the prime elements in justifying the opinion of a progressively improving and profitable business. We can, I feel sure, regard the future with confidence. If the next decade shows the splendid ratio of advance of the past ten years, with their threefold increase in assets, their sixfold growth in deposits, and their thirty-three-fold increase in reserve, we who may live to see 1921 will be very agreeably astonished. The generally satisfactory character of the statement is gratifying, not only on account of the creditable accomplishment shown, but it is further to be regarded as the result of shrewd, careful and aggressive management, a circumstance not only of importance to the Shareholders, but to the public as well, as additionally conducing to that confidence both in skill and efficiency of administration, and in stability, which is the foundation of financial success. If there is an indication of necessity in these regards in respect of the banking business generally, for an improvement in assurance in the returns suggestive of amendment of the Banking Act, there will be little ground to objection. As far as the Bank is concerned, there is no objection to the closest scrutiny of its securities, investments, and methods. In this connection, I agree with the remarks of the President, in regard to any inspection that may be considered desirable to verify the several essential items of the annual statement and monthly returns of Canadian banks. The one now before us would not be affected either as to its correctness, or favorable showing, by the rigorous scrutiny of securities and the most thorough independent audit; it must be satisfactory—as it is a credit to the management, to the Shareholders, to the Bank's clientele, and I have great pleasure in seconding the motion for the adoption of the Report.

The motion for the adoption of the report was carried unanimously.

It was moved by E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., Director, seconded by Rev. J. S. Williamson, Shareholder, and resolved,

That the Shareholders and Directors of the Traders Bank of Canada place on record their hearty approval of any legislation of the Dominion Parliament whereby an independent examination and audit under the direction of the Government of all Canadian banks shall be made from time to time:

Resolved also, that whilst the system of auditing should be determined by the Government, it is hoped that in the public interest the method to be devised will be thorough and efficient, and of a practical character, as the result of a defective system would create injustice and tend to injure those who might be induced to rely on reports having the sanction of a Government or other official auditor.

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Honorable the Minister of Finance.

In speaking to the motion, Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., strongly advocated the principle of independent inspection and audit. He pointed out the great benefit which the Directors receive from our present system of auditing in this Bank, and, although not claiming it to be perfect, he pointed out that it was a long step in the right direction. The Traders Bank is undoubtedly the pioneer in seeking to work out some method whereby the Directors and Shareholders may receive information and details apart from the general management. Under the proposed legislation the duties of Directors are found to be much more onerous than heretofore, and the penalties attached to want of care or lack of thoroughness will be severe. It is, therefore, most important that the Directors, who are endeavoring to be honest and watchful in their management, should be protected, as well as the public, by some practical method of auditing. He emphasized the fact that whatever system may be adopted would have to be efficient, otherwise there might be a tendency to do more harm than good. The greatest care will have to be taken in devising a scheme which will ensure safety to the public, on the one hand, and avoid danger, on the other hand, from too much reliance upon the results obtained from the official examining the affairs of a bank. He read the resolution appointing the present Auditor to the Board, and showed how very wide and comprehensive are his duties, as defined by the resolution, and how satisfactorily they are carried into actual practice. This official is outside the general management, and responsible to the Board only. His duties involve continuous work, and there is perhaps no officer who works harder than he does. A more extended and comprehensive system, applicable to all Banks, would protect Shareholders and Directors alike, and would be of the greatest value to the public.

It was moved by Mr. Geo. Watson and seconded by Mr. C. D. McLeod that the thanks of the Shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the President, Vice-President, and Directors of the Bank for their attention to the interests of the Bank during the past year. Carried.

It was moved by Dr. J. F. Overholt and seconded by Rev. Wm. Cooper that the thanks of the Directors and Shareholders are due, and are hereby tendered to the General Manager, the Assistant General Manager, and the staff of the Bank for their diligent attention to the interests of the Bank during the past year. Carried.

It was moved by J. Parker, seconded by Mr. Skinner, that a sum not exceeding $20,000 be set apart each year out of the earnings of the Bank for the purpose of paying for all the services, fees and expenses of the President, Vice-President, and such Directors as now receive remuneration, said sum, or such portion thereof as may be required, to be apportioned as the Board may think proper. Carried.

It was moved by Mr. Jos. E. Baillie and seconded by Mr. Gideon Grant that the ballot be now open for the election of Directors, and to be kept open until three o'clock, unless five minutes elapse without a vote being cast, when it shall be closed, and until that time, and for that purpose only, this meeting be continued. Carried.

The Scrutineers reported the following gentlemen duly elected to act as Directors for the ensuing year, viz., C. D. Warren, Hon. J. R. Stratton, C. Kloepfer (Guelph), W. J. Sheppard (Waubaushene), C. S. Wilcox (Hamilton), E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., H. S. Strathy.

The meeting then adjourned.

At a subsequent meeting of the newly-elected Directors, Mr. C. D. Warren was re-elected President, and Hon. J. R. Stratton, Vice-President, by a unanimous vote.

BIG BOOM IN TRADE WITH U.S.

LAST YEAR CANADA'S BUSINESS WITH STATES INCREASED BY SEVERAL MILLIONS.

Her Third Best Customer—Canada Buys Nearly as Much as Germany —Doesn't Sell so Much.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 28.—In view of the announcement of the reciprocity negotiations yesterday, it is interesting to note that according to statistics issued this afternoon the United States export trade with Canada during the Calendar year just ended amounted to $241,869,253. The trade for 1909 was $187,729,362.

The United States imports from Canada for 1910 were $103,256,955 as compared with $87,310,381 for 1909.

Only two countries, England and Germany, are better customers of the United States than is Canada, and it was only in December last by heavy purchases of raw cotton that Germany pulled up and passed the Dominion. Great Britain leads with an export trade of $550,960,000.

In import business, however, five countries beat Canada. They were Cuba, Brazil, France, Germany, and the United Kingdom.

GAS KILLED MAN HIS WIFE SAVED

Mr. and Mrs. Sanson Overcome by Fumes From Stove in a Single-Room House.

Toronto, Jan. 27.—Coal gas was responsible for the death yesterday of William Sanson, living in Rapina, just off Lakeview avenue, in Bracondale, and nearly resulted in the suffocation of his wife as well. The young couple were the only members of the family, and occupied a little single-roomed cottage.

Sanson was formerly employed as a laborer at the Toronto Carpet works, but for the past two weeks had been out of employment. They had been asisted lately over their financial troubles by neighbors, and when it was noticed late that the blinds of the small house were still down, people became alarmed and attempted to arouse the occupants. The gas was found to be so stifling that the men were barely able to force their way in to attempt a rescue. The room was filled with gas from a small cook stove whose dampers had not been turned back. Sanson was found to be quite dead and his wife was wholly unconscious. Dr. C. A. Warren, of 1351 Bathurst street was summoned. Mrs. Sanson has since recovered consciousness and it is expected that she will live. Coroner Gilmour of West Toronto stated that there would be no necessity for an inquest.

The unfortunate man and his wife came from the Old Country in May. They were each 37 years of age.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER FOR THE FARMING SECTIONS

HON. ADAM BECK,

Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

HON. ADAM BECK PROMISES CHEAP LIGHT AND POWER TO THE FARMER.

A Start is Being Made in the Tilsonburg District—Fertilization by Electricity a Great Success.

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—Speaking before the Canadian Club here to-day Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, said: "The people of the Province of Ontario that it was essentially a project of it manifested by the city council of Toronto in the early stages of the Hydro-Electric cheap power movement."

POWER FOR FARMERS.

Mr. Beck outlined a project which will make hydro-electric power available to Ontario Farmers for farming purposes. The possibilities of the employment of electricity on the farm were marvellous in view of the results obtained from experimental work in the agricultural districts of Germany and the United States.

Fertilization by electricity, where tried, has improved wheat by 45 per cent., and strawberries as high as 128 per cent. The farmer may run his cream separator and pump his water by the power; plowing, threshing, irrigating, all may be performed through the same means and with the salvation of a great deal of hard labor.

FARMERS TO BENEFIT.

The farmer will thus be as much a beneficiary of cheap power as the folk of cities and towns. The first distribution to a rural community is to be made near Tilsonburg, and the commission will carry a low power wire through the district, serving the farms by means of cross wires. It is the intention to demonstrate the possibilities of electricity in farm work at the Guelph Provincial Agricultural Farm, where various farming implements will be operated by this power.

Mr. Beck gave a masterly review of the whole situation, pointing out tario are indebted to the public spirthe people and by the people, and the present success was due entirely to the confidence and support which the public had given to the commission. Mr. Beck is in Ottawa at the invitation of Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Conservative Commission and complimented that gentleman on the value of the advice which the commission was able to give. He answered the criticism that the Hydro-Electric Commission should have been composed of men not affiliated with the Government by saying that owing to the immense responsibility involved in view of the large expenditure that it was necessary for the party in power to assume that responsibility in the legislature.

FAIR DEALING.

He paid a tribute to the fair dealing of the Ontario Power Company, and declared that the saving to the Province in the cost of heat and light would be sufficient to compensate for the expenditure on the distribution system if a horse-power was never transmitted. He felt that the time would come when by reason of water power development in Ontario there would be smokeless cities and towns, in contrast with the "smoking chimneys" promised under the national policy of 1878.

An Awful Outcome of a Holiday Joke

TWO WOMEN DRESSED AS BRIGANDS SHOT BY RELATIVE WHOM THEY VISITED.

Rome, Jan. 28.—The terrible outcome of a holiday joke is reported from the wilds of Sicily.

Two young women who had taken part in some holiday festivities had ended up at a masked ball. Anna Ripili and her neice, Antonina Polza a girl of sixteen, thought it would be a grand joke to visit a relative, Luigi Savarino, steward on the big estate near Parinico, dressed as Sicilian brigands. Their disguise was too effective, for when they approached Savarino's house, he mistook them for the real article, ran indoors, came out on the balcony, with gun in hand, called out "Who's that?"

The two women did not reply, but pointed their harmless, unloaded weapons straight at the frightened steward.

Savarino then fired two shots, One killed the younger woman and the other seriously injured her aunt. On discovering his mistake Savarino took to his heels. He is still hiding

Defies Her Mother to Marry an Indian

Chicago, Jan. 30—After a hurried trip half across a continent to persuade her daughter to give up her Indian sweetheart, a mother's tears and pleadings were successful, and a week ago Mrs. Minnie Kirchberg Sullivan, 820 Crescent place, returned from Sheridan, Wyo., bringing with her Madeline, her 18-year-old daughter, who was engaged to marry Plenty Hawk, wealthiest Indian on the Crow reservation in Montana.

RETURNS TO RESERVATION.

After one day of rest in Chicago Madeline's love for her red man overcame her resolution to give him up, and, in spite of the tears of her mother, she boarded the first fast train for the reservation, declaring no power on earth could stop her from becoming the Indian's wife.

A telegram from the mother to Chief of Police Harry Rice, in Sheridan, sufficed to delay the wedding bells for a day, but Miss Madeline's fighting spirit forced the chief of police to release her. She is now hurrying across the border into Montana, where to-day she will become Mrs. Plenty Hawk, unless a final appeal to the Crow agency may bring about a further delay.

MOTHER ALMOST RECONCILED.

At her home last night Mrs. Sullivan, the girl's mother, declared she was almost reconciled to the thought that her daughter was to become a squaw.

"Of course, I tried to stop it," she said, "but Madeline is of age, and ever since she was 10 years old she has always been an out-of-door child and has always declared she would never marry anyone but an Indian.

"Five months ago she went west to visit a prominent ranch family in Sheridan, and there she became acquainted with this Indian. He is a big handsome fellow, six feet tall and broad shouldered. His squaw is dead and he has no children. He is 30 years old and his ranch in the basin of the Big Horn Mountains, at Littlehorn, Mont., is the largest on the reservation.

FALLS MADLY IN LOVE.

"Several times Madeline was hunting and horseback riding with him, and she fell madly in love with him. She loves the kind of a life he leads, and there is no way to stop the wedding."

Miss Sullivan always has had an allowance of $1,000 a year, and has been allowed to indulge her passion for outdoor life. However, she has found time to become a proficient musician and has studied for the stage. Two years ago she was a pupil in the Lake View High School.

Turks Make An Attack Upon American Consul

Constantinople, Jan. 28.—J. Ridgley Carter of the American embassy, with the rank of minister plenipotentiary, to-day lodged a protest with the Porte against the assault and indignities to which the American consular representatives at Smyrna and Alexandretta were recently subjected.

It appears that a sergeant instigated a mutiny among fifty Turkish soldiers, who were being transported on the S.S. New Jersey. When that vessel reached Alexandretta she was flying the American flag, and the United States consular agent, John T Peristiany went on board to investigate. There he was set upon by the soldiers and driven from the ship. During the attack his hand was cut and his coat torn off.

The local police arrested some of the soldiers, but the captain of the New Jersey refused to surrender the sergeant, the ringleader. The vessel proceeded subsequently to Smyrna, where there was a second row over the question of whether the soldiers or the sailors of the New Jersey were primarily at fault. When the vessel docked its second mate was arrested. At this stage of the quarrel the American consul-general, Ernest L. Harris, took a hand, with the result that he was roundly abused by the warring factions.

BLACK SNOW FALLS IN ALPS.

Strange Phenomenon When Fifteen Inches of "The Beautiful" Gives Country Depressing Aspect.

Geneva, Jan. 28.—A strange phenomenon recently occurred in Emmenthal Valley and the surrounding mountains when "black" snow fell to a depth of fifteen inches, giving the whole country, which was white with snow before, a funeral and most depressing aspect over a large area.

The first few inches of snow was of greyish color, as if mixed with ashes but the grey became darker and darker in hue, until now it is almost black.

Such a phenomenon has been witnessed in the Alps in former years after volcanic eruptions in different parts of the world, and on this occasion Swiss scientists are of the opinion that the black snow is due to ashes blown over the sea and Alps after the recent eruptions at Mount Etna.

The cold in the Alps on the Swiss-Italian frontier is intense, the thermometer registering 32 degrees below zero centigrade on the Simpion. In a hut between the Simpion and Domodossala three persons have been found frozen to death.

James Gorham is Saved from Gallows

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—At the eleventh hour James Gorham, the Peterboro youth under sentence to be hanged this morning for the murder of his mother last summer, escaped the gallows. Yesterday afternoon his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Gorham, while shooting at a policeman who was endeavoring to arrest him, missed his mark and killed his mother. The verdict of murder was coupled with a strong recommendation by both judge and jury that executive clemency be granted.

Too Many Women For Germany

According to official figures of the census return taken on December 1st the population of Greater Berlin now numbers 3,712,554 inhabitants. The predominating feature of the results of the census is the revealation of the growing preponderance of females over males in Germany. The complete results of the census have not yet been ascertained, but so far as the returns go they show an alarming increase of disproportion between males and females.

The growing majority of females is exercising the minds, not only of the clans and social reformers, in a growgovernment, but also of the politing degree. There is a deep-rooted idea, in Germany, which as, is well known, is shared by the Kaiser and the ruling element, that women's sphere is the home, and that is the destiny of the female to seek a mate and find her happiness in the upbringing of her children.

The increasing preponderance of the female part of the population is forcing Germany further and further away from this ideal, and is making the position more and more difficult for those who still oppose the entrance of women into all sorts of occupations and professions.

THE MORNING TIMES

MONDAY, JANUARY 30, 1911.

THE DOMINION BANK'S EARNINGS LARGE.

The Dominion Bank, whose Annual General Meeting was held at the Head Office on Wednesday, the 25th of January, has just closed a very prosperous and satisfactory year. The net profits for the year, after deducting the usual charges for management and making provision for bad debts, amounted to $650,000, which, with a balance of Profit and Loss of $295,000 carried forward from the previous year, makes a total of almost $1,000,000 available for distribution, or to be exact $955,067 56. Of this amount the shareholders received in four Quarterly Dividends at the rate of 3 per cent. each, or 12 per cent. for the year, $480,000, the sum of $180,000 was written off Bank premises and $305,000 carried forward.

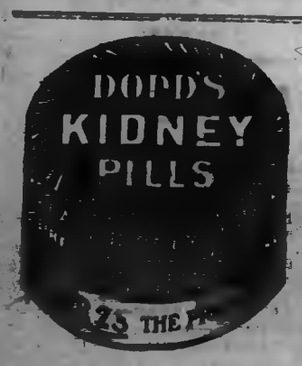
The paid-up Capital of the Bank is $4,000,000 while the Reserve Fund has grown to the large sum of $5,000,000, the Dominion being one of the few Banks in Canada with a larger Reserve Fund than Paid-up Capital, and the deposits by the public of over $49,000,000 evidence much confidence in its position. A glance at its Assets shows it to be particularly strong in specie and Dominion Government Notes. These, with notes and Cheques of other Banks and balances due by Banks, show a total of over $11,000,000. Other quickly available assets, consisting of Provincial Government securities, Railway Bonds and Debentures, loans on call, etc., also show a total of over $11,000,000, making over $22,000,000 of quickly available assets. This sum out of the total assets of $62,677,000 shows the Bank to be in a particularly strong position.

There are Bills Discounted and other current advances of $37,920,000, showing that the Bank is doing its full share in catering to the business needs of the country. The total assets amount to $62,677,000, indicating that the Bank is one of the largest of our financial Institutions and that it is in a prosperous condition is shown by the fact that its earnings are so large that it pays an annual dividend of 12 per cent.

IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

We all know that a century ago men and women were hanged for theft, but to know a thing is not always to realize it fully. The Ottawa Civilian reprints a report, published in an Edinburgh newspaper of April, 1819, of the execution of a post-office clerk for stealing money from mail bags. Every precaution, it is stated, was taken to prevent the recurrence of "the disgraceful scene so lately witnessed in Edinburgh." There was a strong body of police, and arrangements were made for calling out the soldiers if necessary. We are left to guess at the cause of the "disgraceful scene," and from the context it looks as if it were a protest against human murder under the form of law; for it is said that on this occasion "no feeling seemed to actuate the multitude assembled but that of silent compassion for the unfortunate sufferer."

The article is written in a grave and humane style. The impression it produces on the mind is one of amazement at the complaisance with which persons of education and refinement regarded the prodigal destruction of human life. It must have been acquiesced in not only by statesmen, judges and lawyers, but by scholars, literary men, men of rank, wealth and leisure—all those whom we call the products of a high state of civilization. It is a terrible reproach to the literature of the eighteenth and early nineteenth century that it contains few or no protests against this hideous crime against humanity. The wise, the mighty, the noble, are shamed by the Edinburgh mob, whose Christian, humane feelings had to be curbed by a guard of police and soldiers.



THE RED YEAR

—By—

of it. His faithful attendant was almost as worn with fatigue as he himself; master and man shared the comfort of the roomy vehicle, and slept for many hours while it rumbled along the road.

At dawn on the 4th of July they entered Allahabad. But the driver had his orders and did not stop in the city. They [illegible] through a sullen bazaar and [illegible] gazed at by a mob that were in respect of a cauteful of tigers. It [illegible] has just been informed by [illegible] of red-hot irons. [illegible] Malcolm's [illegible]

[illegible] Monday! Ho [illegible] of the old days! How full [illegible] of the men they were to [illegible]

He leaned out and smiled as he saw a stalwart private of the 52d that was his friend. His uniform acted as a passport, the dak gharry crossed the drawbridge and crept through a narrow tunnel, and he found himself standing in the great inner parade ground of the fort. A young officer approached.

"Do you wish to see the general? Whom shall I report?" he asked, eyeing the worn appearance and torn and blood-stained uniforms of Englishman and native.

"I am here from Lucknow," said Frank. "Will you kindly tell General Havelock that Captain Malcolm of the 3rd Cavalry has brought him a message from Sir Henry Lawrence?"

It was the first time he had described himself by his new rank. It sent a pleasant tingle through his veins and made that injured arm of his ache again. Lawrence had given him to the 4th, and here he was in Allahabad on the very date of his Chief's reckoning, after having gone through adventures that would have satiated Ulysses.

But the pardonable pride of a young and gallant soldier soon yielded an inexplicable sensation of humility when he was brought before a small, slender, erect man, gray-haired, eagle faced, with strangely bright and piercing eyes, and a mouth habitually set in a thin, straight line. This was Sir Henry Havelock, and Frank felt instantly that he was in the presence of one who lived in a world apart from his fellows. And, in truth, Havelock would have been better understood by Cromwell's Ironsides than by his own generation. He was outside the ordinary run of mankind. Though aware of a natural timidity, he fought with and conquered it until his soldiers refused to believe that Havelock knew what fear was. Conscious of his own military genius he had borne without comment or complaint a constant supersession of inferiors, and in an age when levity of thought and manners among officers was often looked upon as the hall-mark of distinguished social position, he lost no opportunity of giving his men religious instruction while every act of his life was governed by a stern sense of duty.

Such was the man who listened to Malcolm's account of the proceedings which led to the disastrous battle of Chinhut.

"You say you rode straight from the field on the evening of the 30th," said he, when Frank had delivered his message of Lucknow's plight. "How did you travel, and in what state did you find the country you traversed?"

Then Frank told him all that had taken place. More than once the young officer would have cut short the recital, but this Havelock would not permit. His son was present, that younger Havelock who lived for forty years to keep ever in the public memory a glorious name, and often the father would turn towards him and punctuate Malcolm's tale with a nod, or a brief, "Do you hear that, Harry?"

At last the stirring chronicle was ended.

"Do you wish to remain here and recuperate, or will you join my staff, with the rank of Major?" asked Havelock.

Malcolm was hardly able to stammer his acceptance of the appointment thus offered, but the General had no time for useless talk.

"About this servant of yours—he seems to have the making of a soldier in him—will he care to retain the rank he has assumed so creditably?" he went on.

Frank rather lost his breath at this suggestion, but he had the presence of mind to refer the decision to Chumru himself.

"Kubbi Nahin, general sahib," was the mohammedan's emphatic disclaimer of the honor proposed to be conferred on him. "I am a good bearer, huzoor, but I should prove a very bad rissaldar. I am not of a fighting caste. I am a man of peace."

"I think you are mistaken," said Havelock, quietly, "but by all means continue to serve your master. I am sure he is worthy of your devotion. And now, Major Malcolm, if you will report yourself to General Neill, he will provide you with quarters and plenty of work."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Men Who Wore Skirts

That was what the rebels called the 78th,—"the men who wore skirts."

Now, Highland regiments had fought in India for many a year before the Mutiny, and the kilt was no new thing to native eyes. The phrase, therefore, is significant. It crystallises the legend that went round—that an army of savage English was marching from Allahabad, and that its most ferocious corps was dressed in skirts, the men having sworn never to assume male clothing until they had avenged their murdered women-folk.

There could be no better proof that the sepoys and their helpers were well aware that they had outraged all the laws of war and humanity by their excesses, and there was a farther reason why the garb of old Gaul was more dreaded throughout India than other British uniforms during the autumn and cold weather of 1857. Not many Europeans knew it until long afterwards, but the natives knew, and told the story with bated breath, and one British officer knew, for he was with the Seaforth Highlanders in Cawnpore when they took dire vengeance for the Well.

It is a matter of history how Havelock marched his little army of twelve hundred men along the Grand Trunk

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

Anglo-German War is Seen on Horizon

DR. EMIL G. HIRSCH FINDS A STUMBLING BLOCK TO THE MARCH OF WORLD PEACE MOVE.

Says We Are Ridiculed—Teutons Delight in Calling Americans Nation Dominated by Women.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Germany and England are the stumbling blocks to world peace, according to the opinion of Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, who spoke yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Chicago Peace Society. He discussed "The Present Situation in Europe and the Peace Outlook in General."

"The yellow newspapers in both of these countries keep up a constant jingo agitation," said Dr. Hirsch.

"When an English newspaper comes forth with some new bugaboo as an excuse for war, the German papers fly in to spasms of reflected excitement and quote all that the English papers have said and add a little on their own account.

CALLS PEACE WOMAN'S MOVE.

"International peace advocates are ridiculed by every newspaper in the German Empire. They say that peace talk comes from America where the women hold the balance of power. Only the other day a German newspaper of national influence came out with a sarcastic editorial denouncing the part women are taking in the advancement of world peace and saying, 'God forbid that Germany should ever become a nation of women.'

"But Germany is more influenced by the women than she realizes. Their whole social world is in the social side of the army. Every man sooner or later must serve in the army.

"To be among the elite one must have on one's visiting card that he is or has been an officer of the reserves guard. Unless a man can carry such a title his chances with the lady of his choice are slim.

"The fair ladies of Germany are quite absolute in their demands on the candidates for their hands. Such a man as I however, could never get such a title, and it is for the same reason that I cannot belong to the University Club here—though I may have a string of a half a dozen university degrees—because I am a Jew.

ANGLO-GERMAN WAR SEEN.

"There is an awakening on now in the German army. Her farcical theatrical performances with the Emperor riding at the head in the manoevers of the annual tournaments have come to an end. Germany will not be the first to draw the sword, but she is constantly of the opinion that sooner or later there must be a clash with England.

"England is of the same opinion about Germany, and for that reason neither country is eager to go far in the problems of international peace. Germany also imagines that France is just ready to swoop down upon her at the very first opportunity."

FRENCH WAR DOGS TAME.

"In France there is not much war sentiment since the Dreyfus trial. I saw an actor in a vaudeville sketch come out on the stage in the uniform of a sergeant of the French army. He was howled off the stage simply because he had on the uniform. Only the nationalist party there is in favor of armament, and the nationalists are in the minority."

Queen Victoria to Leave Alfonso?

Jan. 27.—Grown tired at last of the openness of King Alfonso's neglect of her and of the attentions that he is showering on favorite demimondes of Paris, Queen Victoria decided to return to her home in England for an indefinite stay. From confidential sources, the United Press learns that the Queen's forthcoming visit will virtually amount to a royal separation, as she has declared that she cannot longer tolerate the insults of the King, whose treatment of her is now an open book throughout Spain.

SENSIBLE HORSES

The Almost Human Intelligence Which is Developed in Them by Van Work

A curious illustration of the sense displayed by horses was given in London during the hearing of a claim by Henry Thorpe, an ex-soldier, and a porter, employed by the Post Office, against James Allen, to recover $250 damages for personal injuries. It appeared that the defendant's van was backed against a platform at Mount Pleasant, and the plaintiff proceeded to unload it. Before he had finished the doors of the van next to him were slammed, causing the defendant's horse to start off, and the plaintiff was flung to the ground, injuring his shoulder. A witness said the horses engaged in this kind of work had so much sense—almost human, in fact—that no warning was necessary to say the van was unloaded, and it could start off. Directly the doors were shut and the bolt put up the horses would start away just as if they had been told to do so, and it was a rare thing for them to make a mistake. It was contended that the defendant was not liable for damage done by a startled horse that bolted. The jury awarded plaintiff $75 damages and costs.

ROMANTIC RUSSIAN TRAGEDY

A young lieutenant of the Yalta garrison (Russia) became engaged some months ago to a very pretty and accomplished girl, the adopted daughter of a Crimean family in affluent circumstances. The marriage was to have taken place in the Yalta military chapel. Almost at the last moment it was discovered that the bride was a foundling when adopted by her foster-parents, and further search showed that she was the half-sister on her mother's side of the bridegroom. The lieutenant shot himself when he learned the news, and the unfortunate girl, who knew nothing of her real parentage, has lost her reason.

WILL GO 100 YEARS

Burton Jeweler Makes Clock Which Only Needs Winding Once in a Century

A clock which is said to go far towards solving the problem of "perpetual motion," was exhibited at the Burton-on-Trent Flower Show. The maker, a local watch and clock maker named Bentley, claimed originally that the mechanism would go, without winding or other intereference, for fifty years, but now he says that it can be trusted to run uninterruptedly for a century. An important feature is an electric current obtained by means of two wires inserted in the earth and connected with the clock. Mr. Bentley is no novice in this direction. He already holds a gold medal, and has in his possession a clock which was started ten years ago, and has never since been wound. A feature of the flower show was the bridging of the Trent at its widest part, nearly sixty yards across, by the Burton Territorials, who employed eight pairs of eight barrels, pontoon fashion, for the crowds to pass over.

OUTWITTED BY A BEAR

Dr. White Sends an Interesting Story From Wabigoon

Dr. White, of Wabigoon, Ont., writing to his home, expresses the wish that his father had been with him during the present spring, "to help him carry rotten eggs, vegetables, muskrats and pork to a bear." It appears, says Rod and Gun, as though he has on hand a job for all summer in keeping the animal fed.

Noting the bear's tracks, the Doctor took two barrels, made rope snares, which he placed over their mouths, and fixed a big lifting pole to the barrels. The bear put them off just as fast as he could set them up. The doctor and his wife came to the conclusion that the bear must take the bait out with his paw and never put his head in the barrel.

When visiting the trap on one occasion the Doctor and his wife saw a moose standing by the river. The moose allowed them to approach within thirty yards when he walked slowly into the water, crossed to the other side and went into the bush, still with the same deliberate action.

On reaching the trap the snares were found as usual. They were replaced and rebaited and on the following day as the bow of the canoe poked up the shore Mrs. White exclaimed "Got him!" The bear merely remarked "Woof, woof!" which must have meant in this particular instance "Not yet!" for he jumped into the thicket before the Doctor could work his big revolver. On examining the place they found that the bear had been merely having a meal.

Refixing the snares and making a drop with about five hundred pounds on top they started home, one hundred yards down stream. This time they approached within twenty yards of the moose and then stopped, waiting for about ten minutes while the animal took a drink and began to feed, when he wandered back out of sight. On the next day the rifle was taken along, not for the moose of course, but for the bear. Once more the snare was off, and refixed with the noose made very small so that it would certainly catch him. On starting to float down home there was a crackle, and a careful scrutiny discovered Teddy in the brush, not twenty yards off. The doctor snatched up the rifle and fired quickly, fearing that the bear would jump away at once "but, say, he is tough—I can't kill him!"

The deadfall was down again next day, but there were a few hairs on it, looking as though the bear had allowed it to rest on his back till he had finished eating and then carelessly walked away. Once again it was refixed, with a load two hundred pounds heavier this time and a row of sharp stake placed in front. Next day there was quite a pinch of hair but that was all. A further two hundred pounds were added, more stakes were fixed, and all preparations for trapping him made once more. The Doctor made so sure of his bear this time that he was up at four o'clock in the morning and with gun, camera and skinning knife, went for his skin. When the Doctor and his wife arrived at the deadfall they stood looking at the debris without saying anything! The bait was eaten, the barrel broken up, and the heavy weights thrown about! Before they had recovered from their surprise a crunching noise was heard in the thicket—not forty yards away.

The Doctor crept carefully in, but the brush was too thick for him to see clearly. Within twenty yards of the animal the bear slipped by him and he went on to see what he was eating, finding a big log just torn open for ants.

The deadfall was rebuilt and a weight of one thousand pounds placed upon it.

The Doctor adds: If that weight doesn't kill him I think I shall feed him for the rest of the summer and not punish him so much. The last drop must have hurt him a little, for there was a lot of hair and some blood on the logs. Evidently he was caught too far back, and having good use of his front feet, was able to extricate himself.

The trout fishing is good, but I have been too busy feeding Teddy in my spare time to go out and get any.

The Council decided to interview the Dominion Government on the 15th day of February, with a view to certain bridge matters in which this county is interested.

The report of the County Property Committee was read and adopted.

A special grant of $50 was made to Chandos to be expended on the swing bridge.

The Horticultural Society was granted $100.00 to build steps and a walk down the centre of the park.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE SYSTEM NOT SATISFACTORY.

County Pupils Have to Pay Too Much.

It has been generally felt by the county people that they are called upon to pay too much to educate their offspring and that some easier system should be used. The people of Peterborough are maintaining the Institute, the county ratepayers do not have to pay any taxes towards it they have to pay heavy fees. The Collegiate Institute is an approved school with a capable staff of teachers and the county people should get easier access to it. In Victoria county some of the councillors are agitating making it a county institution and giving everyone a chance. This proposition might be considered in Peterborough County.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION DATE.

Many Municipalities Want it Changed to February.

Most municipal elections take place the latter part of December. There is no doubt that the holiday season detracts from the interest which would otherwise be taken. Some municipalities are trying to have the date of election changed to the latter part of February. This is a movement which every municipality in the Province should join.

Messrs. W. Gibson Cassels and A. H. Campbell were appointed scrutineers.

The secretary read the report of the Directors to the Shareholders, and submitted the Annual Statement of the affairs of the Bank, which is as follows:

To the Shareholders:

The Directors beg to present the following Statement of the result of the business of the Bank for the year ending 31st December, 1910:—

Balance of Profit and Loss Account, 31st December, 1909		$295,766.98
Profit for the year ending 31st December, 1910, after deducting charges of management, etc., and making provision for bad and doubtful debts		659,300.58
Making a total of		$955,067.56
Which has been disposed of as follows:
Dividend 3 per cent., paid 1st April, 1910	$120,000.00
Dividend 3 per cent., paid 2nd July, 1910	120,000.00
Dividend 3 per cent., paid 1st October, 1910	120,000.00
Dividend 3 per cent., payable 3rd January, 1911	120,000.00
	480,000.00
	$475,067.56
Written off Bank Premises	170,000.00
Balance of Profit and Loss carried forward	$305,067.56

Your Directors, in submitting the Annual Statement of the affairs of the Bank as on the 31st December, 1910, with the result of the year's business, beg to report that there has been a general substantial growth in every direction. A considerable increase in the net profits will be noted, owing to the satisfactory conditions which have prevailed throughout Canada and the steady demand for banking accommodation from all districts where we are established.

For some time past the Board has had under serious consideration the necessity for the enlargement of our Head Office premises, which have become quite inadequate to meet the present needs of the Bank, without having regard to the ordinary expansion of our business which may be expected in the future. Endeavors were made to secure adjoining lots, but without success. In 1910 an opportunity arose for the acquisition of the land and buildings at the northeast corner of King and Yonge-streets—61 feet on King street by 112 feet on Yonge street — and after due deliberation the purchase was completed. It is not the purpose to hold both properties any longer than is necessary, and when a policy for building is decided on, your Directors have every reason to believe that our present premises can be disposed of for an amount which will practically offset the recent outlay.

In addition, suitable buildings were erected last year for Edmonton, Moose Jaw, and Notre Dame avenue, Winnipeg branches.

These various disbursements have caused a considerable increase in Bank Premises Account, but, following the usual policy, a substantial amount has been written off.

A lot was purchased at Saskatoon, and it is proposed to erect a building at this point and at Calgary during the current year. With the completion of these buildings your Directors are of the opinion that no further immediate expenditures for our Western Branches will be necessary.

It is the intention to erect offices this year in Toronto: At the corner of Dovercourt Road and Bloor street, corner of Lee-avenue and Queen street, corner of St. Clair avenue and Vaughan road, and the corner of Sherbourne and Bloor streets, where we are already established in temporary premises.

A Branch of the Bank was opened in February last at the corner of St. Lawrence boulevard and Prince Arthur street, Montreal.

The offices opened in 1909 are making satisfactory progress, and already justify their establishment.

In accordance with the By-law passed by the Shareholders at our Annual Meeting in January last, the par value of the shares of the Bank was on September the 1st changed from $50 to $100.

The Directors, following their usual custom, have examined and verified the General Balance Sheet of the Bank as on the 31st of December, 1910, and have checked and found to be correct the cash assets, securities, and investments shown therein. They have, in addition, given careful scrutiny to all borrowing accounts.

E. B. OSLER,
President.

The Report was adopted.

The thanks of the Shareholders were tendered to the President, Vice-President and Directors, for their services during the year, and to the General Manager and other Officers of the Bank for the efficient performance of their respective duties.

The following gentlemen were duly elected Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. A. W. Austin, W. R. Brock, James Carruthers, R. J. Christie, J. C. Eaton, J. J. Foy, K.C., M.L.A., W. D. Matthews, A. M. Nanton, and E. B. Osler, M.P.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Mr. E. B. Osler, M.P., was elected President, and Mr. W. D. Matthews, Vice-President, for the ensuing term.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 500 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr, Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

VOL XXXIV NO. 25 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, TUESDAY JANUARY 31, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

Ottawa Society to Welcome the Prince

WILL INCREASE ECLAT OF SOCIAL FUNCTIONS AT CANADIAN CAPITAL.

House Will Approve—Felicitous Reference May be Expected to Appointment in House of Commons.

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—Ottawa is greatly interested in the cabled announcement respecting the coming of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught to Canada. For some months, following the first report in the matter, there have been conflicting statements and consequently there is now general pleasure over the definite decision.

A Prince of the Royal blood at Government House is regarded as tending to do much in strengthening the imperial tie throughout the country and His Grace will be assured of a hearty and patriotic welcome.

SOCIETY IS EXPECTING MUCH.

In the more local sense the coming of the Duke and Duchess will be an event of importance for Ottawa. It will immediately increase the eclat of its social functions and mark the commencement of a line of brilliant assemblages to which society is already looking forward with keen anticipation.

While the Duke will bring his own staff for the most part, it is understood that Mr. Arthur F. Sladen, who has been private secretary to Lord Minto and Lord Grey will be continued in his present capacity.

APPROVED OF THE HOUSE.

Around Parliament to-day there were many expressions of opinion warmly approving the coming of His Royal Highness as being in the Imperial interest of Canada. The appointment will likely be referred to in a felicitous way in the Commons

EATEN BY HOGS.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 30.—James Calder, aged 60, a farmer living twelve miles from Leamington, was literally eaten alive by hogs some time last Thursday. Several hours later, what remained of his body was found in the pen where the pigs were confined. Calder was subject to fainting spells, and it is thought he was overtaken while feeding the pigs, and falling into the trough, lay helpless while the animals devoured him.

PRES. TAFT IS GIVEN A RAP

New York State Senators Say He Exceeded His Authority on Reciprocity.

Albany, N.Y., Jan. 30.—Canadian reciprocity and Taft were given a rap by Senator Heyburn. In a brief speech he assailed the agreement as an attack upon protection and criticized the president for exceeding his authority in entering into it. His criticism of the President was supported by Senator Bailey, who also spoke.

Negro on Trial for Murder.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 31.—James Nunn, a negro will be placed on trial in the criminal court to-day for the alleged murder of Marvin White. The killing of White occurred on December 29 last, and was the result of a quarrel.

300 WERE DROWNED BY A HUGE TIDAL WAVE NEAR MANILA

FIVE SMALL VILLAGES WERE DESTROYED ALONG WEST SHORE OF LAKE TAAL.

Is Manila in Danger?—Showers of Stones Followed Eruption of Volcano—Natives in Terror.

Manila, Jan. 30.—An American school teacher, who has laboriously traversed the west shore of Lake Taal, telegraphs that five small villages were destroyed by the tidal wave, and that no fewer than 300 persons have been killed in that vicinity.

Many were burned by fires started by the molten masses.

A constabulary relief detachment reports that twelve persons were drowned and one killed by lightning at Talisay, and that three persons were drowned at Lemery.

The first despatches stated that twelve natives were drowned.

All of the towns within a radius of twenty miles were more or less damaged by the shower of mud and stones.

The eruptions continued to-day. The sky was cloudless, and there was no wind, but the muddy rain fell steadily. The natives have abandoned their village homes in the vicinity of Lake Taal and sought refuge in the surrounding hills.

MANILA IN DANGER.

The Observatory authorities believe that Manila is in no danger, but their is some alarm among natives.

Investigators of the Bureau of Science report that with the first violent eruption of Taal on Saturday the volcanic island appeared to sink five feet and the waters of the lake rising swept the shores a mile inland carrying away the bamboo shacks and catching a score of natives. Others living in the vicinity had taken warning and fled at the first rumblings of the volcano. The towns of Taal, Lemery, and Talisay seem to have suffered most.

WILL BE FOUGHT OUT IN CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 30.—The impending battle over the ratification of the reciprocity treaty will be fought out in Congress on sectional, rather than party lines. This is clearly indicated in the attitude of Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, a leader in the insurgent camp, who has come out strongly in favor of the endorsement of the treaty.

Senator Beveridge's declaration indicated that the party, and even factional lines, will go to smash when the treaty comes before Congress for ratification.

Arrayed against Beveridge are the insurgent chieftains, Cummings, of Iowa, and Lafollette, of Wisconsin, both of whom object to any of the provisions of the treaty. And so it goes all along the line.

Some of the insurgents in the house have flatly repudiated the proposed treaty, while insurgents of other delegations have endorsed it.

King George's Uncle to be Governor-General

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, the only surviving son of Queen Victoria, brother of "Edward the Peacemaker," and uncle of his Majesty King George will in September next become Governor-General of Canada in succession to Earl Grey. Official notification to that effect has been received by the Government.

The appointment of his Royal Highness is for two years, but it may at the end of that time be further extended. The Duke and Duchess with their suite will take up their residence at Rideau Hall next fall. Meanwhile some improvements are contemplated for that somewhat unimpressive building to make it more in keeping with a royal residence.

KING EDWARD'S DESIRE.

It has been feared that owing to the need of his Royal Highness' presence in England as next in rank to the King in respect of official state functions, pending the minority of the Prince of Wales, he could hardly be spared to Canada at present.

Carrie Nation Dying in a Sanitarium

Suffered a Nervous Collapse a Fortnight Ago—Is Sinking Rapidly.

Eureka Springs, Ark., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, who became known throughout the country several years ago by reason of her fondness for smashing saloons, is reported to be sinking rapidly to-day, and her death is said to be imminent

Juniors Defeated Cobourg 7 to 5

In a game that was in doubt from start to finish the local Grillers defeated Cobourg, winning the district.

It was featured by individual rushes combinations and wonderful backchecking.

Holibeck received the first penalty, and the Pets showed in a goal, but were called back for being off side. After ten minutes hard playing by both sides, Freeman scored for Cobourg. Himman took the usual count and when he got back Gliddon scored for Cobourg. Peterborough was making things hot for Peachy all the time, but could not get past him. Freeman and Coughlin went off together, and after a nice combination rush, Hall missed at the mouth of the net. Gliddon made an nice rush and scored for Cobourg in 6 minutes.

Mathews at last found a place near Peachy and scored the first for the Grillers in 1 minute.

Cobourg 3. Pets 1

Gliddon secured the rubber at the face-off and on a neat hit scored for Cobourg in a half minute. Miles served a penalty and on a nice combination from Hall to Coughlin the latter scored in 8 minute. This ended the score in this half.

Cobourg 4. Pets 2

—Second Half—

Miles finished his time in the box and Coughlin scored in 45 seconds. Peterborough was now getting a little the better of the play, checking back like demons. In 2 minutes Coughlin scored from a face-off, and in 3 minutes more Hall found the net. Gliddon went off for tripping and when he came back he scored—time 2 minutes.

Coughlin and Holibeck each received a penalty, the latter for the dirtiest trick of the night. When they got minutes Hall scored again on a neat back Freeman took a rest and in 5 Coughlin went to the box again and when he got back Freeman and Hall each took a rest. Both sides were now working like trojans, but the Pets had the best of the play always checking back and stopping any Cobourg rushes. In ten minutes the last goal of the night was scored by Coughlin. McMartin went off a minute before time and with fine rush the game ended.

Mathews was always working and his checking back was the feature of the night, Coughlin and Hall played fast hockey and were working from the drop of the hat.

Cobourg kept changing their men around, but it did not take much effect. Gliddon was very fast and also Freeman, but were nearly always stopped by the checks.

McCurdy, The Canadian Aviator, Broke All Records for Water Flights

PLUCKY AVIATOR WAS PICKED UP BY U.S. WARSHIPS WHEN IN SIGHT OF SUCCESS.

Oil Ran Out and Machine Got Hot—Broke All Records for Flights Over Water—Immense Crowd on Hand.

Havana, Jan. 30.—McCurdy and his biplane were taken on board the torpedo destroyer Paulding, neither the worse for their mishap. The pontoons kept the airship afloat. The destroyer squadron, the Paulding leading, with McCurdy and his aeroplane on board, have entered the harbor. The crowd though disappointed tumultously applauded the plucky aviator.

Havana, Jan. 30.—One of the most spectacular flights in an aeroplane ever assayed by an aviator failed of complete success this afternoon by less than ten miles, when J. A. D. McCurdy was forced to land in the water ten miles from the entrance of Havana harbor because his supply of lubricating oil had become exhausted.

Starting from the aviation field on the outskirts of Key West at 7.32 this morning, the daring young Canadian flyer held his course direct for this city.

Just when success seemed his, he saw his engine was running hot, due to the fact that his supply of lubricants was exhausted and he was forced to descend on the surface of the water when within sight of his covered goal and almost within sound of the cheering multitude that had gathered to greet him. It was a bitter disappointment to McCurdy, who had waited at Key West for aweek for favorable weather to assay his self-imposed task.

IMMENSE CROWD ON HAND.

News that McCurdy was finally to attempt the overwater flight was cabled from Key West early in the day and the residents of the city at once prepared for a holiday. Numerous establishments shut down to give their employees an opportunity to greet the aviator.

The sun shone brightly dispersing the early morning haze and housetops and other points of vantage were jammed with enthusiastic men, women and children, all anxious to witness the finish of the most ambitious "Point to point" feat ever attempted by an aeroplanist. Even the Government offices were closed for the morning, and the occupants hurried to Morro Castle where they took positions that would give them a good view of McCurdy as he entered the bay and flew over the city toward Camp Columbia, where a landing place had been arranged.

SAW TORPEDOES TURN.

There was a long wearisome wait, and there were several false alarms, until the signal finally given by the observatory stationed on the lookout wall of the castle that he had finally "picked up" the smoke of the Patilla of torpedo boats and destroyers that were acting as attendants to the air craft. The boats were headed direct for the harbor entrance, and everyone tried hard to catch a glimpse of the bird like machine hovering above the decks of the speedy craft.

A few minutes after the torpedo boats were sighted they were seen to stop and then turn back on their original course. This was the first word that the aviator was in trouble and the disappointment of the spectators was acute.

WAS NOT EVEN SPLASHED.

McCurdy made his descent about half way between the Terry and the Paulding. His drop was witnessed by those on board both ships. Both vessels were alongside him in five minutes. To the amazement of all he was sitting calmly in his regular position in his machine. He was not wet, and was absolutely unhurt. McCurdy himself was unable to explain why he was not, at least splashed with water.

LLOYD-GEORGE LOSING HIS VOICE?

London, Jan. 30.—The Liberal party to-day is in danger of losing one of its greatest assets, the oratorical gifts of Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd-George. The Chancellor is suffering from a severe throat ailment, which it is feared will end his public speaking career, in which he has showed greater ability than any other Liberal politician. That the Chancellor's condition is more serious than the public has realized is shown by to-day's announcement that he would not return from the Riviera until a week after Parliament opens.

Lloyd-George sought the milder climate of the Riviera in the hope of benefitting his throat, but he has found but little relief. His presence in London at the opening of Parliament to-morrow is deemed most necessary, but his physicians have warned him that to return at this time would permanently impair his throat.

TO GET AFTER IDLE HUSBANDS, THOSE WHO DO NOT SUPPORT FAMILIES

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 30.—"Everybody works but father" will be sadly out of tune in Chicago after to-morrow, when the new Court of Domestic Relations will open for business. The new tribunal is designed to deal especially with men who sit at home all day while their wives take in washing to support the family. Husbands who abandon or fail to support their families will be given particular attention. The new court also will have charge of all cases concerning abduction of children under twelve years of age, contributing by parents to delinquency of children, child labor, compulsory education, card playing in saloons by minors, conduct of minors in dance halls, selling liquor or tobacco to children, and cruelty to children.

King George Takes Action for Libel

London, Jan. 30.—King George will take action for libel against Edward F. Mylius who is said to be connected with the paper, The Liberator, in Paris. The action is to put a stop to the malignant rumors that His Majesty was once morganatically married to the daughter of an admiral at Malta, and The Liberator was one paper that published the story.

Instead of coming up at the Central Criminal Court, where it would ordinarily come, the King has asked that the Lord Chief Justice, with a special jury, consider it in the High Court on Wednesday next. Mylius will have filed a plea for justification and seek to subpoena the King, but the law provides that the King can not give evidence in his own courts.

FRUIT MEN MAKE A BIG PROTEST

DEPUTATION OF A THOUSAND MEN WILL GO DOWN TO OTTAWA.

Pass Strong Resolution—Another General Meeting to Be Held Next Saturday to Denounce New Tariffs.

St. Catharines, Jan. 30.—At a meeting of fruit-growers of Niagara Peninsula, largely attended, on Saturday, it was decided to organize a deputation of a thousand men to go to Ottawa at their personal expense to petition the Government for a reconsideration of fruit tariff. Liberals and Conservatives alike are joining in the movement.

A strong memorial was adopted.

It was then decided to hold meetings at the following places during the coming week:—Niagara, St. David's, Beamsville, Grimsby, Jordan, Bartonville, Clarkson, Burlington and Oakville. Mr. Adams agreed to organize the Essex district, and Mr. Smith to secure the co-operation of the British Columbia growers. A final general meeting was decided upon to be held in this city next Saturday.

FARMERS MEET IN REGINA, SASK.

Regina, Sask., Jan. 31.—Hundreds of progressive farmers, with their wives and children, arrived in Regina to take part in the convention of the Agricultural Society and affiliated bodies, one of the principle events of the year in Western Canada agricultural circles. Every section of the Dominion has been drawn upon this year for experts to address the convention on the various branches of the agricultural industry. The dairy industry, alfalfa growing, winter wheat, soil physics, good roads, poultry raising, cattle feeding, flax production, and the growing of fodder, corn and potatoes, all are on the programme for discussion. The Canadian Seed Growers' association, the Saskatchewan Dairymen's association and the provincial women's clubs will hold meetings during the week.

Guaranty Oil Company

A Proposition That Appeals to the Investor.

We call the attention of the investing public to the advertisement of the above company, to be found in to-day's issue, of which Mr. A. J. Johnston is the agent for this department.

The company has a splendid oil in splendidly officered and we believe has a bright and prosperous future before it. A limited amount of stock is offered for sale at 40c per share, the par value being $1.00 per share.

THIS DATE IN HISTORY.

January 31.

1788—Charles Stewart, the Young Pretender, died. Born in 1720.

MONEY IN OIL IS NOW ASSURED

Los Angeles Midway Oil Company a Probable Bonanza.

We again direct the attention of investors to the advertisement elsewhere in to-day's issue of the Clover Company. That the company has a great future before it, is now practically assured. That it has a good territory is proven by the a great in buying and leases, as well as the development work that is being done.

The American Midway has just bought 80 acres in section four, two miles East of the Los Angeles Midway property, and a British syndicate has just bought 80 acres in the same section.

The June Oil Co. adjoining the LOS ANGELES MIDWAY property on the southeast has a well down 1,700 feet, and the rex Midway on the same quarter section has a well down 1100 feet.

The gas in this region is of commercial value also and the Standard has one well reserved on Sec. 26 near the LOS ANGELES MIDWAY OIL COMPANIES property and another on section 22, four miles east of the LOS ANGELES MIDWAY property.

In this connection we take the following from the Examiner, of Los Angeles, California:

The action of the general naval board of which Admiral Dewey is the chief, in recommending that the new monster battleships be equipped with oil burning furnaces, will not only revolutionize naval operations, but it will bring scores of millions of dollars to California every year.

There can be no doubt of the fact that in the not distant future all of the warships of Uncle Sam's navy, in fact, all the warships of all the navies in the world—will use crude oil as fuel instead of coal.

Not only the navies of the world, but the merchant marine of the world will discard their coal bunkers for oil tanks.

And not only that, but the day is not far distant when most of the railroads of the United States will use oil for fuel, as well as most of the great manufacturing plants.

The importance to California of this certain new development in the use of oil for fuel by the navies, merchant ships, railroads and industries of the world cannot be overestimated.

Already California leads all the States of the Union in the production of crude oil. The California oil field is only in the infancy of its development. The California oil is more adaptable for fuel than that of any other field, and it is produced practically at tidewater.

Not only will the ships of the United States come to the Pacific Coast for California oil, but the ships of England, Germany and France, of all the world, in fact.

When the day comes that the steam ships of all the nations of the world use oil for fuel California oil companies will establish vast storage reservoirs along the highways of commerce—on the docks at London, Cherbourg, Marseilles and Hamburg, at Suez, at Aden, Bombay, Sydney and Auckland, at Singapore, Manila, Hongkong and Yokohama.

Fleets of tank steamers will depart daily from California ports destined for all parts of the world. Commerce will be stimulated a hundredfold.

Already California oil adds more than $30,000,000 annually to the productive wealth of the State. Those figures will be doubled and trebled as the use of oil for fuel increases.

Full information can be obtained from R. J. Johnston, 141 Hunter-street, Peterborough, or from the Los Angeles Midway Oil Co., I. W. Hellman Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

THE TORONTO SAVINGS AND LOAN COMPANY.

Elsewhere will be found the report of the annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., which took place at the head office of the Company, Peterborough, on Friday, 27th. inst. The result of the year's operations showed a net profit of $128,047.41. To this amount has been added $36,429.30, the balance carried forward from last year, which makes a total sum for distribution of $164,477.71. This amount has been disposed of by the payment of quarterly dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, amounting to $80,000, and by the addition of the reserve fund of $40,000. The balance $44,477.71 was carried to profit and loss account. The above addition to the reserve fund increased the sum to $720,000, making it now 72 per cent. of the present paid up capital of $1,000,000. The directors are to be congratulated on the above showing, indicating as it does, most careful handling of the Company's funds.

PORTUGAL IN BAD WAY.

When Portugal became a republic it was pointed out that the movement was not of popular strength, but was due to the efforts of energetic and ambitious men to take advantage of the feebleness of the monarchy. The country had been robbed to an extent that is almost unbelievable in modern times, by the nobility and the hatred of the populace for the fact was visited finally upon the king who was innocent himself and might have ended the attack if he had not been socially something closely akin to a fool.

The remarkable unwisdom of his manner of amusing himself in a country that above all needed careful management, sane government, the expulsion of those who were battening on the revenues while education, highways, railways, agriculture, trade, everything that is of importance to the welfare and comfort of the people, were neglected, was enough to justify almost any effort to overthrow the government.

The men who came to power when Manuel left Lisbon have employed an honorable man as a mask for their activities. He is learned but inexperienced; he is honest but simple, and behind his back trouble is rising, owing to the rapacity and incapacity of the new powers in control of the country, until those who travel in Portugal, those who are closely in touch with affairs are of one mind in predicting another collapse at almost any time.

The reactionary influence at work now would be rapid in their movement but for the youth and volatile character of Manuel who is the only legitimate person to be considered for the monarchy, in view of the attitude of the monarchical countries of Europe.

Portugal may in time arrive at such a condition as to sustain the republican form, but there must be an immense improvement in the character of her representatives before there can be much hope. In spite of the assertion that France and England look with sympathy upon the Portuguese republic, the governments of both countries are perfectly aware of the doubtful character of the experiment.

The people are illiterate to a greater extent than is the case with any other country in Europe and that adds to the difficulty of the situation and uncertainty of the problem. The most hopeful element in the case is the fact that the people may work out their own salvation without interference from beyond their borders. No power of Europe will be permitted by the others to interfere and take sides or gain a foothold. Whatever happens it will be at least of Portugal's own doing and not that of any outsider.

Milwaukee 65 Years Old.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 31.—Flags were displayed on Public Buildings to-day in observance of the city's sixty-fifth birthday anniversary. With a population of about 10,000 persons, Milwaukee was incorporated on January 31, 1846. The last census gives her a population of nearly 375,000.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

Road from Allahabad. He led a force of 1,000 British soldiers, drawn from the 64th, 84th, and 78th Foot, and the 1st Madras Fusiliers. Captain Brasyer brought 130 loyal Sikhs to the column; there were six small guns, and eighteen volunteer cavalry.

These details should be appreciated before it is possible to understand the supra-miraculous campaign Havelock conducted. For five days the expedition tramped north in the rain through a land given over to snakes, vultures and carnivorous animals. Renaud and Spurzina had no prisoners. They did not even kill the slightest shadow of opposition falling on any village or solitary tree.

At last, on the 12th of August, the main body overtook Renaud. The Nana's scouts were stopped by a large force of rebels entrenched in a village twelve miles south of Fatehpore. The junction took place at one o'clock in the morning. At daybreak, Havelock and Colonel Tytler, with the eighteen mounted volunteer horse, to reconnoitre the enemy's cavalry, thinking they had only Renaud's tiny detachment to deal with, charged across the plain, to find the whole twelve hundred drawn up to receive them. Struck with a sudden fear, the white-coated troopers reined in their horses. This was the first real check Nana Sahib had received. It was typical of the new order. The flood-tide of mutiny had met its barrier rock. Thenceforth, it ebbed, though it raged madly for a while in the effort to sweep away the obstruction.

Without giving the enemy's cavalry time to recover from their surprise, Havelock threw forward his infantry. Captain Maude, of the Royal Artillery, rushed his six guns to a point blank range, there was a short and sharp fight, and the rebels broke. They were chased through and out of the town of Fattehpore. All their guns and some valuable stores were captured, and, greatest marvel in a day of marvels, not one British soldier had fallen!

No wonder Havelock wrote to his wife: "One of the prayers oft repeated since my school-days has been answered, and I have lived to command in a successful action. . . . But away with vain glory! Thanks be to God who gave me the victory."

That evening Malcolm witnessed the plundering of Fattehpore, which was permitted in retribution for its recent rebellion. The town lay on the main road, which, at this point, was removed from the river by many miles, else he would have ridden to the ghat and sent a message to Hossein Beg in order to make sure of the safety of the friendly ryot.

Owing to his knowledge of the vernacular, he managed to pick up a bit of useful information while questioning a native on this matter. On the battle-field he came across a state elephant which had been shot through the body by one of Maude's nine-pounders. The manner of the beast's death was remarkable—it is not often that an elephant is bowled over by a cannon ball like a rabbit by a bullet from a small calibre rifle—and its trappings betokened that it had carried a person of importance.

Now he learned that Tantia Topi was the rider, and it was thus he discovered that Nana Sahib was directing the operations from Cawnpore, as Tantia Topi was his favorite lieutenant, whereas it was believed previously that the Brahmin usurper would lead his hosts to take part in the siege of Lucknow.

On the 15th a sharp fight gave the British possession of the village of Aong. The position was dearly won, for the gallant Renaud fell there, mortally wounded. The men were about to prepare their breakfast after the battle when news came that the enemy, strongly reinforced from Cawnpore, were preparing to blow up a bridge over the Pandoo Naddee, an unfordable tributary of the Ganges, six miles ahead. Havelock called for a special effort, the troops responded without a murmur, and advanced through dense groves of mango trees until they came under fire. For the second time that day they hurled themselves on the rebels, drove them headlong out of a well-chosen position, and saved the bridge.

Cawnpore was now only twenty-three miles distant. With the fickleness of the rainy season the sky had cleared, and the sun beat down on the British force with a fury that had not been experienced before that year, though the hot weather of 1857 was noted for its exceedingly high temperatures. The elements seemed to have joined with man to try and stop the advance, but neither Indian sun nor Indian sepoy could restrain that terrible host. Dogged and uncomplaining, animated rather by the feelings of the infuriated tigress seeking reprisals for her slain cubs than by the sentiments of soldiers engaged in an ordinary campaign, they pressed on, until sixteen miles of that sun-scorched road were covered.

Then Havelock commanded a halt in a grove of trees, and two level-headed sepoys, deserters from Nana Sahib's army, came and told the British General that the Nana had brought five thousand men out of Cawnpore to do battle for his tottering dynasty. It was in vain. Though he displayed some tactical skill, placed his men well, and did not hesitate to come under fire in person, he was out-generalled by a flank march and sent flying to Bithoor, there to curse his fate, befuddle his wits with brandy, and threaten to drown himself in the Ganges.

But the battle was not won until one of those strange incidents happened that distinguish the Mutiny from all other wars. It must never be forgotten that the sepoys had received their training from British officers. Their words of command, methods of fighting, even their uniforms, were based on European models.

They had regimental bands, too, and the tunes in their repertoire were those in vogue in Britain, for native music does not lend itself to military purposes. The musicians, of course, were profoundly ignorant of the names or significance of the melodies they had been taught to play.

Hence, when Nana Sahib rallied his men in a village, Havelock called on the Highlanders and 64th to take it, and the two regiments entered into a gallant race for the position, while the

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roselyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car. should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

MUSTARD SPREADS; ANNOYS FARMERS

When Weed is Well Established it is Necessary to Spray—Directions for Eradicating it

Wild mustard has become a well-known pest and a great source of annoyance to farmers. Many miles of harvest crop is a great mass of yellow blossoms during the flowering period of this obnoxious weed.

The seed is spread in several ways. Usually, the soil becomes infected with mustard from manure which has been taken from barns where stock have been fed on grain, hay or straw in which there has been a mixture of mustard seed, which, owing to the hard coat on the seed and its oily nature, is hard to digest and passes through the animal with its vitality unimpaired. The weed is sometimes introduced by seed grain, turnip seed or rape seed. Birds also carry the seed from field to field.

When only a few stacks of mustard are scattered through a field of grain, it is a very simple matter to eradicate them. As the plant is an annual, it is only necessary to pull the weed before the seed matures to completely kill the pests. When the weed has become well established in the soil, hand pulling becomes impracticable owing to the magnitude of the labor involved.

When the weed is well established, spraying, as described in the 23rd annual report of the University of Wisconsin becomes necessary. The solution used in spraying is made by dissolving 100 lbs. of iron sulphate in 52 gallons of water, and stirring constantly until the iron sulphate goes into solution. When all the material is in solution the spray is then ready for use. In spraying, any reliable orchard sprayer may be used.

Spraying, to be of any use, must be done just before the plants flower. If spraying is delayed until later, destruction of the weed will not occur.

By experience, it has been found necessary to spray two or three years in succession to completely eradicate the weed. The cost of spraying, however, is a not large one, and the benefit derived from the eradication of the weed repays the expense many, many fold.

TEACHING FARMERS

D. McKee, Guelph, Would Send a First-Class Man Among Them

The best way the Government can improve the agriculture of the country is to show the farmers that it will pay them to rotate their crops, test their seed corn, clean their grain, etc., says Daniel McKee, Guelph Agricultural College, and do all the things that are advised by the agricultural colleges, for, unless the farmer can be persuaded that it will pay him, and pay him well, to use these advanced methods, he naturally will not do so. Just as men are honest because it is the best policy, so farmers, as a rule, do not farm for the sake of farming, but to make money and so keep their families and themselves as comfortable as possible. When a farmer is told that such and such an experiment farm can raise 80 bushels of oats to his 25, he says that it is supported by the government and that it does not matter whether it pays or not. The best way to deal with a farmer is to carry the gospel of better farming to his very door. To do this the Government should pick out the best educated and most up-to-date farmer in a given district—a man who owns his own farm and is making it pay, and pay well.

Having chosen this man the Government should pay him so much a year for helping the farmers in every way he could. He would have to conduct his own farm so that it would be giving him a maximum return for his investment. He would have to mix with the farmers on market days, etc., and give lectures now and again so as to get himself before the farming public of his district. When the farmers discovered that there was a man in exactly the same position as themselves, who was making more money out of his farm than they were, they would naturally want to know how he did it, and they would visit his farm and ask him questions. It would be his business to answer these questions and point out to the farmers wherein his method of farming was superior to theirs and why.

GET RID OF HOG LICE

Not a Serious Job to Rid Pens and Animals of This Pest

Hog men and farmers sometimes have trouble with hog lice, but it is not a serious job to rid the pens and animals of this pest. When pork is as high-priced as it is now, it is folly to lose largely what might be clear profit by neglect. When pork is cheaper, no one can well afford to harbor such destroyers. Lice should be cleaned out of the pens and yards, and kept out. To do this requires frequent attention. They are more likely to appear on fall and winter pigs, for which reason more attention should be given to these. The pig-pens should be thoroughly disinfected, and the pigs dipped two or three times at periods about ten days apart. For dipping purposes, any of the reliably advertised dipping mixtures or coal-tar products may be used. Where no dipping tank is owned, the same end is served by placing the pings in a pen, and thoroughly sprinkling them with the mixture. Small pigs may be effectively dipped in a barrel. Few farms where dipping or its equivalent has not been practised are free from lice, and it would behoove every man who has pigs to winter to see that both the pigs and their quarters are cleaned of lice before the cold sets in.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

A Determined Effort in the Interests of the Cause to be Made During the Coming Session

The Ontario Legislature at its approaching session is threatened with the advent of a determined movement towards women's suffrage. At prorogation last year the Legislative Assembly was startled for the first time in its history by a woman's voice. According to the statements of some of the agitators this was only a curtain-raiser to the campaign which is to be brought on this session. As usual, the ladies pin their faith to Mr Alan Studholme, the East Hamilton labor man, and it is proposed to ask him to introduce a woman's suffrage bill at the beginning of the session. The cause of this measure is to be aided and abetted, according to present plans, by an active distribution of literature and a vigorous personal lobby.

A haunt of rats under the kitchen slopstone was searched, and there, sure enough, were the missing molars intact. They were lying among some scraps which had been collected by the rats.

A MONKEY'S FUNERAL

The Animal Lay in State in the Best Room and Cards Were Printed

Extraordinary grief at the death of her pet monkey is shown by a Cardiff woman, who has made elaborate arrangements for its burial. The body has been enclosed in a handsome coffin, with shining plate, on which is the inscription:—

"In loving memory of my dear Jenny, who died August 21, 1910."

Mourning cards have been printed, the coffin, covered by a shroud, has been placed in the chief room of the house, and the grief-stricken owner is applying to the Corporation for permission to have her pet buried in her mistress's favorite spot near a fountain in Victoria Park. Meanwhile, York Street, Canton, Cardiff, where "Jenny" breathed her last, is in mourning, and her owner, Mrs. Karinago, is only solaced in her bereavement by the sympathy of the neighbors, all the blinds being drawn down in the street. "Jenny" succumbed after a brave struggle to pull through an attack of pneumonia, following upon a chill. She had been one of the household for ten years, being originally brought from some land across the seas by Mr. Karinago, who was a mariner. During her period of illness "Jenny" was attended by four doctors, but all to no purpose. "Jenny" received extraordinary kindness, being regaled with all sorts of delicacies and fruit in abundance. She was rather fastidious in her tastes latterly, showing a marked liking for William pears and Jaffa oranges. Before being taken ill she was allowed the free run of the house, and in the middle room a little step-ladder, a table, and a mirror were provided for her exclusive benefit. Then when she was tired she could rest on the cushioned couch, or, for that matter, go to her own bedroom and lie down on her feather bed. "Jenny" lived a life of ease and comfort, if not of luxury. Dr. J. R. Smith, one of the four medical men attending "Jenny" professionally, said to an interviewer:—

"I had known the monkey for years, but I cannot say that she was endowed with more than ordinary simian intelligence. She was certainly well cared for, and I prescribed for her after having ascertained that she was suffering from bronchial catarrh and consumption. Mrs. Karingo was very anxious to apply hot poultices to "Jenny's" diaphragm, but I pointed out that her thick coat of fur was sufficient protection under the circumstances."

Passers-by in York Street, however, have noticed that "Jenny," although not poulticed, had to wear a thick chest-protector back and front whenever she wanted to sit by the window. "She was very obstreperous against taking ordinary medicine," added the doctor, in a tone of deep concern, "and I had to make it very sweet indeed. However, human aid failed, and 'Jenny' is no more." Since "Jenny" died there has been much excitement in York Street. One afternoon a police constable was called to the street to disperse a crowd of about 300 people who were clamoring to see "Jenny" in her oaken casket. When a correspondent knocked at the house he was answered by a solemn-visaged lady, and admitted, in company with three of the nursing staff from the Treborth Home in Crowbridge Road, who had come to offer their sympathy to the bereaved Mrs. Karinago. The front room is a delightfully furnished apartment, and on the couch, wrapped in a spotless shroud, in an oaken coffin supplied by one of the city's chief funeral furnishers, lay all that remained of poor "Jenny." She bore a peaceful expression, and on her body was laid the loveliest of little wreaths. Referring to her deceased favorite, Mrs. Karinago said:—

"Jenny was a dear creature, so intelligent that she seemed almost human. She understood every word I said to her. A month ago she was taken ill with bronchial catarrh that turned into rapid consumption. A doctor attended her for three weeks. She did not at first like his stethoscope, but she grew accustomed to it, and summitted to treatment. I used to keep her in the bedroom window upstairs, so that she could have the benefit of fresh air. She grew worse, however, and after screeching three times she died on the 21st. It nearly broke my heart. I think that people who like myself, are passionately fond of their pets, should be allowed to bury them in one of the public parks."

The Lord Mayor of Cardiff, in reply to a question put to him, said that no application had been made for permission to bury "Jenny" in Victoria Park. He suggested, however, that the remains should be cremated in their splendid crematorium for dumb animals. As an alternative to cremation, the lady can bury "Jenny" in Victoria Park by merely asking for permission of the parks superintendent.

Death of the Oldest Clergyman in Scotland

The oldest clergyman in Scotland, the Rev. Dr. Frew, died at Stirling in his 98th year. He had celebrated three ministerial jubilees and had seen three generations come and go amongst his flock.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF OUR AIRMEN

Some of the Troubles They Have Overcome—Why the Flying Machines Fly

The question that most naturally occurs to you in considering the aeroplane is—"Why, seeing that it is heavier than air, does it not fall? Why does it stay aloft? It is unmistakably heavier than air, and on the same principle that iron will not swim you would naturally expect that it would refuse to soar. It is the air pressure beneath the plane that keeps it up. A balloon can remain stationary over a given spot in a calm, but an aeroplane must constantly move if it is to remain in the air. The monoplanes and biplanes on which our foremost aviators have been making and breaking so many records of late are somewhat in the same position as a skater on thin ice. The skater must move fast enough to reach a new section of ice before he falls; the aeroplane must move fast enough to reach a new section of air before it falls. Hence the aeroplane is constantly struggling with gravitation.

The simplest and most familiar example of an aeroplane is the kite of our boyhood days. We all remember how we kept it aloft by holding it against the wind or by running with it if there happened to be only a gentle breeze. When the wind died down or the string broke the kite fell. Above all things, it was necessary to hold the kite's surface toward the wind—an end which we sometimes accomplished with a string. The eagle is an animated kite without the string, but it keeps its outstretched wings to the wind by muscular power. If we can find a substitute for the string, some device, in other words, which will enable us to hold the kite in the proper direction, we have invented a flying machine. The pull or the thrust of an engine-driven propeller is the accepted substitute for the string of a kite or the muscles of an eagle. The propeller creates an artificial wind, as it were, to keep the aeroplane up.

Maintaining Balance

Of course, as you will readily understand, there are many other things to be considered besides mere propelling machinery. Of these the first in importance is certainly the very difficult art of balancing the plane so that it will glide on an even keel. As a matter of fact, even birds find it hard to maintain their balance. In the constant endeavor to balance himself a hawk sways from side to side as he soars like an acrobat on a tight rope. Occasionally, as you may have noticed, a bird will catch the wind on the top of his wing, with the result that he will capsize and fall some distance before he can recover himself. If the living aeroplanes of nature find the feat of balancing so difficult, is it any wonder that men have been baffled in endeavoring to discover their secret?

The whole art of maintaining the side-to-side balance of an aeroplane consists in keeping the centre of gravity and the centre of air pressure on the same vertical line. If the two should not at least approximately coincide the aeroplane is capsized.

There are obviously two ways of maintaining side-to-side balance—one by constantly shifting the centre of gravity, the other by constantly shifting the centre of air pressure. The first method involves (sometimes) flashlike movement on the part of the aviator; for by shifting his body he shifts the centre of gravity.

The aeroplane must be balanced not only from side to side, but fore and aft as well. The same necessity exists in the old-fashioned single-surface kite. To give it the necessary fore-and-aft stability we used to adorn it with a long tail of knotted strips of paper or rags. If the tail was not heavy enough the kite dived erratically, and sometimes met its destruction by colliding with a tree. To ensure longitudinal stability many aeroplane flying machines are similarly provided with a tail, which consists generally of one or more plane surfaces. Some aeroplanes are, however, tailless, but usually they are less stable than the tailed variety.

Commencing a Flight

In order to fly an aeroplane, like a kite or a soaring bird, must rise in the very teeth of the wind. What is more, it must be in motion before it can fly. How this preliminary motion was to be obtained was a problem that long baffled the flying machine inventor. Eagles, vultures, and other soaring birds launch themselves either by leaping from the limb of a tree, or the edge of a cliff, or by running along the ground with wings outspread until they have acquired sufficient speed.

To get up preliminary speed many methods have been adopted. One of the earliest was by running the machine down an inclined track. Many aviators, however, mount their aeroplanes on bicycle wheels, and, like the eagle, run along the ground for a short distance. Just as a soaring bird uses his legs in leaping in the air or running on the ground to start his flight, and also in alighting, so most aeroplanes alight with the bicycle wheels that serve them during the brief moments of launching. Sometimes, however, special alighting devices are provided.

The problem of steering an aeroplane when it is launched is solved by two sets of rudders. A steamboat is a vehicle that travels in two directions only, hence it requires only a single vertical rudder, which serves to guide it from side to side. An aeroplane moves not only from side to side, but up and down as well. Hence, it is equipped with a vertical rudder similar to that of a steamboat, and also with a horizontal rudder, which serves to alter its course up or down, and which is becoming more widely known as an elevator. Fore-and-aft stability is attained in tailless machines by manipulation of this elevator. Even in tailed machines its use for that purpose is almost imperative.

THE REASON WHY

Lieutenant-General Sir J. M. Wodehouse once silenced a mess in a very quiet way. A military gentleman was laying down the law as to what ought to have been done throughout the South African Campaign. "Now, take yourself, Wodehouse," he said. "You must admit that I have done better than you did on occasions." "Not the slightest doubt about it, General," replied Sir Joceline. "I am glad to hear you say so," answered the other. "Now, why should I have done better than you, let me ask?" he continued. "Because," replied the Lieutenant-General, very quietly, "I was not there at all." The other then remembered that he had an important appointment.

FOR THE KITCHEN

Useful Recipes for the Preparation of Plain Dishes

How to Boil an Egg.

It seems simple enough, but it is not every person that can make a success of it.

Half fill a saucepan with water and put it on the fire until the water is actually boiling.

Put in about half a teaspoonful of salt, which will prevent the egg from cracking.

Put in the egg and leave it to boil for five minutes. At the end of this time the yolk will be not quite hard.

If you prefer the egg quite soft-boiled, three to four minutes will be sufficient.

Poached Eggs.

Break the egg into a cup cracking the shell on the rim and emptying the contents in carefully, so as to keep the yolk unbroken.

Pour some boiling water into a clean saucepan with a little vinegar (about a teaspoonful to a pint of water).

When this boils again, slip in the egg and keep the cup turned over it for half a minute so that the white may be kept compact.

As soon as the egg is put in, place the pan over a gentle fire, or turn down the gas slightly if you use gas, and keep the water just simmering till the white of the egg is set, when it is ready to be served.

Eggs and Bacon.

Put into a frying-pan enough butter dripping or fat to cover the bottom when melted.

When the pan is hot and the butter steaming, put in the bacon.

Break the eggs separately into a cup, and drop them into the pan, covering them with the cup until the whites are set.

When the eggs and bacon are properly cooked, take them out of the pan and put them on a hot dish or plate.

Scrambled Eggs.

Take eggs according to the quantity required—about three for two persons or two for one person—and break them separately into a cup, to make sure that none are bad.

Turn them out into a saucepan containing about an ounce of butter to every two eggs. Add pepper and salt to taste.

Beat the mixture up with a fork. Hold the pan over the fire until the mixture sets, stirring it all the time.

Turn out of the saucepan on to pieces of toast.

If these have previously been spread with butter the result is most appetizing.

Sardines on Toast.

Fry some narrow strips of bread in dripping, lard, or butter, and put them on a piece of paper to drain.

Mix, in a small pan, one dessertspoonful of vinegar, half a teaspoonful of mustard and half a teaspoonful of butter.

Heat the mixture over the fire, stirring well, and then drop in the yolk of an egg. Add a pinch of salt and a pinch of cayenne pepper.

Put the sardines on the toast, and the sauce over the sardines, and heat the whole dish in the oven.

Ordinary buttered toast may take the place of the fried bread and the sauce may be omitted.

Sausages and Tomatoes.

Place enough butter in the frying-pan to cover the bottom when melted, and put the pan on the stove or fire.

Put in the sausages as soon as the butter is melted, pricking them well with a fork to prevent their bursting.

Turn them at intervals to ensure their being well cooked on both sides.

Steak and Onions.

Get a good thick piece of steak. A thin, wafer-like one contains no nutriment and none of the juices which go to form the gravy.

When the steak is ready—and it needs no further preparation than a beating with a wooden spoon or some such instrument—make the frying-pan and the butter or fat very hot, and put in the steak, together with an onion sliced up and dusted with flour. The flour makes it brown more quickly.

Brown both sides of the steak and then shift the pan to the side of the range or turn down the gas and allow the meat to cook thoroughly.

Another method of cooking a steak, which makes it more tender, is to grill it over a clear fire, either on a gridiron or, failing anything better, on a toasting fork.

To stew steak, put it in a saucepan with a lid, and add an onion cut small, a few thin slices of carrot, a teaspoonful of barley or rice, and a little salt.

Just cover it with water, and simmer or boil slowly for two hours or longer.

How to Cook Potatoes.

Even the boiling of potatoes can be done rightly or wrongly.

Having washed them well, put them in an iron saucepan on the fire with enough cold water to cover them.

When the water begins to boil put in some salt and a cupful of cold water. This stops the boiling for a little and prevents the potato from bursting before it is cooked.

When you find, by means of a fork, that the potatoes are done, pour off the water and set the saucepan, without its lid, on the fire for a few moments.

SCALES ARE TESTED

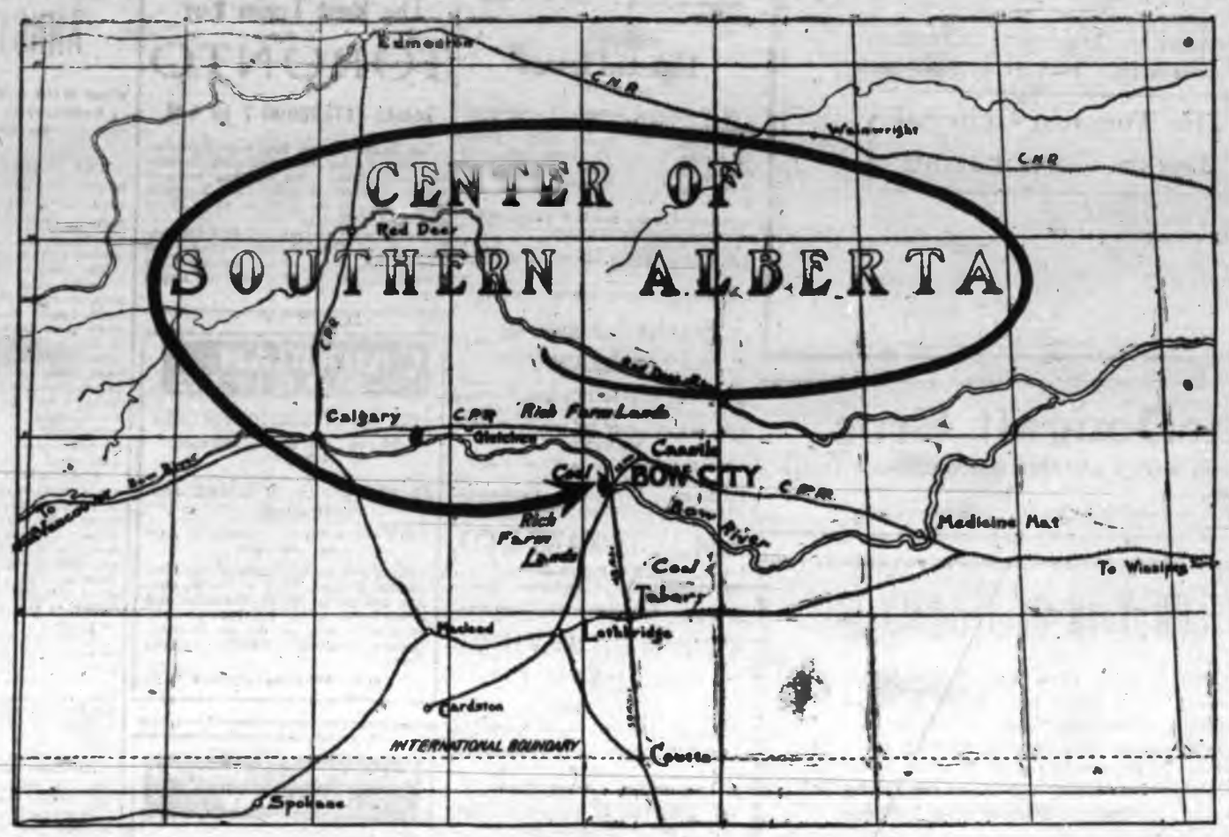
All factory scales, and scales of commerce are tested once a year by the government. If anyone becomes complainer of any scale and wish to have it re-tested, they may do so by paying the expenses incurred by the inspector while performing the work of inspection. In a particular case where many patrons are dissatisfied, the government might send an inspector free of expenses, on petition of the dissatisfied patrons to the Department of Weights and Measures.

THE COST OF LIVING

Likely to be Introduced in the Legislature Again

It is not unlikely that the question of the cost of living will be introduced in the Legislature in some form or other during the coming session. It will be remembered that this subject was referred to in the Speech from the Throne in January, 1910, but subsequently it was held that the question was wholly within the jurisdiction of the Dominion authorities.

"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"



If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Albert has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ago

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your application by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots. On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

BIGGEST COUNTRY HOUSE

Earl Fitzwilliam can boast of owning the biggest country house in England—Wentworth Woodhouse, in Yorkshire. With characteristic audacity, an American once said of this residence: "It is a place so huge that guests find it of advantage to bring with them treble the ordinary number of hats, which are kept at the various entrances, so as to save themselves the trouble of walking about a quarter of a mile from one entrance in order to get the hat which they have left at another." Earl Fitzwilliam's rent-roll amounts to $450,000 a year. He is one of the best all-round sportsmen in the country—master of two packs of hounds, a good polo player, and a splendid shot. He has a taste for mechanics, too, as was shown when, during a harvest rush, he hitched up his best motor-car to a length of belting in a [illegible] and provided an excellent impromptu" threshing machine.

WARNED AGAINST THE STAGE

Mr. [illegible] Irving has written a book in defence of the much-abused Judge Jeffreys, and during a visit to Ipswich on one occasion visited a house in which the judge was said to have resided when holding the assizes in that town. The house had become a stationer's shop, where theatre tickets were disposed of and when young Irving entered the assistant immediately recognised him. The actor-author-criminologist asked for information concerning Jeffreys' visit to Ipswich. "Well, sir," replied the assistant, looking at the beaming ghost of the theatre that was lying on the counter, "I am afraid I don't know the gentleman; but he hasn't booked any seats this week."

A WEALTHY PAUPER

It has been discovered by the Lewisham Board of Guardians that an inmate of the workhouse owns land in South Africa to the value of between $10,000 and $15,000. They have placed the matter in the hands of their solicitor, to see if he can recover the amount they have expended on the supposed pauper in the last five years.

DID FOR FATHER!

An old man and his daughter, a girl of eighteen, had a little booth on a country road, where you threw a ring at a clay pipe, and got a cigar for every "bust."

Chancing to pass that way, an expert cricketer thought he'd try his luck. Soon, he had won thirty cigars.

"Seems rather mean," he pondered, as he was about to depart.

And then, in a burst of generosity, he handed them, with a courtly bow, to the young girl.

"Thanks!" she said smiling prettily. "They'll do for father."

Two days later the cricketer happened to pass the same spot. But now the girl was running the booth alone.

She saw the question in his eyes, and answered it.

"Yes," she said; "they've done for father!"

WANTED, AN OFFICE-BOY

"I can't keep the visitors from coming up," said an office-boy dejectedly to the editor of a popular newspaper. "When I say you're out they don't believe me. They say they must see you."

"Well," said the editor, "just tell them that is what they all say. I must have quiet."

Shortly afterwards there called a lady who wanted to see the editor. The boy assured her that it was impossible.

"But I must see him! I'm his wife!"

"That's what they all say!" replied the lad.

There is a vacancy for another office-boy.

UNDYING CHARM

Norah had lived as parlor maid in an artistic family for six months. It seemed to Miss Aurelia only natural that Norah should have developed some love of art in that time. One day she discovered the little maid, dust-cloth in hand, gazing at Venus of Milo.

"Do you like her best of all, Norah?" asked Miss Aurelia.

"Sure, and I do, miss," said Norah warmly. "She may not look quite so near wid her arrums gone, but she's so easy to dust, I fair love her!"

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr, Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

Grave News of Plague Received from Pekin

(Special to The Times.)

Tokio, Jan. 28.—Grave news is received from Pekin where because of the presence of the plague the legation quarter has been serrated.

Foreigners have thus far escaped the infection.

The pestilence is reported to be spreading rapidly throughout Manchuria.

A fact significant of the seriousness of the situation id that the Chinese authorities have decided to permit the Japanese officials and physicians to assume control of the sanitary measures and to conduct the necessary preventive campaign.

The Japanese officials in south Manchuria have brought medical experts into the stricken districts and are expending much money to check the progress of the epidemic at Darien and Mukden.

They have met with some success at these points, but the epidemic has a terrible hold in Kwan-Cheng-Tse before the Japanese were allowed to take control.

There are reports that the garrison at Tientsin has been infected

Austria Preparing for big Addition to Navy

Vienna, Jan. 28.—An extraordinary credit of $11,000,000 as a first installment toward the construction of new warships, appears in the Austro-Hungarian budget, which was presented to the delegation by Baron Buenian Von Rajecz, minister of finance, to-day.

The navy building programme for the next six years provides for four Dreadnoughts of 20,000 tons each, three cruisers, twelve torpedo boats and six submarines, at a total cost of $62,400,000.

The army estimates for the coming year have been increased by $5,000,000, the total expenditure being placed at $448,000,000.

ANOTHER CASE OF ABDUCTION

Montreal, Jan. 28.—Mr. Yvon Lamontagne, advocate, acting on behalf of Mr. Leduc, of Lachine, had a warrant issued yesterday for the arrest of Manille Godfrey, 38 years of age, a Belgian, residing at Lachine whom he accuses of abducting his daughter Florence Leduc. The girl, who is only 15 years old, has disappeared from her father's house since Jan. 14 and the latter accused Godfrey of being responsible for her disappearance

NEW PAROLE BOARD

Important Reform Undertaken by the Ontario Government in Central Prison Affairs

One of the most important reforms undertaken by the Ontario Government since the session of 1910 was the appointment in November of the Central Prison Parole Board, consisting of Judge Teetzel, Toronto; Mr. T. H. Preston, Brantford; Hamilton Cassels, K.C., Toronto; Colonel Macdonald, Guelph; Daniel Miller, Toronto; Donald McIntyre, K.C., Kingston, and Noel Marshall, Toronto. These men meet at the prison farm once a month, or oftener if need be, and hear the applications of the men for an earlier release than is called for by their sentences. According to former methods all applications were sent to Ottawa, and the magistrate or judge was consulted, and usually a long delay ensued, so that often the sentence had terminated before the case was decided. Moreover there would naturally be on the part of the men a tendency to blame the officials of the prison for this and a feeling of injustice often lurked in the men's minds that was hurtful to the otherwise healthy influence of the new system of reformation. This system, it is hoped, will fit in well with the new policy instituted by Mr. Hanna, whereby guns, cells, armed guards and close quarters have been abandoned for nearly 200 men, and in their place is healthy farm work, with little restraint, inconspicuous clothing devoid of all stripes, and on every hand an incentive provided for the men on coming out to spend the rest of their lives as useful citizens of the community.

LOCAL OPTION

Sixty-Five Licenses Will be Cut Off in Twenty-Five Municipalities on May 1st

The Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance reports that as a result of the recent local option contests sixty-five licenses will be cut off on May 1st in the twenty-five municipalities where a sufficient majority was obtained. In thirty municipalities, in which there are one hundred licenses, by-laws were carried, but not by sufficient majorities to bring the law into force. There was a majority against local option in twenty-five municipalities, having 116 licenses. Of the twenty-six places carrying local option three are incorporated towns, eight incorporated villages, and fifteen are townships.

A feature of the campaign, the report states, was the failure of the liquor interests to make any gain in their efforts to repeal local option. There were 134 municipalities where local option by-laws had been in force for three years or more, and where the people had an opportunity to repeal it. In 131 places the matter was not brought to a vote. In three places appealing by-laws were submitted and in all three places local option was sustained by a decisive majority.

The aggregate vote in all the places voting this year was: For local option, 25,766; against local option, 20,492; majority for, 5,274.

On the last three elections the local option question has, in one form or another, been before the electors in 338 municipalities, and the aggregate voting in all these places has been: For local option, 56,674; against local option, 56,783; majority, 29,091.

In 107 of the above places giving majorities, however, the three-fifths requirement has operated to hinder the measure from coming into force.

LICENSE QUESTION

Some Talk of Legislation Looking to the Grading of Licenses in Towns and Cities

In view of the repeatedly unsuccessful efforts of the temperance forces to secure the abolition of the three-fifths clause it is unlikely that there will be many petitions to that effect presented at the approaching session. Though the longer the local option battle rages the more difficult it is to keep up the former percentage of victories, because of the easiest ground having been weeded out, it looks as if the temperance people have settled down to the effort to sweep the province dry, even with the three-fifths handicap. It is not unlikely that there will be a general revision of the license law this session. It will be remembered that last session there was some discussion in caucus and in corridor looking to the abolition of local license boards and establishing a central board of commissioners for the province. The subject may be revived at the coming session. There is some talk of legislation looking to the grading of license fees for hotels in cities and towns.

ASSESSMENT ACT

Several Merchants Want a Lower Rate on Everything Excepting Land Values

The Assessment Act usually receives not a little attention during the session, various interests bodies, including municipalities, having discovered alleged weaknesses since the last amendments were made, the Assessment Act is therefore practically always a target of attack. One of the requests for amendments this year comes from several business firms and proposes to allow municipalities to tax buildings, improvements, personality, and incomes, at a lower rate than land values. It is urged that as the business tax is based on the value of the premises occupied, it seriously discourages the erection of good buildings and enables them to hold idle valuable sites in which good buildings would otherwise be erected. They contend therefore that the present business assessment should be reduced and a moderate increase made in the tax on the value of all land, whether used or unused.

Mr. Albert Johnston of Manitoba, is in the city renewing old acquaintances.

VOL XXXIV NO. 26 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 1, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

King George's Case Will Come Up Todyay

THE CHARGE OF DEFAMATORY LIBEL AGAINST REPUBLICAN EDITOR BEING PRESSED.

Society to Swarm Court—Fashionable People Will Attend Trial—No Lawyer for Accused.

London, Jan. 31.—Overshadowing the opening of Parliament to-day in the general interest that it has awakened in the case of Edward F. Mylius, charged with defamatory libel against King George, which will be tried before the Lord Chief Justice and a special jury to-morrow.

Mylius has refused every offer of clemency if he would simply retract the published statements in the Liberator that King George, as Duke of York, contracted a morganatic marriage in 1890 with the daughter of Sir Admiral Culme Seymour. Up to date Mylius has not asked for the services of an attorney, indicating that he will conduct his own defence. Unless Mylius has evidence to back up his assertions, the trial will probably be brief. The Crown advocate is prepared to disprove the story of the morganatic marriage, and will present the marriage registers of the islands of Malta and Mediterraman ports, covering all the time of the King's service in the navy when the alleged marriage is said to have taken place. These, it is said, show no record of the marriage.

No official intimation is given as to whether the King will take the stand in his own defence. Friends of the King say that he is desirous of taking the stand and by a sweeping denial silence the old story for all time. It is being urged against such action that it would be setting a bad precedent. Kingly immunity has always been strictly adhered to, and for King George to go upon the stand to deny a "scandalous rumor" would be, in the opinion of the Attorney-General, an unwarranted breach of precedent.

THREE LADIES MENTIONED.

The three daughters of Admirals Tryon, Elliott, and Culme-Seymour has each been mentioned as the morganatic wife of the King, who was the Duke of York at the time of the reported marriage. This, in itself, has generally been considered as good evidence that the story of the marriage was false, but Mylius makes the positive statement that it was Miss Seymour whom the King married.

The trial will be open to the public, and society is already planning for a "field-day."

Gaynor and Greene Are Near Freedom

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 1. — Messrs. Gaynor and Greene, two of the most noted inmates of the big Federal prison here, will be released from that institution within a few days. Under the good-behaviour rule their sentence of four years was cut down to three years and one month, which period will expire next week. The exact day of their leaving the prison has been kept secret, owing to the desire of the prisoners to avoid publicity. They will be met at the prison gates by the members of their families, who have resided in Atlanta the most of the time since Gaynor and Greene began serving their sentences. According to popular belief both prisoners have managed to retain a considerable part of their large fortunes and it is rumored that a long sojourn in Europe will follow their release.

It is doubtful if any case of its kind in the history of the country has attracted more attention than that of John F. Gaynor and Benjamin D. Greene, chiefly because of the long legal battle they waged to escape trial. Their troubles began in December, 1909, when both were indicted by a grand jury in Savannah, of having defrauded the Government in conspiracy with Captain Oberlin M. Carter, of the United States Engineer Corps. It had been demonstrated that Carter for years had conspired with the Atlantic Construction Company, of which Gaynor and Greene were the chief partners, to the end that only his company could bid for the work of river and harbor improvements around Savannah; that Carter drew specifications that only the Atlantic people could meet on time, and that in this and other ways the Government was defrauded of about $2,000,000.

Carter was convicted and sentenced to prison and to pay a fine. Gaynor and Greene, being arrested in New York, began to contest extradition to Georgia. They carried the case finally to the Supreme Court, which decided against them; and on the eve of their being taken to Georgia they fled, leaving their bondsmen to forfeit altogether the sum of $80,000. On May 11, 1902, they turned up at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec. Proceedings for their extradition were at once begun. The Canadian officers, fearing delay, arrested them and took them by boat to Montreal. The prisoners' lawyer tried to stop the rug and serve writs of habeas corpus but they failed.

With the prisoners confined in Montreal there was a repetition of the old struggle between the courts. The Quebec courts wanted the men back there, whereas Extradition Commissioner LaFontaine wished to hear the case against them in Montreal. Finally the Quebec judge scored and they were returned to that city. On Aug. 13, 1902, Judge Caron dismissed all charges against the prisoners, a decision which aroused a storm of protest from the press in both Canada and the United States. The United States Government then appealed to the English privy council, which decided against Gaynor and Greene. The men then applied for a writ of habeas corpus, which was denied.

Following their return to Savannah, Gaynor and Greene, who already had spent over $750,000 in their defence, appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States on a technicality, but they again lost and the judgment against them, which covered a fine of the same amount as the money supposed to have been taken, was affirmed. The legal battle lasted over six years and it was not until the beginning of 1907 that the men were received at the Federal prison in Atlanta to begin serving their sentences.

BRITISH WARSHIPS WILL BRING DUKE

REPRESENTATIVES OF CROWN IN OVERSEAS DOMINIONS TO BE OF ROYAL BLOOD.

King Won't Tour Empire—Appointment of Connaught so Indicates—Grey to Go to Arctic.

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—The official announcement of the coming of the Duke of Connaught as our next Governor-General sets at rest many things. It disposes of the report that Earl Grey was to get another extension of term. It makes it clear that there will be no Empire-girdling trip by the King and Queen, and it makes clear that King George has determined upon following the advice of his revered father, and that we are on the eve of an era in which, so far as family limitations will go, the representatives of the Crown in the great overseas dominions will be princes of the blood royal.

Nothing could be ascertained at Government House this morning as to the plans for the Duke's coming. All that was known was that he will arrive early in September. If the Canadian cruiser Niobe goes over to the coronation review, as it now contemplates, there is a possibility that she may be fitted up so as to afford accommodation for the Duke and Duchess and their suite on the return trip. If this is not possible, there is a likelihood that his Royal Highness will come over on another warship, and that his reception at Quebec will be made the occasion of a great ceremony.

Earl Grey has not yet completed his plans for the summer. He is understood to still contemplate the trip to the Arctic and the Mackenzie River, but the plans are in embryo. One thing, however, is certain, his Excellency will follow the example of his predecessors, and will leave Canada before his successor arrives. It had been hinted that an exception might be made in the case of a Royal Governor-General, but it is understood that this will not be the case.

Both Had Cold Baths.

Martin J. Kirn, had a chilling experience in the Water near Wolfe street wharf yesterday afternoon. The Government dredge, Little Lake, is tied up at this point, having completed dredging operations in the vicinity of the Quaker Oats plant and the crew were making some repairs. Mr. Kirn had occasion to visit the dredge and he slipped off the ice into the cold water, which was about four feet deep. He managed to pull himself out and was driven home. In the afternoon one of the men engaged in cutting ice near the dredge, fell into the water, but by prompt action of the others, was rescued.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE IN FIRST 1911 SESSION

They will Ask for Additional $400 in Their Appropriation Above That of Last Year---Fire Chief Submits His Annual Report

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council met last night. There were present chairman Ald. Morgan, Aldermen Edgar, Metheral, Kerneghan and Anderson.

The Committee will ask for $400 increase in its appropriation over that of last year. The appropriation for 1910 was $12,500, 1911 will need $12,900; this $400 increase is wanted mainly for additional lights.

CHIEF'S REPORT.

Fire Chief Howard submitted his annual report for 1910, which was accepted as satisfactory generally. He gave the total amount of damages from fire during the past year as $18,568, of which $9,958 was to buildings and $8,610 to contents. The report also gave a thousand feet of hose unfit for fire purposes, and the Chief suggested that this be sold to the Board of Works for flushing services, and new hose be procured for the department. The need of a sub fire station was also enlarged upon, and five more alarm boxes asked for.

Chief Howard further contended that $1.37 a day (7 days a week) is not sufficient salary to assure the acquisition and maintenance of good firemen. He asked that the firemen (excepting himself) be allowed an increase of 10c a day. The report also favored arch lamps being removed to the centre of the streets.

The Committee thought the firemen sufficiently well paid. Ald. Metheral offered that the only change he would favor in the present schedule of wages would be a substraction from the high paid men in favor of the rank and file.

The Chief also reported 328 street lights not burning on intermittent nights during the year, at 41 2-3c per lamp.

A big list of supplies needed also accompanied the Chief's report, including $65 for billiard table cloth.

It appears that the Board of Works has been paying half the horse feed bill for the fire hall in consideration of their horses being kept in that building.

Ald. Metheral thought the Board of Works was paying too much for the feed of their team, under this arrangement. However, no definite conclusion was arrived at in this respect.

The Chief's list of supplies needed will probably be somewhat pared.

CONDITION OF FIRE TEAMS.

Ald. Kerneghan offered that the fire teams are not in first class condition, apparently. They do not seem to travel fast enough, or have sufficient wind to keep up the pace for any reasonable distance.

Ald. Metheral contended that in years past the fire teams would go two blocks to the present teams' one.

The Committee generally lined up with Ald. Kerneghan, and an official visit of inspection will be made to the fire hall.

MORE STREET LAMPS.

This year's appropriation provides for 24 additional incandescent lamps (or their equivalent in arc lights) at a cost of $300.

$510 are also allowed for hydrants, including the setting of 18 additional ones.

FIRE PROTECTION AT AUBURN.

Moved by Ald. Metheral, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, that the Mayor be requested to interview the Auburn Power Co. regarding the extension of the water main across the river at their new dam for fire protection purposes at Auburn—Carried.

FIREMEN'S BUTTONS.

The City Clerk has a supply on hand of firemen's old uniform buttons, and any of the brigade minus a button can get one from Mr. Armstrong, free of charge.

FOR REFRESHMENTS.

The Fire Chief's bill of $8 for refreshments for the Midland Oddfellows' and Firemen's Excursionists last summer was laid on the shelf for the present.

In this connection the Chief contends that he was acting under authority from the Reception Committee in furnishing said refreshments. Last year's committee, however, would not endorse the action, and passed the bill along to the Fire, Water and Light Committee, who will look further into the matter at a future meeting.

JUNK NOT YET PAID FOR.

On motion of Ald. Edgar, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, that the City Solicitor will be instructed to write Mr. Geo. Stevens for payment of the $23 worth of fire hose junk he purchased during Ald. Buller's chairmanship.

There are two or three barrels of junk—copper, brass, zinc, etc—at the fire hall now, which Ald. Morgan reported, the Peterboro Hardware Co., is willing to dispose of for the Committee.

A QUESTION OF GRADE.

Chief Howard wrote that Foreman Archie McBride's quitting the service last year was through a misunderstanding, and his subsequent return to duty should justify him in now drawing pay as a second-year man.

Last years committee understood that McBride had been discharged by the Chief, and took the ground that in being re-engaged, his previous time of service should not count so far as the wage schedule is concerned.

Ald. Morgan contended that it would be establishing a bad precedent to allow a re-engaged man—whether he had been discharged or left of his own accord—to enjoy the benefit of the graded scale—such men should start again at the first year rate.

Ald. Kerneghan differed from the chairman. Were a man discharged, the responsibility rested with the Chief. In being re-engaged his time of service should continue in respect to the wage scale.

Ald. Edgar agreed with Ald. Morgan. McBride should be classed as a new man.

Ald. Metheral offered that McBride had been re-engaged by the Chief and promised the second year rate when due as though he had not been absent from the brigade, as the Chief wanted to make good with McBride on the eve of the former's vacation to attend the convention of Fire Chiefs.

The question will be taken up again at the Committee's next meeting.

Roped Off 3,000 People and Vaccinated Them

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—One of the most sweeping quarantines in the history of the city was put in force to-day, following the discovery of small pox in the Tenderloin district. The section was roped off and everyone found within the police boundary was compelled to submit to vaccination.

At four o'clock in the morning 100 physicians, accompanied by large details of policemen, entered the district, which includes Philadelphia's Chinatown, and began vaccinating. It is estimated that 3000 persons submitted to the needles of the doctors.

While Physicians were inside the ropes which enclosed a territory of ten blocks, hundreds of policemen stood on guard and permitted no one to escape.

Raging Flood Causes Millions of Damage

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 31.—Damage estimated at close to $5,000,000 has already been caused by the flood in the Ohio Valley and the water was still rising to-day. The crest is expected to reach 37 feet. Part of the local business section is under water and merchants are moving goods to upper floors.

Railroad traffic is badly hampered, trestles have been swept away and destroyed and large sections of the tracks have also been destroyed.

MRS. SCHENK HAD A CLOSE CALL

Boat Which She Was Rowing Upset in the Ohio River.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 1.—Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, whose trial on the charge of poisoning her millionaire husband recently ended in the disagreement of the jury, to-day had a narrow escape from death in the flood-swollen Ohio river, when a skiff in which she was rowing, upset and threw her into the raging waters.

Mrs. Schenk is staying at the home of a Mrs. Lasch, located on Wheeling island, one of the residence sections of the city, which is entirely cut off to-day by the flood. She was attempting to row to the mainland in a small boat when the flood whirled her craft around and finally capsized it.

Mrs. Schenk had disappeared under the water twice before being rescued in a semi-conscious condition by several men who had witnessed the accident.

Arthur Armstrong Not Badly Injured

Arthur Armstrong, the fast left wing man of the Trenton intermediates, who was thought to have had his shoulder dislocated at Cobourg on Friday night, was not as badly injured as was first thought. He fell heavily on the shoulder, but it was only bruised, and he will be in harness again in the next game. Armstrong, who is a clean player himself, appears to be unlucky, having had his shoulder bone broken last winter.

LYNCHING PARTY

Sam Cooley, For Assaulting Wealthy Planter's Daughter, Was Victim.

Pearl River, La., Jan. 31.—A telephone message received here this morning from Slidell, La., states that Sam Cooley, a negro, charged with criminally assaulting the eight-year-old daughter of Henry Miller, a wealthy planter of this section, has been taken away from a posse of deputy sheriffs and lynched. The child is in a critical condition, and the negro admitted his guilt.

The Indemnity to be Increased to $1,500

Number of Members	106
Present Indemnity	$1,000
Future Indemnity	$1,500
Increase	$53,000

On authority that is dependable it is stated that the Government has decided to increase the indemnity of the members of the Legislature from $1,000 to $1,500. This will mean a payment of $159,000 a year instead of the present sum of $106,000, an increase of $53,000.

Last session several deputations of members waited upon the Government to ask for an increase, but when the member of Kingston, W. F. Nickle, in reply to a challenge in the House, rose and opposed it, nothing more was heard for the balance of the session. It is possible that provision will be made for this sum in the supplementary estimates that Hon. Col. Matheson may bring down this afternoon.

The indemnity at Ottawa is $2,500.

It is not expected that the Opposition will divide the House when the necessary sum is laid before them in Committee of Supply.

Taft's Difficulties Seem Insurmountable

New York, Jan. 31.—According to the Herald to-day, the executive committee of the New York Mercantile Exchange, whose members handle most of the agricultural produce in this city, has voted its endorsement of the Canadian reciprocity agreement, and it is expected that the exchange will ratify this action by a formal vote of its members at their next meeting.

"The reciprocity agreement will tend to minimize fluctuations in the produce market, particularly in such staples as butter and eggs. Its adoption will be followed by some reductions in price on this side of the border, and probably by a slight increase in Canada. The new scale of prices will be fair enough for the farmer, and will offer a much-needed relief to the consumer.

"It will be found that practically all the commission merchants are in favor of reciprocity with Canada. The duty on Canadian farm products especially butter and eggs, which might be brought into this country, is practically prohibitive, as it was the intention of the framers of the law that it should be. Only at rare intervals when the price of American butter has gone up has it been possible to bring Canadian butter into the United States, and even then the risk was great and the profit small.

"There is a demand here which the American farmer cannot meet. The United States has 92,000,000 inhabitants and Canada about 8,000,000. There is no reason why that productive country to the north should not furnish supplies for feeding the people of the United States out of its surplus.

"The condition o Canada to our food supply territory should not hurt the farmer. There is room for all and the stimulus of competition will help both countries."

SCORES SOCIALIST RULE.

Milwaukee Alderman Criticizes Increase in Expenditure.

Milwaukee, Feb. 1.—"While the city administration is busying itself trying to explain the increase in the burden of taxes it may not be amiss to call attention to some of its alleged accomplishments," said Alderman Frederick C. Bogk, chairman of the special harbor committee, in an open letter to the people.

"The combined city pay rolls have been increased $118,593.70 during the first six months of the present administration. No wonder that the city since last October has borrowed from banks $1,130,000."

COMPARISON BETWEEN PETERBORO' AND BROCKVILLE FOR WATER SERVICE

PETERBOROUGH PAID NEARLY $9000 FOR MUNICIPAL PURPOSES LAST YEAR.

Brockville Paid $5000 According to Information Furnished the Fire, Water and Light Committee Last Night.

At a late meeting of the Committee of the whole of Peterborough's City Council during a reference to our water works department, and the cost to the city of its water service, Brockville was held up as a model city regarding the conduction of its civic affairs, special stress being laid upon the big saving effected by that corporation in the operation of its own water works system. The City Clerk was instructed to write Brockville for information as to its service and the cost thereof to the corporation, and at last night's meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, advices from Brockville showed that that city pays its water department $5000 a year for fire and all other municipal purposes against Peterborough's payment last year to our water department of nearly $9000 for like service.

FATHER AND SON WERE KILLED

In a Pitched Battle With Posse When Fleeing From Arrest.

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 31.—Surrounded by a posse after a 30-mile chase, Robert Howe and his son were killed in a pitched battle of several hours' duration early to-day near Sierra Blanca, about 100 miles southwest of here. A second son, Guy Howe, 27 years old, was wounded and captured yesterday afternoon, when the posse first overtook the Howes.

The eldest Howe shot and killed Customs Officer Thomas L. O'Connor yesterday morning, at Fort Hancock, about 75 miles east of here, when O'Connor attempted to arrest him for the killing of I. K. McClure, a special agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad at Belen, N.M. Justice of the Peace Hemley, of Fort Hancock, was also shot when Howe made his escape with his sons.

PERISHED ON GOODWIN SANDS.

Vessel and Her Crew Were Lost In The Teeth of a Gale.

Dover, Eng., Jan. 31.—An unknown sailing vessel went ashore on Goodwin Sands to-day and all her crew perished in a terrific gale which swept the English channel and the Strait of Dover.

Subsequently three bodies were washed ashore. The vessel went ashore near Walmer.

Five-Year Sentence For Robbing Grave

"Doc" McSorley of Jarvis Severely Sentenced for Stealing Body From Cemetery.

Cayuga, Ont., Jan. 31.—Five years in the Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence meted out to "Doc" McSorley for showing indignity for the remains of the late Matthew Johnston of Jarvis by robbing his grave and shipping his body to Montreal in a barrel labeled "turkeys."

Judge Douglas spoke strongly, stating that the crime was a fiendish one. The name of McSorley was a good one in the community, and it was regretable that the prisoner should so disgrace his family. Crime must be put down and society protected, and he therefore imposed the above sentence.

McSorley, when asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, stated that he had nothing to say.

MISER'S DEATH STILL A MYSTERY

Wellesley, Jan. 31.—The township hall was crowded to suffocation by villagers and farmers from the surrounding country at the Lobinski murder inquest last night, and there was considerable disappointment at the futile result of the investigation. It was decided to make another adjournment until February 15.

Philip and Martin Nowak were recalled. They stated that they spent Wednesday night, January 11, at the home of their brother-in-law, Mr. Sobisch, a few miles noth of Waterloo, where they played cards and retired at 1 o'clock a.m. They had not visited or seen Lobinski for nearly nine weeks previous to the murder. Their story was corroborated by their father and mother, sister and another brother.

Herman Deitrich, proprietor of the Bamberg Hotel informed the jury that there never was any deal on to sell his hotel to Nowak brothers, as it was reported that Lobinski had told his neighbor, Rudy Leis.

Brodus and Edward Deitrich, who accompanied the Nowak brothers to Lobinski's house, nine weeks before the murder, said they were confident the Nowak boys had not been near Lobinski's since.

Dr. McEachren, one of the physicians who conducted the post mortem was re-called and expressed the opinion that the murdered man died as a result of hamorrhage caused by the heavy blows on the head.

John Honsberger, a neighbor of the murdered man, said he was awakened at 2 o'clock on Thursday morning by furious driving and looking out of the window saw two men in a cutter, driving either a horse or a team as fast as they could go toward Erbsville. There were no bells.

John Ruming, another neighbor, swore he met two men wearing heavy fur coats, driving toward Lobinski's house late on Wednesday night. He could not tell the exact hour. Their faces were hidden by big collars.

How to cure a cold is a question in which many are interested just now. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has won its great reputation and immense sale by its remarkable cure of colds. It can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1911.

SICKNESS AND INVALIDITY INSURANCE.

After universal age pensions, what? In England the answer of the liberal party is, apparently, "universal and compulsory insurance against sickness and invalidity." Lloyd George has studied this reform for months and has just published an outline of the proposals he is to present to parliament.

The scheme is meant for all workinging persons whose incomes are below $800 a year. The minimum amount of insurance provided for is $1.25 a week as long as sickness or invalidity lasts. The scheme covers the years between 16 and 70, for after the age of 70 there is no need of such insurance, the pension system taking care of the beneficiaries. The cost of the insurance, which may be very heavy, is to be met one-half by the workers and the other half in equal proportions by the employers and the state treasury. The workers' contributions must be deducted from wages and paid over by the employers.

It is proposed to enlist the aid and co-operation of the trustworthy friendly and fraternal societies, of which there are many in Great Britain. There is to be control of accounts, bookkeeping and, presumably, investments of the capital, and a central board composed of officials, employers, employes and representatives of the friendly orders will deal with questions of detail or problems of a personal nature.

Many difficult questions are raised by this great scheme, but it is remarkable that no opposition is offered to the principle involved. The tories will vote for it along with the moderate liberals, as they wish to prove their devotion to economic and social reform. A few "old-fashioned" individualists regret and criticise the scheme, but they have few votes in parliament. Germany has been England's model in insurance, but Lloyd-George is bettering Germany's instructions as to thoroughness.

THE FLUSHING FORTRESS.

The government of Holland announces that it will not proceed at once to fortify Flushing. One gains an idea of how sensitive European nations are in their relations to each other when he contrasts the storm that has been raised abroad over the proposal that Flushing be fortified, and be made a sort of Gibraltar of the North.

Such a fortress would command the Scheldt. It would enable its holder to cut off the trade of Antwerp, which is one of the most extensive of any port in the world. It would enable Germany, through its virtual control of Holland, to be in a position of immense power and influence on the Eorth Sea and have a fortress easily acquired in case of need, from which it could menace that sea with its vast commercial interests and be firmly braced against France on one side and England on the other.

It is said, therefore, that there is much displeasure in Germany over the decision of Holland to postpone work at least for the present, any steps toward realizing what Germany would like to have Holland do for the sake of ultimate German interest. No one can blame the Kaiser for his ambition that was.

Everyone understands that at the first opportunity, whether in the midst of European war or otherwise, Germany will make the effort to absorb Holland since Holland controls the main gateways of entrance and exit in Northern and Western Europe. England went into the Napoleonic wars in order to prevent the closing of the Scheldt by Napoleon and spent four billions in that enterprise.

Elections in November.

A. E. Donavan, M.P.P., Brockville, still thinks that the proper time for municipal elections is the latter part of November or early in December. He will introduce a bill into the legislature to that effect during the present session.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

Highland pipers struck up an inspiriting pibroch. Not to be outdone, a sepoy band responded with "The Campbells are Coming!"

And this, of all airs, to the Mackenzies! It was chance, of course, but it added gall to the venom of the foe.

This fourth and greatest victory was a costly one to the British, but it left their ardor undiminished, their resolve courage intensified. Of the men who flung themselves against the rear of the Nana's army that still tried to bar the way into the city, some rumors had reached the men of the dreadful tragedy enacted on the 15th. They refused to credit them. Such fiendishness would murder helpless women and children in cold blood, the crime would hinder the rescue of their rescuers. So they pushed, tore, beat a path through the suburbs, until the leading company of Highlanders reached the Bibikarh, the House of the Woman.

Malcolm was with them, and he saw a sergeant enter the blood-stained dwelling. While the men lined up in front of the Well in an awed silence, the sergeant returned. His brick-red face had paled to an ashen tint. In his hand he carried the long, thick strands of a woman's hair, strands that had been hacked off some unhappy Englishwoman's head by Nana Sahib's butchers.

He removed his bonnet with the solemnity of a man who is in the presence of God and death. Passing down the ranks he gave a lock of the hair to each soldier.

"One life for every hair before the sun sets," he said quietly. And that was all, but there are old men yet alive in Cawnpore who remember how the Highlanders raged through the streets that evening like the wrath of Heaven.

General Neill, who came later and assumed the role of magistrate, showed neither pity nor mercy. Every man who fell into his hands, and who was connected in the slightest degree with the infamy of the Well, was hanged on a gallows erected in the compound, but not until he had cleaned with his tongue the allotted square of blood-stained cement that formed the floor of the house.

Cawnpore, on the 17th, was indeed a city of dreadful night. The fierce exultation of successful warefare was gone. The streets were empty save for prowling dogs, pigs, and venturesome wild beasts. No sound was heard in the British encampment except the melancholy plaint of the pipes mourning for the dead, during the interment of those who had fallen. Even the unconquerable Havelock said to his son, as they and the officers of the staff sat at dinner:

"If the worst comes to the worst we can but die with our swords in our hands."

Next morning his splendid vitality reasserted itself. He advanced towards Bithoor and took up a strong position in case Nana Sahib might attempt to recover the city. But that arch-fiend had been deserted by the majority of his followers, and he was babbling of suicide to his fellow Brahmins.

Meanwhile Neill brought a few more troops from Allahabad, and Havelock threw the greater portion of his army across the Ganges. Owing to the difficulty of obtaining boats and skilled boatment, this was a slow and dangerous undertaking. It took five days to ferry nine hundred men to the Oudh side, but Lawrence had said that the Residency could only hold out fourteen days, and come what might, the effort must be made to relieve him.

On the 26th while Malcolm was occupied with some details of transport, Chumru came o him. The bearer was no longer "All Khan," the swashbuckler, but a white-robed domestic, though no change of attire could rob him of the truculent aspect that was the gift of nature.

Beside Chumru stood another Mohammedan, an elderly man, who straightened himself under the sahib's eye and brought up his right hand in a smart military salute.

"Huzoor," said Chumru, "this is Ungud, Kumpani-ginain (a pensioner of the Company), and he would have speech with the Presence."

"Speak, then, and quickly, for I have occupation," said Malcolm. But he listened carefully enough to Ungud's words, for the man coolly proposed to work his way to Lucknow and carry any message to Lawrence that the General-sahib entrusted to him.

It was a desperate thing to suggest. The absence of native spies from either Cawnpore or Lucknow proved that the rebels killed, and probably tortured all who attempted to run the gauntlet of their investing lines. Yet Ungud was firm in his offer, so Malcolm brought him to Havelock and the general at once wrote and gave him a letter to Lawrence, the news of the great Commissioner's death not having reached the relieving force.

Frank seized the opportunity to write a few lines to Winifred. He was charged with the care of Ungud as far as the nearest river ghat, and he scribbled the following as he rode thither:

British Field Force,
Cawnpore, July 20th, 1857.

My Dearest Winifred:

If this note is safely delivered, you will know that Sir Henry Havelock, at the head of a strong force, is on his way to relieve Lucknow. I am with him, as major on the staff.

I reached Allahabad on the 4th, thanks wholly to your loving thought in sending Chumru after me, for I was a prisoner in the hands of a fanatical moulvie when Chumru came to my assistance. He saved my life there, and his quick-witted devotion was shown in many other instances during a most exciting journey. My thoughts are always with you, dear one, and I offer many a prayer to the Most High that you may retain your health and spirits amid the horrors that surround you. Be confident, dear heart, and bid your uncle tell his comrades of the garrison that we mean to cut our way to your rescue through all opposition.

The bearer will endeavor to return with a reply to the general. Perhaps you may be able to send a line with him. In any event, I trust he will see you, and that will bring joy to my soul when I hear of it.

Ever your devoted,
Frank.

By Havelock's order, a light, swift boat was placed at Ungud's disposal, and Malcolm supplied him with plenty of money for bribes and bribes on the

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 13 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Rosslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promises to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

DASH FOR LIBERTY

E. B. James Recalls an Experience in South Africa

During the late South African War, after the engagement of Nicholson's Nek, on October 30th, 1899, says E. B James, England, I was taken prisoner by the Boers, along with 995 others, after seven hours' fighting. We were being sent under escort to a place called Waschbach, where we were to entrain for Pretoria.

I had been wounded in the foot, and, after proceeding about twelve miles, my wound became very painful, and I asked the Boer commander to allow me to ride one of the reserve ponies, of which there were several. I was allowed this privilege; and when we reached Elandslaagte I asked the commander if I might bathe my wounded foot in a stream, permission being grudgingly granted me.

I was, roughly, some twenty-five miles from Ladysmith, and every mile was swarming with Boers; but I decided to make a bolt for it. As soon as my guards saw I had finished, they gave the order to mount. Then came my chance. The Boers did exactly as I expected. Instead of waiting to see me mount, they mounted with me. Quick as thought, I pricked up my pony with the penknife I had used for cutting the bandage, and, turning his head towards Ladysmith, galloped away into the gathering dusk, accompanied by the ping-ping of the bullets which followed me.

I was not hit; and the Boers—who, in chasing me, were riding farther from their commando—soon gave it up. On the following morning I staggered into Ladysmith, exhausted, but free.

A WORD FROM MR. KELSO

He Urges Guardians to Look Well After the Children

Have you taken a child from one of the Children's Shelters into your home? If so, why have you done so? Has it been with the idea that you will get just as much as possible out of that child, and give just as little as possible? Or have you realized your responsibility and your opportunity for doing a little good and adding a little brightness to a world often too dreary? In short, have you been selfish, sordid and mean in the step that you have taken? Or, have you been benevolent, high-minded, human? Too often, it is to be feared, people look on these forlorn little ones as mere chattels, and forget to ask themselves the question, "If this child were mine, how would I wish him to be treated?"

Most commonly, perhaps, the lack of a sense of responsibility shows itself in failure to send the child to school. This fact is by no means unknown to Mr. Kelso, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, and he has asked us to lay the matter before you, beseeching you—at least, who read our paper—to see that you are not careless in this respect.

It is with pleasure that we accede to his request, realizing, as must everyone who gives unprejudiced thought to the matter, the truth of his words: "If a child is deprived of educational advantages between the ages of eight and fourteen, the loss can never be made good." We leave, then, the suggestion with you. It is important, not only to the young people themselves, but to the country at large, that they should have the necessary training for their life's work. You cannot evade the responsibility with impunity. Think about it.

KELSO TO PORCUPINE

A Hard Struggle with Jack Frost in Building a T. & N. O. Spur Line

Acting upon authority given by the Legislature in 1910, the Government in November decided to construct a spur of the Temiscaming & Northern Ontario Railway from Kelso to Porcupine, a distance of 32 miles, the total cost being approximately $450,000. Work was commenced immediately, though the rigorous winter in the north delays progress.

At present there are five hundred men working on the line running from Kelso into the Porcupine district, and this number will be increased to one thousand during the course of the next month, just to make sure that the line will be finished at the stipulated time, July 1, 1911.

So unmanageable has become the downpour of snow that snow plows have become next to useless. It has been found that the plows keep the tracks clear, throwing the snow off to the sides, but the strong winds almost immediately blow it back on again.

To get over this difficulty, a machine, known as the "spreader," is to be pressed into service. It is attached to a low car, and does not look altogether unlike an aeroplane, with flange-shaped wings stretching down on both sides. This bird-like machine follows along after the snow plow, and when the snow is thrown off it lifts and throws it still farther, packing it up in banks.

NEW MILK PAIL

Invention Has Sanitary Advantages That Are Distinct

The Hardware Magazine gives an account of a new sanitary milk pail, which will become a favorite with all the milkers in the dairies and on the farms. It has "no corners or cracks for milk or moisture to collect and sour or cause rust."

The pail is described as follows:

The top of the pail is formed with a gradual rise for about three inches on the sides and back, and from this point an oval-shaped hood is formed with a total rise of four inches from the level of the top of the pail, which covers the entire top of the pail with the exception of eight inches on the front rise of the pail and five inches and a half in height, made without seams which makes a lower milk pail than any on the market. It has a rounding hood which is not in the way when used.

SWEET CORN ON FARM

Some Hints to Farmers Who Would Like This Luxury

It is surprising yet how on many farms the luxury of sweet corn for the table receives no attention, especially when it is so easily grown, and it is so nutritious and palatable. To give a succession throughout the season there should be for an ordinary family four or five blocks of about forty hills each, at least five rows wide, and planted at least a couple of weeks apart. The mistake is sometimes made of planting sweet corn in single rows, or perhaps two long rows beside each other. In this way the silks will not be sufficiently fertilized with the pollen, and the yield of ears will be meagre and defective. Make a note to remember this for next season. The first block should be put in early in May, and the ground frequently stirred. For home use, no sort equals the Golden Bantam, or Golden Sweet, as some call it, but it is not large enough to be profitable as a canning-factory crop.—Farmers' Advocate.

The WHITE LABEL BRAND is a specialty

AN ENGLISH HUMORIST.

Mr. Arnold White has been writing things about Canada in the Referee, which British contemporaries insist upon taking seriously. But there is ground for believing that Mr. White is merely taking a "rise" out of his countrymen, for he not only asserts that "facts point to an eventual absorption of Canada by the United States;" but offers the following as proof:

"Canada has eight millions of people, and is about to be built up by a racial and religious—or, perhaps, a theological and economic—division, in which five million go-ahead Yankeeized Canadians are opposed to some three million Catholics, who, as in Ireland, are under the spiritual control of their priests, who take political orders from the agents of the Vatican, not from Ottawa. Sympathizing with the five million progressing Canadians are a hundred million, who are soon going to be two hundred millions. That the tariff barrier or the artificial geographical boundary can be permanently maintained between Canada and her big neighbor is unlikely. I wish it were otherwise. But we have fumbled and fiddled with the tariff question until one can hear the humming in the bowels of the clock about to strike twelve, the hour that tells us when it is too late."

The intimation that tariff divisions in Canada conform to difference in creed, with the Roman Catholic minority hostile to reciprocity, is not a little amusing. Even more so is the hint that Catholic Provinces, such as Quebec, are less susceptible than the others to suggestion from Ottawa. And tariff boundaries between Canada and the United States have as little to do with geographical boundaries as proposed tariff walls of Britain have to do with the boundaries between England and the sea.—Toronto Star.

AN OLD PROSPECTOR

Around the British Empire in the Hunt For Gold

Brown visaged, with keen, observant eyes and an active form, Mr. Robert P. Banner, one of the men who have prospected for and mined gold in most parts of the Empire, is now in London.

"I had a good deal to do with the natives," Mr. Banner says, "especially those from Lake Mitsani and Nyassaland. They told me of a people who were there in the days of their forefathers, with whom, as their legends declare, they fought a great war. They say they were not white people, and from their general description I should think they were Arabs.

"We found many curious things, indicating beyond dispute an ancient civilisation. For instance, at one place where I was prospecting we broke into gold workings that must have been thousands of years old. There were great masses of slag, also, such as one finds in the neighborhood of iron foundries, and huge crucibles which had been used for separating gold from dross. Apparently they had worked in a similar manner to ourselves, for there were lumps of slag, the shape of the crucibles, from which the metal had been abstracted by precipitation. Our crucibles are no improvement on those I found there, which were practically indestructible."

Mr. Banner had some exciting experiences in the wilder parts of the American continent, and on Christmas Eve in 1883 witnessed a murder and lynching at Durango, which was then a township of La Plata, Colorado, chiefly inhabited by men of the toughest kind.

"On Christmas Eve, 1883, at Durango," he said, "everything was going on very pleasantly, when suddenly a shot was heard, and a man from Lake City fell dead. The murderer walked coolly out of the door unmolested, but the Marshall shouted, 'A hundred dollars reward for the man who arrests the murderer—Big Charlie is the man.'

"It was not long before Big Charlie was clapped into the calaboose, or jail, with a couple of men, armed with Winchesters, to keep him safe.

"Then the dead man was rolled into a corner of the saloon, covered with a cloth from the billiard table, and five minutes afterwards the floor manager yelled, 'Gentlemen, please select your partners for a quadrille.' And the ball went on as merrily as if the man had not been killed.

"Next evening forty or fifty of the Vigilance Committee, headed by Judge Lynch, took Big Charlie from the jail, led him to a pine tree, and made him mount three boxes that had been piled under the boughs.

"'You're going to die,' said the captain of the Vigilance Committee, 'for killing a man without giving him a chance to defend himself. Have you anything to say?'

"'Yes,' replied the doomed man. 'I will give you the address of my mother and sister in Ohio. Tell them what happened, and say whisky was the cause of the whole thing.'

"'Time's up,' said the captain. 'Do you prefer to jump from the boxes like a man, or shall we shoot you off?' A rope noose had been placed around his neck, and as there was but little slack either alternative meant strangulation. Big Charlie was game enough, and leaped into eternity."

From the United States Mr. Banner went prospecting in British Columbia, and learned more of its possibilities as a mineral yielding area than most of us know even now.

Next he went to Australia, prospecting and mining in every part of Australasia. There he has gone to the edge of the great deserts, has suffered semi-starvation and the torture of thirst, as well as lesser evils. "The natives," he explains, "would not tell the whites where the water was to be found. So they used to tie them up until they got so thirsty that immediately upon being released they would rush to the water."

Mr. Banner, in spite of his hard experiences is anxious to get off again, and is at present inclined towards British Columbia, or the unexplored parts of Canada.

AS AN ERRAND BOY

Sir Baden-Powell Tells an Interesting Story of Sir Thomas Lipton

Major-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell, addressing the boys of the Mercers' School, Holborn, London, at the annual prize-giving the other day, told an interesting story of the early life of Sir Thomas Lipton, with whom he had been staying.

Sir Thomas, he said, started work as an errand boy. He afterwards went to America as a cabin-boy, and on arrival a hotel agent touted among the passengers. Seeing the boy forlorn, and hearing he hadn't a penny, the agent offered him ten days' free board and lodging if he could bring twelve emigrants to his hotel. Lipton brightened up at once, because he had become very friendly with the emigrants through writing their letters, he being the only one in the steerage who could read or write. The emigrants were quite willing to go to the hotel, and the boy got his free board and time to look around for a berth.

The road will be hauling grain the latter part of October, and expects to handle as much as over the western lines last fall, which was 7,000,000 bushels.

USE SUNFLOWERS FOR FOOD OR FUEL

Stalk Appeals to the Farmers of Western Canada—An Acre Yields Many Cords of It

In Western Canada sixty per cent. of the herbage in August is that of the sunflower family. The common sunflower is a great grower upon are prairie, and can be raised to great advantage by the farmer. In Russia the sunflower is largely grown and is used for a variety of purposes. Great quantities of the seeds are eaten by the peasantry and are nby the higher classes, and are as much valued as peanuts are by us. In Russia and other Greek and Roman Catholic countries, where the use of meat is restricted at certain seasons, the use of sunflower seeds as food has become very common. Moreover the oil from the sunflower can be obtained at the rate of a gallon from a bushel of seeds. As 50 bushels of seeds can be grown on one acre, and as the oil sells at one dollar a gallon, it is evident that for the prairie farmer the growth of the sunflower would be quite remunerative . The oil of the sunflower compares very favorably with olive oil and has indeed been used in adulterating it. The crude sunflower oil has to some extent been used by painters, although it is inferior to linseed oil for paint. But, besides yielding value for oil, the other portions of the sunflower can be made profitable. When its stalks are cut green it is said that they make an excellent fodder for cattle. The oil cake obtained from the sunflower seeds and stalks is also stated to be useful in feeding stock.

The use of the stalk however, appeals to our prairie farmers. In China the fibre of the plant, which is said to be fine, silky and strong, is woven into fabrics both beautiful and serviceable.

To the farmers who live on our high plains where fuel is scarce there seems to be a most self-evident use of sunflower stalks and dried leaves. An acre of sunflowers when matured will yield many cords of good fuel. Experiments should be made by a number of our best farmers with sunflowers, as they seem to be a crop splendidly adapted to the climate and soil of Western Canada.—Winnipeg Free Press.

FATTENING CHICKENS

First Use Insect Powder Liberally and Then Feed

Chickens intended for fattening should be selected as regards size, and only those nearly the same size should be placed together. About the first thing to do with them is to dust them carefully over with insect powder, so as to rid them of vermin. This should be done at least two or three times more while they are being fattened. During the first few days it is just as well not to feed them too much, as they may get over-fed and refuse to eat satisfactorily afterwards. Feed very lightly for the first two or three days, and then gradually increase the feed until by the end of the first week they are eating all they will, three times per day. Never leave the food before them for more than fifteen minutes. From ten to twenty days should be the time required to fatten them, according to the condition in which they were at the time of commencing to feed.—E. C. M. in Canadian Farm.

EGGS FOR FEVER

White of Raw Egg Is Antiseptic Diet For the Sick

When fever is present an appetite is nil, when we want an antiseptic article of diet the white of an egg raw, serves both as food and medicine. The way to give it is to drain off the albumen from an opening about one-half an inch in diameter at the small end of the egg, the yolk remaining inside the shell. Add a little salt to this, and direct the patient to swallow it. (Sucking eggs.) Dose: Repeat every hour or two. In typhoid fever this mode of feeding materially helps us in carrying out an antiseptic plan of treatment. Furthermore, the albumen to a certain extent may antidote the toxins of the disease. Patients may at first rebel at the idea of eating a raw egg, but the quickness with which it goes down without the yolks proves it to be less disagreeable than they supposed, and they are very ready to take a second dose.

GRAIN FOR DAIRY COWS

There are plenty of people who would feed grain to their dairy cows if they had it. They will not buy it, however. They would not think of working the horse without grain, but they think it does not matter so much with the cow.

When the pasture starts to get short and cows need grain the most is just the time they are without it. Good cows under these conditions will milk all the surplus flesh from their bodies. When they get better feed they are not in shape to respond to it.

The man who feeds his cows a heavy grain ration six months of the year and lets them shift for themselves the other six months is the man who is feeding his cows grain at a loss. On the other hand the man who feeds his cows a good liberal ration twelve months of the year and keeps his cows in shape all the time is the man who is investing his money where it will bring him liberal returns.

The key to successful dairying is to breed better to feed better, and to butcher the boarders.

COOLING OF MILK IS WORTH WHILE

Conclusive Experiments Made in Ottawa Valley District During the Past Summer

A most interesting and conclusive experiment on the value of cooling the milk to a proper temperature was this summer made in a Lansdowne factory. The facts were given to an Ottawa reporter by a well-known Lansdowne farmer. The test was carried on for the month of August, during the hot weather.

Ten patrons of the factory solemnly agreed to cool their milk to under 70 degrees, and have the cheese from it made in a separate vat. The said cheese was to be kept and weighed separate from the rest of the cheese made from the milk delivered by the other patrons and cooled haphazard. The cheese were sold at exactly the same price as the rest of the cheese.

The results were almost startling. The increased yield of cheese from the milk cooled below 70 degrees netted 5 cents per hundred pounds of milk more than the cheese from the milk delivered as ordinary,-and this too after paying the maker one dollar a day extra for making up the milk in a separate vat. The result was so convincing that other patrons were anxious to come into line and it is quite probable that next season will see all the milk delivered at that factory cooled to under 70 degrees.

The reporter was informed that it was the intention of the district inspector to publish to sworn statement of the facts and results of the test.

HIRED HELP IS SCARCE

Eastern Ontario Farmers Wait an Government for Aid

The question of hired help is a serious one for the farmers of Ontario. A deputation appointed by the Farmers' Institute of Leeds and Lansdowne recently waited off the immigration authorities to see what steps should be taken to secure efficient hired laborers. In brief, they were informed that the help secured by the immigration officers is secured in the old country practically by order and demand, and laborers are not brought out by them to this country at haphazard. The deputation was told that they would have to specify what they wanted, how many laborers, for what kind of work whether for yearly or only temporary employment, wages and where situated. An effort would then be made by the immigration officers in the old country to meet their demand. Efficient hired help to be secured in Great Britain is not at all too plentiful and it was stated that only seven per cent. of the population are farmers.

COLD STORAGE OF APPLES IN IOWA

Results of Experiments are Made Public—Better to Put Fruit in Storage As Soon as Picked

The result of some investigations in the cold storage of apples in Iowa has recently been made public. The fruit was held in storage at a temperature of 34 degrees during one winter, and 33 degrees the following winter. Firm, hard, well-colored fruit kept best. Northwestern Greenings of this type remained in good condition a month longer than poorly colored, early picked fruit. Fruit stored immediately after picking was in better condition and lasted longer after removal from storage than samples which were harvested at the same time and kept in an open shed for two weeks before being placed in cold storage.

No advantage was found in wrapping the apples in paper, except with the more tender varieties. With some varieties, such as the North-western Greening, no difference was noted between the different ways of packing. Wealthy apples kept best in boxes, bruising was greater in barrels and shrinkage was greater in slat crates than in either boxes or barrels. Practically these same results were obtained some years ago by the federal bureau of plant industry.

RIGHT AGE OF BIRDS

For Egg Production—Some Fowls are Too Old

There are people who have the rigat variety of fowls, who house and feed them properly, and yet who cannot obtain eggs early in the winter because their fowls are too old. It is seldom that it pays to keep hens for laying after they are two and a half years old; not that they will not give a profit, but that younger fowls will give a greater profit. A great many poultrymen who make a specialty of winter egg production keep nothing but pullets, disposing of the one-year-old hens before it is time to put them in the winter quarters. Early hatched pullets, if properly grown, ought to begin laying in October or early November and continue to lay through the winter. Yearling hens seldom begin laying much before the 1st of January, and older hens not until later. It is the November and December eggs that bring the high prices. The laying breeds should begin laying when about five months old; general purpose breeds at six months, and the meat breeds at seven or eight months.

ONTARIO PEACHES SENT TO ENGLAND

General Opinion Seems to be That Departure Has Been of a Most Encouraging Nature

The trial shipment of Ontario peaches to the Old Country is a departure into new trade channels worthy of the fullest encouragement. Some have been rather skeptically inclined regarding the advisability of such an adventure, but when it is remembered that, for the best English hothouse peaches the consumers readily pay sixty cents a piece, one must admit, says The Farmers' Advocate, that Canadian shippers can accept prices far below that and still enjoy a profitable trade.

Several shipments have been made from the Niagara Peninsula this season under the direction of the Fruit Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Up to a fortnight since, 1,300 packages had been shipped from Mr. Dobson's peach ranch at Jordan Harbor and about 1,400 for the St. Catharines Cold Storage Co. in addition to several smaller private shipments.

For this trade the fruit is specially packed in a box about 17 inches long, 11½ wide, and 11½ deep. No blemished, fully ripe or uneven fruit is packed. A layer of wood wool is placed in the bottom of the box, each peach is wrapped in tissue paper, then individually nested in wood wool, and finally a layer of wood wool is placed on top. Thus, about twenty peaches in a single layer is put in one package. As soon as possible after coming from the tree, the fruit is cooled in cold storage, then expressed to Montreal, and shipped in cold storage. The cost of a box is between 4c. and 6c.; wood wool laid down costs about 2½c. per pound, the cost being partly due to the lack of a sufficiently fine grade in Canada. Another method of packing is being tried, wherein the peaches are all nested together in the centre, with wood wool on all six sides of them.

Reports of the marketing had not yet been received, save on Mr. Dobson's first lot. These sold at five shillings per case of Crawford peaches, or about $1.23, which, after all expenses, would leave a very nice profit.

Regarding this fruit, the London Daily Telegram said:

"Taking into consideration that the shipment under notice is an early one, the quality of the peaches is quite satisfactory. The variety is the Early Crawford, and most of the specimens are good and juicy. To compare the fruit with the finest grown in English hothouses is not only unfair, but it is absurd. In the first place, there is a vast difference in price, best English peaches being worth 2s. 6d. each, whereas the Canadians can be bought for 6d. Ontario shippers have made a good start by sending "free-stone" fruit, the only kind for which there is a demand in this country. Peaches with stones adhering firmly to the flesh are quite useless on our market. Very soon there will be available the Elberta, which is superior in quality and shape to the Crawford.'

"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"

If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Albert has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid--a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ag

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agent of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your apulication by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise oearning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr, Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

ACT OF HOMAGE

At Coronation Will Not Be Performed by Lady de Ros

There is little possibility of Lady de Ros being selected to do homage for the barons of England in virtue of the seniority of the peerage she holds. Certain Coronation services have, indeed, been performed by women or by deputies appointed by them, but homage has never been one of them. The next in seniority, Lord Mowbray and Stourton, will represent his brother barons, just as Viscount Falkland at King Edward's Coronation represented his senior, Viscount Hereford, who was not present. It is remarkable that there is a difference of no less than 333 years in the dates of creation between the premier Marquis of England, Lord Shrewsbury, and the next in time, Lord Lansdowne.

The act of homage at the Coronation consists in swearing allegiance, touching the crown, and kissing the King's cheek. In earlier days it was counted of the highest importance. At the time of Henry VI.'s Coronation a plague was raging, and to avoid infection a Bill was passed in Parliament permitting the omission of the kiss in the Act of homage. In this Act it was specially enacted that notwithstanding the omission of what was evidently an essential feature of the ceremony, the peers were entitled to receive the official letter acknowledging that they had performed homage. Macaulay, who was present at William IV.'s Coronation, gives an amusing picture of political partisanship while the peers were going up to do homage. "Some of them," he writes, "were cheered, which I thought indecorous in such a place and on such an occasion. The Tories cheered the Duke of Wellington and our people in revenge cheered Lords Grey and Brougham."

SEATS IN CHURCH

Baronet Claims Seventy-two Out of a Total of 380 in the Parish Edifice

A dispute as to whether Sir Oswald Mosley, Burton-on-Trent, was entitled to the exclusive use of seventy-two seats in the parish church was settled at Lichfield Consistory Court.

Sir Oswald applied for a faculty appropriating certain seats in the south aisle of the church. It was contended that the aisle had been in the possession of the family since 1615, and had been kept in constant repair, and from time to time various monuments had been erected.

When the Rev. and Hon. H. L. Tyrwhitt became rector the congregation increased, and people were placed in the south aisle, to the annoyance of Sir Oswald. The rector called upon Sir Oswald to prove his claim to seventy-two seats out of a total of 380 in the church.

A conference between the chancellor and counsel on the matter, together with the respective parties, took place. It was agreed that a faculty should be granted to the Mosley family, giving them the exclusive use of thirty-eight out of seventy-two of the existing seats in the south aisle, and also the right to erect monuments in the aisle.

A GRIPPEN MISTAKE

Cheiro, an Amazing Gentleman, Says the Doctor Did Not Avoid His Key Numbers

One of the greatest mistakes Crippen ever made in his life was in not avoiding his "key numbers." According to Cheiro, the amazing gentleman who can see through a brick wall as far as most people, if not farther, Crippen's key numbers were fours and eights; so that, if he had only stuck to fives and nines he might have been a respected, honored, and unhanged citizen. It was his obvious duty to avoid the year he was born in, '62, for 6 annd 2 are 8; likewise, he should have stayed away from that dinner with the Martinetti's on January 31st, for 3 and 1 make 4. He made his statement to Inspector Dew on July 8, and then, to make things worse, he lets Dew find the remains in the cellar on July 13th, for again 3 and 1 are 4. Then the foolish man called himself "Robinson," a name of eight letters, when he might just as well have travelled as Brown or Smith. Not only so, but he sails in the Montrose, again a name of eight letters; comes back in the Megantic, for trial, eight letters again; and, worst blunder of all, he allowed his key numbers to come together in the year he was hanged, being 48 years old when he was executed.

MISER'S TRAGIC END

A Man with $1,500 in the Bank Starves Himself to Death in England

"Death from heart disease, accelerated by wilful starvation," was the unusual verdict returned at an inquest on Charles Bayliss, 68, of Newtown, Manchester, who was found dead in bed. A son-in-law said that Bayliss had about $1,500 in the bank, but he refused to buy food, and witness had given him meals on many occasions. Bayliss was found at the top of the stairs, having apparently fallen out of bed. Other evidence showed that Bayliss would not part with his money for food, rent, or coal, and he had refused to see a doctor. He had been strange in his manner since the death of his wife, twelve months ago. He would not change his clothes, and had lived in a miserly way, often depending on his neighbors for a crust of bread. He had even allowed a man out of work to provide him with food. A doctor stated that the body was very dirty and very emaciated. There was very little blood in the veins, and practically no fat on the body. Death had been hastened by insufficient food.

It is remarkable that the first apple in Paradise should have turned out the first pair.

Taft Admits The Senate Won't Pass New Tariff

Washington, D.C., Jan. 30.—President Taft is preparing to call an extra session of Congress to pass the Canadian reciprocity agreement. One by one he is sending for members of the Ways and Means Committee. This morning at the White House, he announced that he had little hope of getting the agreement through the Senate this session.

If the present Congress will pass it, he is prepared to call an extra session either this spring or next fall. The next House will be Democratic, and is sure to pass the bill. With the bill passed by both Republicans and Democratic Houses it will then be squarely up to the Senate, which under those circumstances would be practically compelled to adopt the measure.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The Canadian reciprocity agreement was brought up in the Senate to-day when Senator Cullom (Republican, Illinois) said the President's message had been referred to the Finance Committee, which is hostile, but should be recalled to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Heyburn (Republican, Idaho), vehemently protested, saying that when a tariff bill could be made by agreement and arrangement, it destroyed the usefulness of a great party and destroyed the functions of Congress.

Legislation for raising revenues, Heyburn said, should originate with the executive under any construction of the constitution. The agreement is nothing but a revenue measure, he said, and should originate in the House.

"There seems to be a shifting of the foundations underlying political principle and party," declared Heyburn. "Quicksilver seems to be at work."

Bailey (Democratic, Texas), inquired of Cullom if this arrangement was made under any general or special law. Cullom answered in the negative and Bailey said the President had no authority to make "agreements or arrangements"—nothing but treaties. He said the Senate should have nothing to do with this matter until the House had acted upon it.

The whole subject ought to originate in the House, Cullom admitted. Carter (Republican, Montana), argued that it should first go to the Foreign Relations Committee and be referred to the Finance Committee.

Smith (Republican, Michigan), created much merriment by saying the Senate has a committee on Canadian relations and the agreement might well go there.

Finally the agreement was recalled and sent to the common Foreign Relations.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Senator Elon of Missouri, to-day announced in the Senate his unqualified support of the Canadian reciprocity treaty and his conviction that whatever the Republicans might do, Democrats should give the agreement their sanction.

Woman Strangled to Death in New York

New York, Jan. 30—Telephone company records, it was hoped to-day, might add materially in clearing up the latest murder mystery confronting the New York Detective force—the strangling to death of an unidentified woman, apparently a resident of some outside city in a room in the Bryant Hotel on Sixth Avenue, last night.

The couple who had occupied the room in which the body was found, were registered as "Mr. and Mrs. Jonn Smith, of Montclair, N.J." Shortly before the man disappeared from the hotel, the clerk re-called to-day that "Smith" had called up a telephone number and held a short conversation with some person. It was determined to ask the company to search the records to-day in the hope that the slips might disclose the number and give a possible clew to the missing man in the case.

TOWEL CROWDED IN THROAT.

The murdered woman, who evidently met her fate after a desperate struggle, was well dressed, about 38 years of age and of medium height, and weight. She wore a wedding ring and two other rings and had a gold mesh purse which was found empty. Nothing by which she could be identified was discovered. A towel had been crowded into her throat and another towel lying near by retained an odor resembling that of chloroform. The victim's lips were stained as if by acid.

We again direct the attention of investors to the advertisement elsewhere in to-day's issue of the Glove Company. That the company has a great future before it, is now practically assured. That it has a good territory is proven by the activity in buying and leases, as well as the development work that is being done.

The American Midway has just bought 80 acres in section four, two miles East of the Los Angeles Midway property, and a British syndicate has just bought 80 acres in the same section.

The June Oil Co. adjoining the LOS ANGELES MIDWAY property on the southeast has a well down 1,700 feet, and the rex Midway on the same quarter section has a well down 1100 feet.

The gas in this region is of commercial value also and the Standard has one well reserved on Sec. 26 near the LOS ANGELES MIDWAY OIL COMPANIES property and another on section 22, four miles east of the LOS ANGELES MIDWAY property.

The action of the general naval board of which Admiral Dewey is the chief, in recommending that the new monster battleships be equipped with oil burning furnaces, will not only revolutionize naval operations, but it will bring scores of millions of dollars to California every year.

There can be no doubt of the fact that in the not distant future all of the warships of Uncle Sam's navy—in fact, all the warships of all the navies in the world—will use crude oil as fuel instead of coal.

Not only the navies of the world, but the merchant marine of the world will discard their coal bunkers for oil tanks.

And not only that, but the day is not far distant when most of the railroads of the United States will use oil for fuel, as well as most of the great manufacturing plants.

The importance to California of this certain new development in the use of oil for fuel by the navies, merchant ships, railroads and industries of the world cannot be overestimated.

Already California leads all the States of the Union in the production of crude oil. The California oil field is only in the infancy of its development. The California oil is more adaptable for fuel than the oil of any other field, and it is produced practically at tidewater.

Not only will the ships of the United States come to the Pacific Coast for California oil, but the ships of England, Germany and France, of all the world, in fact.

When the day comes that the steamers of all the nations of the world use oil for fuel California oil companies will establish vast storage reservoirs along the highways of commerce—on the docks at London, Cherbourg, Marseilles and Hamburg, at Suez, at Aden, Bombay, Sydney and Auckland, at Singapore, Manila, Hongkong and Yokohama.

Fleets of tank steamers will depart daily from California ports destined for all parts of the world. Commerce will be stimulated a hundredfold.

Already California oil adds more than $30,000,000 annually to the productive wealth of the State. These figures will be doubled and trebled as the use of oil for fuel increases.

Full information can be obtained from R. J. Johnston, 141 Hunter-street, Peterboraugh, or from the Los Angeles Midway Oil Co., I. W. Hellman building, Los Angeles, Cal.

A LONDON YOUTH KILLS SWEETHEART

THE DEATH SENTENCE PASSED ON A LONDON YOUTH OF 19 YEARS.

The Prisoner Was of a Jealous Disposition—Cut Factory Girl's Throat With a Razor.

London, Feb. 1.—"Guilty" with a recommendation to mercy on account of his youth, was the verdict returned at Old Bailey in the case of Geo. Newton, 19, a "valve boy" at the Stratford Gasworks, who was charged with the wilful murder of his sweetheart, Ada Roker, 21, a factory girl, to whom he had been engaged for six months. Prisoner was of a jealous disposition, and this was said to be the motive for the crime. On December 24th, counsel said, the prisoner called at deceased's house in Bickerstake road, Stratford, and went into the kitchen with the girl and her sister-in-law, Elizabeth Roker. The sister-in-law went out twice and, upon returning the second time, found the room in darkness. She said to Ada, "Why don't you light the lamp?" and deceased replied: "George won't let me light up; I don't know what is the matter." The two were left alone and subsequently somebody on the floor below heard a noise in the room above as if something heavy had fallen. The deceased's sister, Lizzie, returning home almost at that moment, met prisoner running hurriedly down the stairs, and in reply to a question he said, "I must look sharp home." Lizzie found her sister lying on the floor. Newton, having proceeded to his lodgings in Lett- road, told his brother-in-law, Henry Allen, that he had cut Ada's throat. He went into the kitchen to wash his hands, and Allen noticed that the water was blood-stained. Prisoner also handed his brother-in-law a razor stained with blood. On his way to the station he said, "It was done quick, and I was copped quick."

When charged with murder his answer was, "Yes, I did it with a razor."

SKYSCRAPERS WERE ROCKED BY SHOCK

PANIC IN SCORES OF BUILDINGS IN NEW YORK FOLLOWED EXPLOSION IN JERSEY CITY.

Car of Dynamite Went Up—Number of Persons Killed—Plate Glass Littered Streets of the Metropolis.

New York, Feb. 1.—An explosion of a carload of dynamite on Poer 10, in Jersey City, a couple of minutes past noon to-day, threw Manhattan Island into a panic by shaking the lower end of the city, and sending tremors through the skyscrapers of the district.

According to first reports a number of people were killed and injured in the explosion, and the officials of the Jersey Central Railroad called for all the available ambulances and doctors.

The shock of the explosion caused fire alarms to be rung in from various parts of the downtown section. The plate glass windows in the customs house were shattered and there was extensive breakage of window lights on all sides. Broadway and Church street, from Fulton street south, were literally showered with fragments of glass broken from hundreds of windows on these thoroughfares.

DROWNED LIKE RATS IN A TRAP

Newark, N. J., Feb. 1.—Divers to-day repaired the broken caisson under the bed of the Passaic River, in which ten negro "sand hogs" met a fearful death late last night, and the work of recovering the bodies was begun. Four were recovered early in the day.

The accident was most peculiar. The chain attached to a big iron bucket filled with dirt and stones, which was being raised from the river bed by a derrick, broke. The entire mass was precipitated on the upper door of the caisson, breaking it off. This permitted the compressed air to escape, and ten of fourteen men working in the chamber were drowned like rats in a trap.

Edward F. Mylius Sentenced To Prison For One Year for Libel

THE CHARGE SQUARELY AND SERIOUSLY FACED — MANY WITNESSES TAKE THE STAND.

Admiral Swears That King Was Never at Malta While His Family Were There—King George Was Not at Court.

London, Feb. 1.—A prison sentence of one year to-day was imposed upon Edward F. Mylius after he was found guilty of criminally libelling King George.

Mylius had published in The Liberator an assertion that the monarch, while Prince of Wales, had morganatically married a daughter of Admiral Seymour, and that several children had resulted from the union. He was tried on three counts and was convicted on all of them.

Only a few witnesses were called. Among these was the Crown Advocate at Malta. He testified that it was compulsory under the law at Malta to register every marriage. He declared on the stand that the registration between the years of 1886 and 1893 had been searched without discovering a record of the King's alleged marriage.

Admiral Seymour took the stand and swore that none of his daughters had ever been married to King George.

"I had only two daughters," declared the admiral. "One died when she was 22 years of age and the other is the present Mrs. Napier."

Mrs. Napier was also called to the stand.

"I was never married to King George," was the simple statement to which she swore.

Mylius attempted a long elaborate cross-examination but was cut short by the court.

APPLAUSE IN COURT.

The verdict was the occasion for a ripple of subdued applause which disturbed even the stern dignity of the English court for a time.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, in delivering the sentence, stated that Mylius had wronged not only the British sovereign, but the British people.

The Liberator is a small paper published in Paris, its editor being Edward H. James, formerly a lawyer in the United States.

Sir John A. Simeon assisted Sir Rufus in the prosecution, collaborating with Public Prosecutors Roylatt and Muir, the latter being the prosecutor of Dr. H. H. Crippen.

New York women were in the crowd which surged about the court, attempting to break by the guards and enter. It required the efforts of fully a score of policemen to keep back the people who tried to fight their way into the room after it was already filled.

ASKS FOR KING'S ATTENDANCE.

Mylius conducted his defense in person. Immediately after the opening of court he petitioned the tribunal to compel the attendance of King George. He gave three reason(why the King should be present, summing up his contentions in the following words:

"I demand the presence of King George, first, because the accused has the right to be faced by his accuser in court; secondly, because in libel action the accused must be in court, and third, because without the accuser in court there is no proof that the prosecutor is alive."

Mylius also demanded the return of private papers which, he said, had been seized.

A SERIES OF FALSEHOODS.

Sir Rufus Isaacs, for the prosecution, declared in opening the case, that all the allegations made by Mylius were fakes.

"Beyond the fact that King George is married to Queen Mary every statement made by Mylius is an utter falsehood," declared Sir Rufus.

In addressing the court the Attorney General announced that the charge of seditious libel had been withdrawn and the charge of plain libel substituted.

The Attorney General further declared that the King could not appear constitutionally, although he is willing to refute in person the aspersations cast upon him in The Liberator.

A CHEERFUL LIAR.

Mylius was bold and cheerful during the morning session of court. He smiled frequently and apparently had no fear of the outcome of the case.

Sir Rufus, in addressing the court, took up the details of the story which Mylius had written. It had been charged in the story that King George had been married at Malta prior to 1893 to a young woman named Seymour, although the barrister declared that the King had not gone to Malta until November of 1893, several months after his marriage to Mary of Teck.

ADMIRAL SEYMOUR'S STORY.

Sir Rufus concluded by stating that the suit against Mylius had not been

KING'S MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE

After sentence had been passed Sir Rufus Isaacs read a letter signed by King George and authorizing the Attorney-General to state publicly that the writer had never been married except to Queen Mary; had never gone through a ceremony of marriage except with the Queen; and that he would have attended the proceedings to give evidence to this effect except for the advice of the law officers of the Crown that it would be unconstitutional for him to do so.

Cannot Check Spread of Pulmonary Plague

Pekin, China, Feb. 1—Reports received here to-day from the health experts sent to Harbin to investigate the pulmonary plague now raging there say that the situation is serious. Thousands of natives are dying, and efforts to check the disease have failed. It is not believed that there can be any adequate move made in stamping out the malady until the arrival of warm weather. Reports as to the number of fatalities vary from 250 to 1,000 daily. Refugees are fleeing from the infected district, with the inevitable result that the disease germs are being spread broadcast throughout Manchuria.

Interesting Lecture on White Plague

Last night a rather small, but appreciative audience assembled in the Collegiate Institute Hall to listen to an illustrated lecture on tuberculosis by Dr. McCullough, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, Toronto. The lecture was illustrated by lime-light views, setting forth in a forcible manner the nature of the dread disease, which is claiming so many victims in Canada. The lecturer handled his subject in a way that showed the insidious nature of what is commonly known as the White plague. Dr. McCullough stated that there were 2000 cases of tuberculosis in Ontario at the present moment. In 1906 2,300 persons died of consumption in this Province alone.

At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks was tendered Dr. McCullough.

The public are invited to visit the tuberculosis car, which, through the kindness of Mr. W. H. Denham, is stationed on the Quaker Oats Company's tracks, Hunter-street.

This evening Dr. Hodgetts, the Medical Adviser of the Commission on Conservation, will deliver the second lecture in the same place, to which the public are cordially invited.

Col. Munro was Committed for Trial

Toronto, Jan. 31.—Following Magistrate Denison's previous statement that he would refuse to try the case of Lt.-Col. James H. Munro summarily, after taking the evidence of three witnesses to-day he committed the former president of the defunct Farmers Bank for trial on a charge of making false returns to the Government. One security of $1,000 was asked as bail, the bondsman being Mr. H. W. Maw, of Counsel Dewart's firm.

There was considerable delay in the Police Court before the charge against Lt.-Col. James H. Munro, of Embro, president of the Farmers Bank, of making false returns to the Government regarding the condition of assets of the bank during his term of presidency, could be taken up this morning. In the first place, the shorthand reporter whom the Crown regarded as necessary was not on hand. Before he appeared Crown Attorney Corley left the room, returning in a few minutes with the information that a further delay was necessary.

"Unexpected developments have arisen, your Worship, which makes it absolutely necessary that the hearing be postponed for half an hour," was what he said.

The court accordingly rested for a few minutes while the magistrate left the bench. The nature of these developments the Crown attorney refused to divulge.

Gananoque Girl Out Day and a Night

Kingston, Feb. 1—A 14-year-old girl was found under the platform of a canal in Gananoque used for industrial purposes on Monday morning. She had concealed herself there for a full day and night, and needed medical attention. Workmen were just about to run water into the canal. The girl is from an orphanage, and is employed by a well-known resident. She has played such pranks before.

SENTENCES HER HUSBAND.

Philadelphia Woman Aids Magistrate and Gives Spouse One Year.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—Mrs. Nathan Kirkwood this morning sentenced her husband to one year in the house of correction. The woman appeared against her husband in the Manayunk police court, presided over by Magistrate Grelis. After hearing the testimony the magistrate called Mrs. Kirkwood to the bench and informed her that she would have to be the judge as to the length of time her husband would remain in jail.

"You go to the house of correction for one year," Mrs. Kirkwood snapped at her husband without a second's hesitation. Kirkwood pleaded with the magistrate in vain.

According to Mrs. Kirkwood, her husband imbibed too freely and sold all the shoes in the house to get liquor money. Then, coming home early this morning, he started to beat his wife and four children.

MURDEROUS ATTACK ON A YOUNG GIRL

IN A LONELY LANE—HER BODY WAS RIDDLED WITH SHOT.

Servant Crawls Home in a Terrible Plight—Was Attacked in a Lonely Section of City.

London, Feb. 1. In a state of collapse and bleeding from wounds inflicted by about 90 pellets, a young servant who had been murderously attacked in a lonely lane about a mile outside St. David's (Pembrokeshire) crawled home, a distance of about a quarter of a mile, some seven hours later. The injured girl, Mary Evelyn Lewis, 18, is a servant of Emlych Farm, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Rees, about 14 miles from St. David's. She is a native of St. David's, and has only been at Emlych Farm since Michaelmas. She paid a visit to her sister, who is in service with Mrs. Griffiths, in the city. She also attended the evening service at the Baptist Chapel. It was when on her way home at about nine o'clock that she was murderously attacked. She started on the way alone, and had gone about a mile, and was proceeding down a lane leading to the farm, when she was suddenly shot down without warning. This was within a quarter of a mile of the farmhouse. She stated that she saw no one and heard nothing except two reports. The second shot she said, missed her. She shouted for help, but her cries were not heard, and she must have swooned and remained unconscious for a long time, for the next thing she knew was waking up cold and benumbed, with her garments clotted with blood. She summoned all her courage and painfully crawled on her hands and knees to the farm along the lane, through two fields, and across a narrow footbridge spanning a small stream, and thence into the yard. Her sufferings can be imagined when it is stated that she reached the house at four a.m., seven hours after being shot. The family had gone to bed, leaving the door unfastened, thinking the girl would come in later. They knew nothing of her absence all night. Fortunately, at four o'clock, Mr. Rees was up, preparing to go to Letterston Fair, and he heard an unusual noise at the door. On opening it he found the girl in a state of collapse. She fell against him, and remarking "I'm shot," swooned. He saw blood oozing through her coat at the left breast, and at once had the girl put to bed and sent for the police and Dr. Wilfrid Williams. When the doctor examined her, he found she had been seriously wounded in the left side, and it was clear that the shot must have been fired from very close range, as he extracted nearly eighty pellets from a small area around the left breast. The girl's corset and a thick coat had fortunately, given her considerable protection, and but for these she must have been killed instantly. As it is, she is expected to recover. At the spot where the murderous attack took place, her hair comb, pad, and other articles showed where she had fallen. There is no evidence that she was robbed or molested beyond being fired at, and the police entertain the opinion that a deliberate attempt was made to murder the girl. They are actively investigating such clues as may be afforded by footprints across the neighboring fields. Close to the spot where the outrage occurred a large stone in the bank is marked by pellets. The reports were plainly heard by the inmates of a gipsy caravan not far off, but they thought nothing of them.

A POINTER FOR WIVES

Toledo, Feb. 1—After Judge Brough had ruled that the taking of any amount of money by a wife from her husband or vice versa, does not constitute larceny, Mrs. Florence Phillips, of Maumee, who was charged with stealing $700 from her husband, was acquitted.

FIRE INTERRUPTED THE WEDDING

SYNAGOGUE BURNED WHILE A MARRIAGE WAS TO BE SOLEMNIZED.

Some Exciting Scenes—Women, Children and Old Men Were Got Out of Burning Building With Difficulty.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Some of the "quiet but pretty" features were lacking in connection with the nuptials of Mr. Joseph Schipman and Miss Leah Ross last night, but in spite of the wrecking of the synagogue by fire and the consequent uncomfortable surroundings, the marriage ceremony took place on the ruins and festivities were enjoyed until early this morning.

Fortunately, although they were many people in the synagogue, including a lot of old people, they all escaped after considerable difficulty, aided by heroic acts by Rabbi Gordon.

AN INTERRUPTED PARTY.

The wedding was that of a popular young Jewish couple of Centre-avenue. A little after six o'clock the winsome eighteen-year-old bride-to-be and her lover, together with friends and relations constituting the bridal party were driving merrily towards the University avenue synagogue oblivious of ought but the social function, when the cry of fire was heard. One of the bride's brothers asked from the window of the carriage where the blaze was and was told the synagogue on University avenue was in flames. So the party returned to the home of the bride's parents.

"HE WILL GIVE ME BACK MY SIGHT"

BLIND GIRL THINKS THAT SHE IS CALLED UPON TO EVANGELIZE THE WORLD.

She Is Starving Herself—Sight Was Not Restored to the Sufferer and Authorities are Likely to Interfere.

McKeesport, Pa., Jan. 31.—"The Lord has called on me to evangelize the world. He will give me back my sight." Waking from her trance Margaret Shipley, the girl who has fasted for eight days in expectation of a miracle that would give her power to the eyes blind from birth, shrieked out these words to-day, and then collapsed. After her guardians, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Halderman, had worked over her for some time she returned to the state of trance and lay rigid, though her eyes opened from time to time.

The Haldermans claim that the girl has also revealed to them that she can see slightly, but public sentiment is becoming so bitter against them that little credence is given to their words except by foreigners. The police are likely to take action at any time. It has been decided that unless she is given some nutrition the authorities will end the fast by force and take the girl to the hospital.

Miss Shipley had proclaimed she would receive her sight completely at six o'clock last night. The miracle failed to materialize, and the city officials of McKeesport, after looking oker the girl, announced their intention to end the fast.

Condemn Date for Annual Voting

Member for Brockville Will Introduce a Bill to Hold Elections Early in December.

Toronto, Jan. 31.—The member for Brockville, Mr. A. E. Donavan, disapproves of the holding of municipal elections around New Years Day and will introduce a bill in the Legislature to change the law. He will provide either for a date early in December, or will allow each place to choose the date that suits it best. This, he believes, will be December. The present Statute which fixes the time as the first Monday in the New year dates back to 1866.

Mr. Donavan has received replies from 75 Mayors of the Province and some 40 reebes and declared that 98 per cent. of these were in favor of a change.

"The trouble with the arrangement we have now is that people are too busy round Christmas and New Year to take a proper interest in elections. Another difficulty is that many like to go away for a visit over New Year's Day and often are compelled to stay at home or lose their vote."

Thirty Years of Christian Endeavor

Boston, Mass., Feb. 2.—Public exercises will be held to-day in celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. The society was first organized in Williston church, Portland, Me., Feb. 2, 1881. It now has branches in every part of the world and a total membership exceeding 3,600,000.

THE MORNING TIMES

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1911

A BISHOP'S PATRIOTISM.

Bishop Fallon, of London, Ontario, is not backward in expressing his views not only on education but on other matters. Speaking before the Canadian Club of London a short time ago, he declared himself an Imperialist by conviction. "There is freedom," he said, "where the old flag floats, and there is no other nation which knows to the fullest degree as Great Britain does, the meaning of civil and religious liberty." His Lordship further said: "It is my deliberate conviction—it may not be the tactful thing to say, either—nevertheless it is my deliberate conviction, that Germany intends to try to take command of the world's affairs. That would not be a good day for the world. I express the hope that a government of Britain, at no time, will ever be drawn by the delusive gains of peace to threaten, to menace, to destroy, the blessed gift of spreading to the world human liberty the brotherhood of man, the blessing of prosperity and religious liberty. I say I hope Great Britain never for a moment halts in this great march of duty."

His Lordship is of the strenuous order—strong in body and in brain. His patriotism is to be admired, but let us hope that his influence and that of the clergy of all the churches will be exerted in the direction of maintaining peace, and prevail over the spirit of militarism, which is too widespread in the world to-day.

A VIEW OF THE EMPIRE.

A feature of the coronation festivities will be an exhibition of the arts, industries and resources of the British Empire, under the management of Charles T. Kirally. The intention is to have a fuller representation of the Empire than has hitherto been attempted. There will be shown not only the products of each country, but representations of the country itself, its inhabitants, its busy towns its rural loveliness, and leading industries.

The stately homes, the smiling valleys, the busy times, the picturesque mountains of the Mother Country; the pathless forests, the boundless plains, side by side with the hives of industrry of the great self-governing Dominions; the grand histoeic buildings of the India of the past, and the large cities of the present with their modern civilization and appliances; the tropical beauties of the Crown colonies; all will be brought before the eyes of the people of the United Kingdom, who will for the first time in its history have brought before them the grandeur and magnitude of theor glorious heritage.

The Governments of the various nations of the Empire are invited to arrange for exhibits of manufactures, especially such as are likely to find markets abroad. There will thus be an opportunity of doing a stroke of business, as well as of aiding to the interests of an instructive exhibition.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

They are to make the penalty for mixing grain $5,000. This is even more expensive than mixing drinks, and some people say that costs something.

AN ESSENTIAL.

An Australian aviator claims to have invented a monoplane that will adapt itself to the most treacherous air currents with the ease and grace of a condor. Before becoming a popular mode of transportation, the tendency to return to earth without consulting the engineer must be more effectively safeguarded.

Cowansville, Quebec., Jan. 31.—At the Bedford Dairymen's Association last night A.-A. Ayer, of Montreal, vigourously combatted the idea that the reciprocity agreement was a good thing for the Canadian Dairymen, as it would have the effect of taking them out of a market they had made great efforts to gain, and leave them at the mercy of the United States Congress.

come, while he [illegible] would be liberally rewarded afterwards.

Now it chanced that on the 20th, about the very hour Ungud set out on his daring mission, the Moulvie of Fyzabad managed to goad his co-religionists into a determined assault on the Residency.

At seven o'clock in the morning the bombardment suddenly ceased. The garrison sentries noted an unusual gathering of the enemy's forces in the streets and open spaces that confronted the Bailey Guard and the high mud posts guarding its side.

They gave the alarm and every man rushed to the walls. Even the sick and wounded left their beds. Men with the fire of fever in their eyes, with bandaged limbs and scarcely able to crawl, asked for muskets and lined up alongside their yet unscathed comrades.

They waited in grim silence, those war-worn soldiers of the Queen. The signal for a furious struggle was given in dramatic fashion. A mine exploded, a large section of the defending wall crumbled into ruins, a hundred guns belched forth a perfect hail of round shot, sharpshooters stationed in the neighboring houses fired their muskets as rapidly as they could lift them from piles of loaded weapons at their command, and, under cover of this fusillade, some three thousand rebels advanced to the attack.

They came on with magnificent courage. They actually succeeded in planting scaling-ladders across the breach, and their leader, a fierce-looking cavalry rissaldar, leaped into the ditch and stood there, right in front of the Cawnpore battery, waving a green standard to encourage his followers.

He was shot by a man of the 32nd, and his body formed the lowermost layer of a causeway of corpses that soon choked the ditch. But the concentrated fire of the defenders checked this most audacious of the many assaults delivered during four hours fighting. At two o'clock the attack slackened and died away. The rebels had lost some hundreds, while the British had only four men killed and twelve wounded.

There was much jubilation among the garrison at this outcome of the long-expected and dreaded attack. It added to their spirit of self-reliance, and it cast down the hopes of the mutineers to a corresponding degree; because their moral inferiority was proved beyond dispute. Like all Asiatics, they had not dared to press on in the face of death. With one whole-hearted rush those three thousand fighters could have swarmed into the Residency against all the efforts of the few Europeans and natives who resisted them. But that rush was never made by the assailants as a mass. Not once in the history of the Mutiny did the sepoys adopt the "do or die" method that characterized the British troops in nearly every action of the campaign.

When the moon rose on the night of the 21st a sharp-eyed sentry saw a man creeping across the broken ground in front of the Bailey Guard. He raised his rifle, but his orders were to challenge anyone who approached thus secretly, lest, perchance, a messenger from some relieving force might be slain by error.

"Who goes there?" he cried.

"A friend," was the answer, but the rest of the stranger's words showed that he was a native.

The sentry was no linguist.

"You stop where you are," he commanded, bidding a comrade summon an officer, "or someone who can talk the lingo."

Within a minute the newcomer was admitted. It was Ungud, who had run the gauntlet of the enemy's pickets and who now triumphantly produced Havelock's letter to "Larrence-sahib Bahadur." Alas, Henry Lawrence was dead, but Brigadier Inglis, who succeeded him in the command, now learnt that Havelock had defeated Nana Sahib, occupied Cawnpore, and was advancing to the relief of Lucknow.

How the great news buzzed through the Residency! How men grasped each other's hands in glee and exultation and sought leave to take the joyful tidings to the hospital and the women's quarters!

Mayne aroused Winifred to tell her. "Perhaps Malcolm was able to get through to Allahabad," he said. "When you come to think of the difficulties in the way of our troops—this man says they have fought three if not four pitched battles between Fatehpore and Cawnpore—we have been unreasonable in looking for help so soon."

"Mr. Malcolm would surely succeed if it were possible. He understands the native character so well and is so proficient in their language, that he was the best man who could be chosen for such a task."

And that was all that Winifred would say about "Mr. Malcolm," who would have been the most miserable and the most astonished person in India that night had he known how bitter was the girl's heart against him.

Though Winifred was not to blame, for the necklace and the pass offered strong evidence of double-dealing on her lover's part, her unjust suspicions were doomed to receive a severe shock.

In the morning she heard that Captain Fulton wished to see her. She left her quarters by a covered way and waited outside the Begum Kotee until a soldier found Fulton.

He came, bringing with him a native. "This is the man who arrived from Cawnpore last night, Miss Mayne," he said. "He has a letter for you, but he refuses to deliver it to anyone but yourself. I fancy," added the gallant engineer officer with a smile, "that the sender impressed on him the importance of its reaching the right hands."

Winifred caught a glimpse of Frank's handwriting. Her face grew scarlet. For one delightful instant she forgot the harsh thoughts she had harbored against him. Then the scourge of memory tortured her. Fulton's kindly assumption that Malcolm was her fiance must be dispelled and she bit her lower lip in vexation at the tell-tale rush of color that had mantled her cheeks when Ungud discharged his trust and gave her the letter.

"It is from Captain Malcolm," she said coldly. "I suppose he wishes his personal belongings to be safeguarded. I am surprised he did not write to my uncle rather than to me."

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

brought to protect the monarchy, but that the protection of the court had been sought for the King as a man a husband and a father.

After formal evidence concerning the arrest of Mylius had been introduced Admiral Seymour stepped briskly to the witness box. He testified that he had had only two daughters. The elder was born in 1871 and married Captain Napier in 1899. The other daughter was born in 1873 and died in 1895. Both remained with him at Malta during the years 1893-95, while he was commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean squadron. The younger daughter had never married. The King, he said, never was at Malta while he and his daughters were there. The second daughter had never spoken to his Majesty, and in fact had never seen him except possibly at a garden party at Marlborough House after his marriage with Queen Mary.

As to his elder daughter, Sir Michael said she might have seen Prince George when he was a cadet on the training ship Britannia in 1879. It was possible that she had seen him at court, but certainly she had never spoken to him until 1893, when the witness was commander-in-chief at Portsmouth and was visited by Prince George.

NO TRUTH IN IT.

After the formalities of opening the proceedings were concluded, Mylius began his case by demanding the return of his private letters, which he asserted had been seized in violation of his legal rights. He then said: "I wish to ask whether the King is present. I demand his presence, because every accused person has the right to be confronted by his accuser, and secondly, because in a libel action the prosecutor must be in court in order that the defendant may see him; and thirdly, because there is no proof that the prosecutor is at present alive."

Chief Justice Alverstone replied: "That has already been the subject of an application before me, and you know perfectly well that the King cannot be here."

Sir Rufus then opened the prosecution. He said that the alleged libel attacked the King's honor and was intended to lower him in the esteem of right minded citizens. The libel, he said, was of the grossest character and charged His Majesty with having contracted a shameful marriage at Malta in 1890 with the daughter of Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, by which there had been an offspring. That His Majesty had "foully abandoned" this lady in order that he might marry the Princess. The charge had been repeated thrice.

Raising his voice and with a dramatic gesture the Attorney-General exclaimed: "I tell you at once that there is not the faintest vestige of truth in those statements."

After producing letters showing Mylius' connection with Editor James, Sir Rufus said that he regretted the disadvantage which His Majesty suffered in not being able under the constitution to appear in court and deny these allegations under oath. This was an absolute incapacity which the King could not waive at will. However, the officers of the Crown were in a position to establish beyond doubt the falsity of the accusations. The King, he continued, was not at Malta in 1890. He was never there after 1888 until some years after his marriage to Queen Mary.

Mylius did not cross-examine any of the witnesses and adjournment was taken for lunch.

When court reconvened Lord Alverstone inquired whether Mylius had any evidence to introduce. The defendant replied that he had, but he would first quote legal authorities. He read quotations to the effect that the charge against him was political instead of personal, and argued that the proceedings were personal and that rank did not exempt anyone from attendance at court. If the privileges of the Crown were sacred, the constitutional rights of a subject were equally sacred.

When the Lord Chief Justice overruled the defendant on all the points made, Mylius said: "Then I refuse to proceed further."

Again asked if he had any evidence to offer, Mylius replied: "What I have said is my evidence."

The jury quickly returned a verdict of guilty. In pronouncing sentence the Court declared that the most ordinary investigation which any humble man would have undertaken must have shown the gross charge untrue. Every honorable man in the civilized world would recoil from the use of such weapons against anyone, particularly the King, to whom the whole Empire was devoted.

Lord Alverstone then imposed the maximum sentence of one year's imprisonment, which, he added, in the present case was wholly inadequate.

The proceedings closed with the reading by Sir Rufus of a letter from the King in which the latter said that he had never been married to anyone but Queen Mary, and that he would have appeared in court and given testimony to that effect, but for the advice of the officers of the Crown, who held that it would be contrary to the constitution for him to do so.

A DARING EXPLOIT

A Skilful Manoeuvre by Sir Archibald Hunter

The fact that Sir Archibald Hunter is with one exception the youngest officer of his rank in the Army, is sufficient proof of his soldierly qualities and his fighting skill, and he has well deserved the Governorship of Gibraltar which has been conferred upon him. He joined the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment thirty-six years ago, at eighteen. At twenty-nine he was a brevet-major, and at forty a full-fledged major-general. "Hunter's rag" it was that waved in the forefront of every battle during the last arduous campaign on the Nile, while the man whom it represented was known as "the point of the Sirdar's spear." One of Sir Archibald's most daring exploits was performed one dark night while at Ladysmith, when the General, with a little band of volunteers, crept over one of the surrounding hills and blew the head off a mischievous Long Tom. He led all the way on the dangerous task, surprised and overcame the Boers and crippled the gun. Sir Archibald is one of the few British military officers to enjoy the personal friendship of the German Emperor, whom he once saved from a serious accident. During a visit of the Kaiser to Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny a few years ago, General Hunter was in command of the troops in Scotland, and was present in that capacity on the station platform to welcome the Emperor. Lord Rosebery's carriage was waiting, and the Emperor had just taken his seat in it when one of the horses commenced to plunge violently, and in another moment the pair would have bolted. Like a flash, however, General Hunter reached the animal and dealt it a smashing blow on the nose that quickly quieted it. Another pair of horses were soon secured, and Sir Archibald received the hearty thanks of the Kaiser for the smart way he grappled with the situation. Since that time he has been very popular with the Emperor, who never forgets a service, and he shares with Lord Roberts the distinction of being the only non-German soldier who has a standing invitation to visit the Royal palace at Potsdam.

ANTI-FASHION LEAGUE

The Objects of a New Organization Formed in New York

An anti-fashion league has just been started in New York with the highly praiseworthy object of combating the spread of the ridiculous fashions and crazes adopted by the very rich among less well-to-do people, says M. A. P.

There is certainly plenty of work for such an organization to do here. Women who can with difficulty afford to spend as much as thirty or forty pounds a year on their dress, but yet insist on wearing bobble skirts, yards of hat, gloves up to their shoulders, and similar absurdities—made fashionable for a moment by women who can afford to spend a thousand a year with their modistes and milliners—ought to be objects of special attention from the anti-fashion league.

Then there are various fashionable cults, the spread of which an anti-fashion league would be doing good work by combating. For example, the cult of expensive pets in the way of cats, dogs, mice, and lizards of rare type and breeds is all very well for women who can afford to pay five hundred pounds for such a pet without missing the money, but when Mrs. Brown of Balham starts imitating their example by spending twenty or thirty pounds on some wretched animal probably not worth as many shillings, she badly needs some plain words of advice from an anti-fashion league.

MACHINE THAT "THINKS"

Sticks on Stamps and Politely But Firmly Refuses Foreign Coins

A machine which thinks, or at any rate discriminates, is being installed by the Post Office in London, England, and one has a vision of the crowds who will flock to it when duly attached to the corner lamp-post, for the purchase of forgotten postage-stamps on Sunday evenings.

Affixing postage-stamps by the natural process has never been either a pleasant or a wholesome practice; here is a machine which not only delivers a stamp for a penny, but obligingly sticks the stamp on the envelope for the purchaser.

Fraudulent lead discs it flings contemptuously into its interior; foreign coins it returns with the courteous assumption that the depositor has made a pardonable mistake.

With fair treatment the automaton is ready to do the fair thing by the purchaser, and to do it at the terrific rate of 4,000 stamped envelopes per hour. It will stamp newspaper wrappers, and at the same time register the number of stamps used, and it will stamp your letters up to 50,000 at a time. All you have to do is to put 50,000 pennies in a slot and press a knob 50,000 times.

THE LARGEST CRAB

The largest crab in the world, a specimen of the giant spider crab from Japan, is at the Museum of Natural History, New York. The spread of the two largest legs, or arms, having sawlike teeth, called "pincers," is nearly twelve feet, and the body portion is over one foot in diameter and about the size of a large dinner-plate. The monster crab inhabits the seas and islands of Japan, and is known to occur at depths of over two thousand feet.

WHAT FEW REALIZE

There is a time when one looks towards forty as the fringe of the Arctic zone of life. No one realizes that there is a broad temperate belt of middle age, wherein men can labor hard, long, and fruitfully.—Mr. Lloyd George.

Quite a bunch of local sports left on Tuesday and yesterday for Buffalo, where a big cocking main took place last night. It is said that quite a number of Peterborough birds battled with American birds.

Presented With Stick Pin.

On Tuesday evening, Mr. Thomas Campbell was presented with a handsome gold stick pin by his friends in Peterborough. The presentation took place at the home of Mrs. S. L. Thompson, Chamberlain street, on the occasion of wishing Mr. Campbell good-bye, who is leaving Peterboro to accept a position in Stratford. A delightful evening was spent by those present in singing, games and dancing.

Editor Won't Fly.

A despatch to the Kingston Standard from Peterborough says:—"A commercial traveller is said to be planning an aeroplane flight to take place here at an early date, and to carry several passengers, himself included. The editor of one of the newspapers of this city, who says he has been invited to take passage in the coming aeroplane flight, has declined to go." This refers to the editor of the great family journal. Lest there might be those who thinks he is afraid, this great family journal might explain that it is through regard for the dangers of aerial navigation that prompted our chief to decline the honor of ascending heavenward, but in that true spirit of good will and brotherly friendship, which characterized him, he magnanimously decided to pass the honor over to the editors of our local contempraries. Should the aeroplane take a sudden notion to descend without consulting the aviator in charge, he will be on hand to write suitable obituaries.

Zam Buk

"RUB IT IN"

HEALS QUICKLY

SAVES HOURS OF PAIN

A few minutes after Zam-Buk is applied to a cut, a burn, a scratch, or any sore place, the pain is stopped. Mothers should never forget this, because it is one reason why Zam-Buk is the best thing for children's injuries. It stops their crying and gives them ease. Right from the instant of application healing begins, and Zam-Buk heals quickly. Note these statements from reliable persons, some of whom you may know.

Baby's Sore Healed.—"My baby girl had a bad sore on her chin, which was very painful, and caused her to be very restless. We put on some Zam-Buk, and in a wonderfully short time it gave her ease. In a few days the sore was completely healed."
Mrs. E. Cocarn, Yorkton, Sask.

Rusty Nail Pierced Finger.—"I ran a rusty nail under my thumb nail while at work. The pain was terrible and I feared blood-poisoning from the dirty, rusty nail! I melted some Zam-Buk and ran it into the wound, and it stopped the pain almost instantly. It kept away inflammation and in a few days the wound was quite healed."
Mr. A. H. Orth, Shipley, Ont.

A Bad Burn.—"In moving some wood in the stove, I burned my thumb very badly. In a few minutes it was covered with a big white blister, and the pain was very bad. Zam-Buk was applied, and in quick time it gave me ease!"
H. E. Jenner, Organist, Carman, Man.

Take this advice!

If you have some sore place, some skin disease, some cut, or burn or ulcer, why continue to suffer pain? Every hour you suffer is an hour wasted. You cannot do your best work in pain; you cannot enjoy your leisure. Zam-Buk saves far more than it costs, by saving you time in this way.

Zam-Buk is a "short cut" to skin healing. There is nothing which acts so quickly and so surely. Use it for all skin injuries and diseases, Eczema, Ulcers, Blood Poison, etc., and for Piles. All druggists and stores, 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

Deputation to Lindsay.

Lindsay Post—A deputation consisting of the court house engineer and the county property chairman of Peterborough, visited the local court house yesterday to view the heating plant of that institution. It is estimated that in the Peterborough court house they burn coal at the rate of 80 tons in about 74 days. Here the estimate is that 80 tons are consumed in the season of from 7 to 8 months. The Peterborough county council have been of the opinion that too much coal is being used in their plant and are trying to remedy the matter if possible.

Sky Completely Obscured by Clouds of Molten Lava, Mud and Stones.

Manilla, Feb. 1.—The eruption of Mount Taal grew more violent today and for several hours the sky was completely obscured by clouds of molten lava, mud and flying stones. There have been nearly 1,000 distinct shocks.

A report that the city of Manilla is endangered by the activity of the volcano was denied to-day by scientists. The death list is still said to be under 500.

Soldiers worked about the outskirts of the danger zone to-day and unearthed scores of bodies.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

NORTH AMERICAN LIFE

FINE RECORD FOR 1910.

The Thirtieth Annual Meeting of the North American Life Assurance Company was held at its Home Office in Toronto on Thursday, Jan. 26th, 1911, when the report of the business of the year ended Dec. 31st, 1910, was presented.

CASH INCOME.

The cash income for the year from premiums, interest, etc., was $2,177,012.61, showing the satisfactory increase of $147,134.91.

CONSERVATIVE MANAGEMENT

The business continues to be conducted on a conservative and economic basis, the North American Life being among the foremost in this regard.

PAYMENTS TO POLICYHOLDERS

The amount paid on Policyholders' Account was $877,792.31, of which sum $142,764.06 was for surplus or dividends. Considering that the sum of $6,000 only was paid to Guarantors, the preponderance of the Policyholders' interest is apparent.

The large amount of $480,707.85, including surplus and guaranteed reserve, was paid to holders of Deferred Dividend policies.

ASSETS

The assets increased by $808,308.42, and now amount to $11,488,773.32. They continue to be, as heretofore, invested in the best class of securities available, principally in Mortgage Loans and Bonds.

SURPLUS.

After making ample provision for all liabilities and further strengthening the reserves, the net surplus on policy-holders' account was increased to $1,174,768.68.

INSURANCES INCREASED.

The policies issued during the year together with those revived, amounted to the sum of $5,106,049, being an increase over the previous year. The total business in force amounts to $43,391,236.

AUDIT.

A careful and systematic audit was made every month by the Auditors, who also made a thorough scrutiny of all the securities of the Company. In addition a committee, consisting of two Directors, made an independent audit of the securities each quarter.

VOL XXXIV NO. 28 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, FRIDAY FEBRUARY 3, 1911 PRICE TWO CENT

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Clark Hamilton Smith, who was the secretary-treasurer of the provisional board of directors of the wrecked Farmers' Bank is a fugitive from Justice.

A warrant was issued for his arrest this morning by Inspector of Detectives Duncan, and when the detectives arrived at his tives arrived at his offices in the Temple Building it was found that he had left the city.

At the same time a new warrant was issued against Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, the charge being of a similar nature. The warrants read that they did "conspire, confederate and agree, with others, to obtain by false pretenses representations and fraud from or through the treasury board of the Dominion of Canada, the certificate required in order to enable a bank to open for business under the provision of the Bank Act, to the detriment of the public."

Desperately Serious Thing for Dominion

Sir Gilbert Parker Thinks Canada May Lose Her Independence Through American Aggression.

London, Feb. 1.—The Unionists are anxious to raise a fiscal discussion bringing up the reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States.

In speaking of the reciprocity agreement, Sir Gilbert Parker, made the following statement:

"The agreement is a desperately serious thing, and will eventually mean that the Canadians have lost their grip on their own independence. Canada's fight for two generations against American commercial tyranny was the source of her progress and wealth. It gave her energy, resourcefulness and determination, but under this agreement the United States seeks a new field of exploitation for American finance, new opportunities for the overflow of American energy, and control of the great Dominion."

A NEW RECORD IN AEROPLANE.

Eight Passengers Were Carried Whose Combined Weight Was 1,112 Pounds.

Pau, France, Feb. 2.—A four-seated Bleriot monoplane piloted by L. E. Martin, flew over the Pau aerodrome today with eight passengers, whose combined weight was 1,112 pounds. This establishes a new record for the number of passengers carried in an aeroplane.

WILL INCREASE GO TO CHARITY

SUGGESTION THAT M.P.P.'s HAND OVER $400 EACH TO POOR FINDS NO FAVOR.

No Opposition is Likely—The Government Settled the Matter Before Any Caucus Was Called.

Toronto, Feb. 3.—How many members are going to contribute $400 of their sessional indemnity to charity?

The answer is not: "Not many." Some few have committed themselves in opposition to any increase in the indemnity, but it is not very likely that more than one or two will state their objections and less likely that even these will throw the money back at the government or give it to some charity.

"It would be mere grandstand play," said one member who has hitherto opposed increases. "The place to make any opposition was in the caucus and the increase was announced before a Government caucus was held. Now that the increase has been announced by the Government, it would be mere waste of breath to say anything about it."

Some members would like to get up and demand a $500 increase, but it is not likely that any Conservative member will develop sufficient nerve. They would like Hon. A. G. MacKay to do it, but the probability is that the Liberal members will simply stand pat and say nothing. The Government, perhaps, shares the desire to draw Mr. MacKay out, but it may be that, suspecting the fact, Mr. MacKay will be all the more inclined to say nothing.

Mrs. Teasdale Found Dead in Her Bed

Colborne, Feb. 2.—(Special).—At two o'clock this afternoon Mrs. George M. Teasdale, wife of the proprietor of the Bristol Hotel, Colborne, was found dead in her bed by her son.

This is the hotel in which Josephine Brimacomb was recently strangled to death. The proprietor is now in jail for selling liquor illegally. It is a strange coincidence that Mrs. Brimacomb a sister-in-law of the murdered girl, slept last night with Mrs. Teasdale, but she is not under suspicion.

Yesterday Mrs. Teasdale visited her husband in Cobourg. She was apparently in good health when she returned. This morning her son looked into her room and his mother was apparently sleeping. At two o'clock this afternoon he found her dead.

The coroner is now at the hotel, and an inquest will be held.

THE HURRY CALL HAS GONE FORTH

Democrats Urged to Call State Caucuses to Consider Reciprocity.

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, Feb. 2.—Champ Clark has sent out hurry calls to the Democratic representatives, requesting them to state their caucuses on the subject of Canadian reciprocity. Many of the Southern Democrats, however, intend to ignore his call and disregard him as minority leader.

Says Winnipeg is Greatly Maligned

Hon. T. M. Daly, Magistrate, Is in Toronto To-day — Winnipeg a Clean City.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—"We consider that our city is one of the cleanest on the continent, morally, as well as in the matter of its streets, health department, and physical conditions generally," said Hon. T. Mayne Daly, Winnipeg's Police Magistrate, in the course of an interview this morning.

"Has there been any improvement in the city's moral tone as a result of the recent investigation, and various arraignments of the segregation policy?" was asked.

"I think not. Winnipeg's morals have always been the very best. The reports that you have heard down this way about alleged conditions with us have been very highly colored and exaggerated. Our police force is efficient, the city's sanitation is good, and as I have said, our morals compare very favorably with those of the best cities in this and other countries."

Hon. Mr. Daly had left Winnipeg before the announcement of the proposed trade treaty, so could not say how it was being received in the Middle West. He had been in Chicago when the proposals were made public, and stated that the matter appeared to arouse little or no general interest there. Even the newspapers made little mention of the issue.

Mr. Daly will return to his home in Winnipeg in a couple of days. He is in Toronto on purely private business.

BLOOD-POISONING AFTER A CUT.

Zam-Buk Saved His Finger.

Mr. Albert Brennan, butcher, of 141 Lindsay Ave., Toronto, has good cause to be thankful for Zam-Buk! While at work, he cut the middle finger of the left hand rather badly, but did not think that any serious consequences would follow. Some disease germs—of which the air is full—entered the wound, however, and next day the finger was swollen and painful. He bathed it in hot water and applied some ordinary ointment, but the pain got worse, and the swelling continued. Not only so, but the area of the inflammation extended, until from the finger to the elbow it was inflamed and sore, and he knew that blood-poisoning had set in. He had to give up his ordinary work and suffered acute pain.

Finally he decided to enter St. Michael's Hospital, but just before doing so, having mentioned the intention to a friend, the latter advised him to try Zam-Buk. Mr. Brennan acted on this advice, and soon proved Zam-Buk's great value. He says: "It cured the pain almost as soon as applied, and within a day of first commencing the Zam-Buk treatment, I was back at work! Of course, I don't mean that in that time the wound was healed, but the pain had gone and the danger from blood-poisoning was averted. After that, healing was only a matter of a short time under the beneficial operation of Zam-Buk. I have no hesitation in saying that Zam-Buk saved my finger, and I am very glad to let you state these simple facts publicly, in the interests of other workers, liable to similar accidents."

Zam-Buk is equally effective for piles, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, ring-worm, children's rashes, scalp sores, chapped hands, frost bite, and cold sores. Every housewife should keep a supply handy, and no mother should be without it in the home. Sold by all druggists and stores, 50c box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse substitutes.

Whitney will Not Press the Measure

Premier Has Discussed the Matter With the Hydro-Electric Engineers.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Sir James Whitney announced in the Legislature this afternoon that he would not press his bill to take away from the hydro-electric supervision of electric power distribution plants. He said that he had discussed the matter with several engineers connected with the hydro-electric scheme and they had pointed out difficulties in connection with the proposed transfer of jurisdiction. He did not, therefore, propose to press the bill.

THE WEATHER

Fine and cold.

Should Prepare for War at Any Time

Washington, Feb. 2.—Ridiculing the war scare, but emphasizing the policy of maintaining a state of preparedness for war and censuring the school boards everywhere, which have opposed military exercises as a part of the school curriculum, and have discouraged the use of firearms among the pupils, Major-General Leonard A. Wood, U.S.A., spoke before several hundred guests of the Loyal Legion of Honor, at its annual banquet last night.

"It is ridiculous to talk of the United States being in danger of conflict with any nation," he said, "but perhaps such talk does more good than harm after all. It would be well to talk continually if it would inspire the American people generally with the importance of getting busy and placing both our army and navy upon a plan that would make them reasonably ready and prepared for war."

It is 1,080 feet long, 280 feet high and contains 326,000 cubic yards of masonry.

The reservoir will have a capacity of 56,628,000,000 cubic feet of water, which will be used to irrigate 240,000 acres of land.

The dam has been nearly six years in building and will cost the government about $8,540,000.

The location of the dam and reservoir is in the Salt River Valley, about seventy miles northwest of Phoenix, Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 2.—The Roosevelt dam, the stupendous engineering work in connection with the Salt River irrigation project, is completed and will be formally opened next month by former President Roosevelt in honor of whom the dam was named. Preparations already are under way to make the opening a gala occasion. The event will be attended by representatives of the national government, public officials of Arizona and neighboring States and by many eminent engineers.

The dam is regarded as one of the marvels of modern engineering. Located in an almost inaccessible canyon, about seventy miles northwest of this city and sixty miles from the nearest railroad, its rapid and successful construction has been watched with interest by engineers all over the world.

At the point where the dam crosses the Salt River the stream runs through a narrow gorge, across which the huge barrier of stone and cement stretches to a length of 1,080 feet. The dam is 280 feet high, or about the height of the Flatiron building in New York. On top its length is equal to that of two city blocks, and provides a roadway twenty feet wide. The dam contains 326,000 cubic yards of masonry. The blocks of stone were blasted from the canyon walls and the hundreds of thousands of barrels of cement used in the construction was manufactured by the Government in a mill erected on the ground.

Behind this imposing structure of stone and cement the waters of the turbulent stream will form the largest artificial lake in the world. The great reservoir will be twenty-five miles long and more than 220 feet deep against the dam. It will have a capacity of 56,628,000 cubic feet, or sufficient water to cover the State of Delaware a foot deep.

The reservoir will irrigate 240,000 acres of land and it is estimated by expert agriculturists that the crops of a single season will pay for the entire investment of the government, which has been about $8,540,000. Not only will the great dam save up the water for the dried fields, but it will also light the farmers' homes, give them the power for their telephone lines, run their mills and factories and also operate lines of railway if desired. All of this will be done through the medium of a great power-house which the Government has erected at the base of the dam, and which will be used to convert the waterfall into electricity.

The completion of the dam is expected to result in the influx of thousands of farmers to the valley and this in turn will create a demand for all classes of labor. The whole project is a part of the Government's great irrigation service, which, as some one has said, "is making the dry places wet and the wet places dry." In a most wonderful way the various irrigation projects in Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Colorado and other sections of the West are rapidly changing the country from a land of sagebrush and cactus to one of prosperous farms and flourishing towns.

Of all the projects of the kind yet undertaken by the U. S. Government the Roosevelt dam is the largest in point of dimensions. It is about twenty-five feet higher than the famous Shoshone dam in northwestern Wyoming, which is the largest structure of its kind completed up to the present time. The natural difficulties presented in the construction of the Shoshone dam were, however, much greater than in the Roosevelt project.

The Hobo Convention Was a Dead Failure

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 3.—Though this was the date fixed for the meeting in this city of the national convention of "hoboes", there was no outward evidence to show that any considerable number of delegates arrived to attend the gathering. The convention was called by J. Eads How, the so-called millionaire tramp who is president of the Brotherhood Welfare Association. The announced purpose of the convention was to discuss the momentous problem, "Does It Pay to Work?"

Plans for the convention have been going forward for some time and considerable disappointment was expressed over the failure of the delegates to show up. Various reasons for the lack of attendance were advanced. It was generally agreed that President How made a mistake in calling the convention for this time of year. It is a well-known fact that the "casual laborers", with which official appellation they have been dignified by the American Federation of Labor, stick fast to the large cities during the winter months. Then, again, the call for the gathering was not issued far enough ahead of time. With walking practically impossible, and freight trains stalled in the snow it is hardly to be expected that the delegates from distant parts of the country could arrive in the convention city on time.

The reason Milwaukee was chosen for the convention city was because of "hoboes" believed socialist Mayor Seidel would prove more sympathetic than the mayor of Kansas City, where the last convention was held. He placed the delegates in the "undesirable citizen" class, and opened the police stations for their reception instead of the hotels.

PHYSICIAN KILLED SCORES OF PEOPLE

St. Petersburg, Feb. 2.—There was an unusual occurrence at today's session of the trial for murder of Count O'Brien de Lassy and the notorious prisoner, Dr. Pantchenko, the latter being called upon to plead a second time. He pleaded guilty as before.

The police say the doctor has killed at least forty people for various sums paid him to commit murder.

The Count is accused of having employed the doctor to murder his brother-in-law, Count Nassilli Bouturlin, the heir to estates of an estimated value of $3,500,000 in order that the property might be inherited by Countess De Lassy.

Pantchenko confessed his guilt but set up the defence that he committed the crime while under the hypnotic influence of the Count. As the trial progressed he wavered in matters of detail and his lawyers were quick to strengthen his original defence by declaring to the court that their client was still under the influence of the Count to such an extent that he was little by little retracting the vital points of his confession.

To-day the public prosecutor took cognizance of the situation and after referring to the proximity of the prisoners in the dock made a motion that the cardinal question of his guilt or innocense be proposed again to Pantchenko. He said that the replies of the prisoner had been unsatisfactory throughout his examination. The court granted the motion and the formal question of the indictment was again read.

ADMITTED GUILT AGAIN.

Once more, the aged physician replied that he was guilty of Bouturlin's death.

Asked whether he had administered poison to his victim, Pantchenko demurred, saying, that he would answer that question after the data of the medical experts who had made the post mortem had been presented in court. He explained that he did not sterilize his hypodermic syringe after he had sent some one on the way to the grave, because the sperme preparation diminished in effectiveness when the syringe was sterilized.

A WHOLESALE POISONER.

The whole empire is interested in the case because of the wholesale confession made by Pantchenko. Every mysterious death of recent years is recalled and there are rumors that the poisoner may have been engaged to cause the death of members of the royal family. He has admitted that he made a business of killing for hire, heirs, rivals in love, impatient creditors, and in fact, any undesirable person whose enemy was prepared to pay liberally for their sudden taking off.

The poison doctor, according to the police, has admitted some forty deaths, his fees running as high as $250,000 for a single assassination. His method was to inoculate the patient with cholera bacilli, after he had been called to the bedside in his professional capacity. Ordinarily it was necessary that the proposed victim should be caught while indisposed and some ruse adopted to bring about Pantchenko's attendance. He is now credited by some with having originated the cholera epidemic of a few years ago.

HAD STANDING IN SOCIETY.

The doctor is seventy years of age and appears to have had some standing in society, despite his real profession. Count de Lassy is a young man of Irish descent. The woman in the case is Madame Muravieff, with whom Pantchenko lodged and to whom he says he turned over his earnings. She figures in the trial as an alleged accomplice.

De Lassy is a cousin of Countess Tarnovska, who is serving a prison term in Italy for complicity in the murder of her fiance, Count Komarowski.

Count Bouturlin was twenty-six years of age, the son of General Bouturlin, whose family is one of the oldest and wealthiest in Russia. Pantchenko says that in the case of his latest killing he used diptheria bacilli. For the murder he admitted he was paid by De Lassy, but on the witness stand he has failed to repeat his admissions on certain points for the reason, that he is still under the spell of his co-defendant.

When a child is in danger a woman will risk her life to protect it. No great act of heroism or risk of life is necessary to protect a child from croup. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and all danger is avoided. For Sale by all dealers.

THIRTY MEN WERE BLOWN TO ATOMS

500 BODIES CREMATED.

WILL ASK FOR A VOTE ON TARIFF

OPPOSITION WILL LIKELY DEMAND DISSOLUTION ON THE QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT.

Liberals are Not Afraid—Believe They Would Sweep the Country If Put to a Proper Vote.

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—The Conservative party is struggling with the reciprocity issue, and it is quite apparently finding it a hard nut to crack. The party met in caucus last night soon after eight, and remained behind closed doors until after midnight, then adjourned to meet again this morning, and rising at one o'clock, with the announcement that another meeting will be held to-morrow.

It is well known that there are serious differences of opinion upon the question. The members from the Prairie Provinces want the agreement supported as do also some of the Conservatives from the Maritime Provinces, but the men from Montreal, Toronto, and from some constituencies in Ontario want the proposals opposed with the full vigor of the party.

It seems probable that the form which the Opposition policy will take will be a demand for an immediate dissolution of Parliament in order to ascertain the feeling of the country on the question, and while it has been generally understood that the policy of the Government was not to go to the country till after the redistribution of next year, there are many Liberals who would favor a dissolution, believing that such a step would result in a sweeping Liberal victory. Indeed, it is confidently predicted that with such an issue the Liberals would repeat the trick of 1904 and capture, the whole eighteen seats in Nova Scotia, the four in Prince Edward Island, at least twelve in New Brunswick, and most of the seats outside Montreal in Quebec would make many gains in Ontario, and would sweep the West except, perhaps, British Columbia.

Veteran of British Army Mortally Wounds a Friend.

Vancouver, Feb. 1.—About 11 o'clock last night in front of the Wonder Cafe, Carroll-street, John Flax of Montreal, a young man, 23 years of age, was shot down by Alfred Rowach, a veteran of the British army. No enmity had existed between the two; it was purely and simply the sudden and unaccountable act of a brain crazed with bad whiskey.

Flax had been in the city less than a year, and the affray took place on the eve of his departure for home. Doctor says there is little hope for his recovery.

"Dominion Gold Mines Limited," Montreal Concern.

Montreal gentlemen are developing what will probably develop into a profitable and steadily productive gold mining proposition in the well-known Thunder Bay district in Ontario. A good deal of prosperity has been done upon six claims at Sturgeon Lake with results which, according to the assaying records, are encouraging, to say the least of it.

The claims cover a surface of 220 acres upon which several veins have been discovered, two of them running from two to five feet in width. In some cases the formation discloses porphyritic dykes 150 feet wide, of the character familiar to the copper mines, and gold outcroppings in Utah and Nevada, and also in the South Superior district. These dykes run into copper pyrites, in which apparently the gold values have been found. The pyrites contain sufficient copper ore to make it an object to prevent its loss at the mills, which is of course easily accomplished by modern methods.

But the gold itself is there indubitably. Dr. J. I. Donald, Government analyst, finds values running very high in some samples, but taking an average of those not so emphatically "high grade," would assign a value of between $17 and $60 to the ton, or, say, $40 a ton to all the veins!

Remembering that the lately published statement of a recognized world authority, told of the possibility of mining lucratively, ore running $7 or less to the ton, this scientific opinion expressed by Dr. Donald must be considered to be valuable.

The Montreal company operating the Dominion Gold Mines, is incorporated at $2,000,000, and has Mr. James Robinson as president, and Messrs. W. L. Teeson & Co. as fiscal agents.

In times past, Montreal has mined many of the good things going in the mining world, and it is satisfactory to find that in gold mining propositions everything promising is not being allowed to pass into the hands of the enterprising gentlemen to the south of the boundary.

TWENTY-THREE ARE SIMPLY RECORDED BY NEW YORK AUTHORITIES AS MISSING.

Statue of Liberty Well Shaken—Law Restricting Amount of Explosives Carried, Grossly Violated.

New York, Feb. 2.—Three separate investigations were started this morning to fix the responsibility for the dynamite explosion in New York harbor yesterday, which killed at least thirty persons and more or less injured several hundred more. One will be conducted by a coroner's jury under Coroner James M. Houghton of Jersey City, another by Inspector of Combustibles James M. Connelly of Jersey City, and a third by Public Prosecutor Pierre Garvin, of Hudson County, N.J.

BLOWN TO ATOMS

Definite estimates of the number of dead are still impossible. The total dead and missing is thirty. The list of dead in the hands of the coroner includes only seven names, but it is that official's belief that most of the 23 men whom he classes as "missing," were blown to atoms.

The property loss according to various official estimates, will be between $750,000 and $1,000,000. The heaviest sufferer in this respect is the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at whose docks the disaster occurred. Vice-President Besler sets the railroads loss at about $200,000. The United States Government is also a heavy loser, with $50,000 damage at Ellis Island, and an additional $10,000, or $15,000 at the Army Headquarters on Governor's Island and Bedloe's Island, where the Statue of Liberty was shaken bare of many windows and big electric lights.

TWENTY-FIVE TONS EXPLODED.

The blast was probably the largest explosion of dynamite that has ever occurred anywhere, intentionally or by accident. Fifty thousand pounds went up in the singe detonation. There was a marvelous escape, however, from a much bigger disaster, for there was another 50,000 pounds standing on the siding within a 100 feet of the pier-end, which stood unexploded through all the tumult. The cars which contained it were twisted and torn and the boxes were strewn on every side, but the dynamite, thick with dust and debris of the explosion, was unharmed and intact in its paper coverings.

LAW FLAGRANTLY VIOLATED

Criminal prosecution as well as civil actions for damages may be begun against the Powder Trust officials responsible for the presence on the Jersey City pier of the dynamite. Flagrant violation of the New Jersey law and the Jersey City statutes are charged to-day by the prosecuting authorities, and the feeling of resentment against those responsible is so bitter that Prosecuting Attorney Garvin, of Hudson County, and the Supreme Court officials are being urged on all sides to-day to invoke the speediest of Jersey justice in punishing every person in any way responsible.

So impressed with the feeling in the community was Prosecutor Garvin, that he took all the evidence so far secured before the sitting Grand Jury to-day, and the body at once began a preliminary investigation of the disaster.

The authorities admitted that they had no positive knowledge of the number of dead. Two bodies and portions of a third are at the morgue. Capt. Robert Barnett, of the tug John Twohey, died in the Jersey City Hospital, while up to the present time no trace has been found of the Captain and crew of six of the barge Catherine W., on which the explosion took place, or of the three men known to have been on the lighter Hustler, which sank after the explosion. Railroad officials believe there were twelve laborers working about the dynamite laden cars and say that

UNION LABEL

FRIDAY FEBRUARY 3, 1911.

ONE OR TWO ASSESSORS?

It is said that the City Council proposes to appoint one assessor instead of two, as has been the custom in the past. This will, in our judgment, be a step in the right direction so long as a good man is secured. It has been an open secret for many years that one assessor has practically done the work. It would be better to pay one good man a decent salary, and make him responsible, than two poorly paid men, no matter how capable they may be, who would rush the work through in order to save time and get at other work. The council will deal with the matter on Monday night.

CANADA'S BANKS.

In 1869 Canada possessed twenty-seven chartered banks; in 1889, forty-two banks; in 1909, thirty banks; and to-day it has twenty-seven banks. These striking figures illustrate the tendency during two decades to increase banking facilities by the creation of new banks and the complete reversal of that policy during the past twenty years in the concentration of banking strength in several large institutions. The past year has been one of important changes in bank spheres. The two most unfortunate events were the failure of the St. Stephen Bank, of St. Stephen, N.B., which was later purchased by the Bank of British North America, and the suspension of the Farmers' Bank. The Bank of Winnipeg's charter lapsed after a time extension, and the Bank of Vancouver commenced business. The Weyburn Security Bank obtained its certificate from the treasury board and commenced business early this year. The Royal Bank absorbed the Union Bank of Halifax, and the Union Bank of Canada will take over the United Empire Bank. This is not the end of bank amalgamations. Other banks have discussed for several months past the possibility and advisability of union. When the present year has passed, it may be that the number of Canada's chartered banks will have been reduced by amalgamations to twenty-three or even twenty-one.

MOTHER EARTH'S HOROSCOPE.

M. Camille Flammarion, the distinguished French astrologer, recently cast Mother Earth's horoscope for the next 1000 years. Here are a few of the things he said: Your family is to grow in 1000 years from 1,450,000,000 to 3,360,000,000. You are now troubled with the servant girl problem. Have no fear. In 1000 years there will be no servants. All housework will be done by trained orang-utans or chimpanzees. You have some trouble with indigestion, have you not? Abandon all anxiety in 1000 years chemical synthesis will have done away with all cooking of elaborate dishes, and men and women will entertain themselves in conservatories, the banquet consisting of compressed viands or delicacies served on silver trays, the tabloid meltings in one's mouth and doing away with the necessity of vulgar mastication. There will be one universal currency, and in 1000 years weather will be foretold to a raindrop, a snowflake, or a ray of sunshine.

No doubt Mother Earth smiled. Elderly women usually smile when the fortune teller tells them something nice. But few of her family will echo her approval. To think that in 1000 years there will be an amiable orang utan to shake the furnace and peel the potatoes and ask no salary per week, that all chewing will be abolished, and the weather prophets will prophesy correctly, only tends to make the human being inconsolably discontented with a life that extends less than nine or ten hundred years.

J. Pierrpont Morgan has started for Europe, but Wall street need not act like a boy on a vacation. His boss will keep himself informed by wireless.

Workmen who are draping the nude statue of Adam in Pennsylvania capitol have a precedent in the actions of the father of the race himself.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

Fulton was surprised, but he laughed lightly.

"Every one to his taste," he said; "but from what little I have seen of Malcolm I should wager that nine out of ten letters addressed to the Mayne family would be intended for you, Miss Winifred. By the way, a word in your ear. General Inglis hopes to persuade our friend here to try his luck on a return journey to-night. Perhaps you may have a note to send on your own account. No one else must know. This is a special favor, conferred because Malcolm himself procured Ungud's services, but we can not ask the man to act as general postman. Good-by."

He hurried away. Winifred, after the manner of woman, fingered the unopened letter.

"Kuch joab hai, miss-sahib?" asked Ungud.

"There is no answer—yet. I will give you one later."

The girl's Hindustani went far enough to enable her to frame the reply intelligibly. Ungud salaamed and left her, probably contrasting in his own mind the lady's frigidity with the fervid instructions given him by the officer-sahib.

Then Winifred went to her own room and opened her own letter, and her woman's heart gleaned the truth from its candor. Of course she cried. What girl wouldn't? But she smiled through her tears and read the nice bits over and over again. Not for twenty necklaces and a whole file of hieroglyphic passes would she doubt Frank any more.

The reference to Chumru puzzled her, and that was a gratifying thing in itself, for if Frank could be mistaken about her share in Chumru's departure from Lucknow, why should not she be wrong in her interpretation of the mysterious presence of the necklace?

When her uncle came she wept again, being hysterical with the sheer joy of watching his face while he perused Frank's note.

A man's bewilderment finds different expression to a woman's. A man trusts his brain, a woman her heart.

"If there is one thing absolutely clear in this letter it is that Frank knows nothing whatever about the pearls you produced from his turban," said Mr. Mayne, with the frown of a judge who is dealing with a knotty point in equity.

"There are—several things—quite clear in it—to me," fluttered Winifred.

"Ah, hum, yes. But I mean that it is ridiculous to suppose he would knowingly leave such a valuable article exposed to the chances and changes of barrack-room life in a siege. Whatever motive he may have had in concealing the necklace earlier he would surely have said something about it now, given some hint as to its value, asked you to take care of his baggage, or something of the sort."

"In my heart of hearts I always felt that we were misjudging Frank," said she.

Mayne's eyebrows lifted a trifle, but he passed no comment.

"By the way," he said, "where is the necklace?"

"Here," she said, pulling a box out of a cupboard. The string of pearls was coiled up in the midst of the roll of soiled muslin and the badge was pinned to one of the folds.

"That is a very unsafe place," said Mayne. "If I were you I would wear it beneath your bodice."

"Would you really?"

"Yes. I can think of no other explanation of the mystery now than that Frank meant to surprise you with it. You may be sure he obtained it honorably, so you will only be meeting his wishes by wearing it. At any rate it will be safer in your possession than in that cupboard.

"Perhaps you are right," said she. And while she clasped the diamond-studded brooch in front of her white throat she glanced round the room for a mirror.

Her uncle smiled. He was glad that this little cloud had lifted off Winifred's sky. The sufferings and positive dangers of the siege were bad enough already without being added to by a private grief.

He stooped to pick up the turban and his eye fell on the regimental device of the metal badge.

"This is not an officer's head-dress," he cried. "And Malcolm belongs to the 3rd Cavalry, whereas this badge was worn by a trooper in the 2nd."

Winifred, who was turning her neck and shoulders this way and that to get different angles of light, stopped admiring herself and ran to his side.

"That is the turban Frank wore during our ride from Cawnpore," she whispered breathlessly.

"It may be. But don't you remember that he was bareheaded when we met him in Nana Sahib's garden? I was knocked almost insensible during the fight for the boat so I am not sure what happened during the next few minutes. Nevertheless, I can recall that prior fact beyond cavil. If it were not for the safe-conduct you found at the same time as the pearls, I would incline strongly to the belief that Frank obtained this turban by accident, and is wholly ignorant of its extraordinary contents."

"I must write at once and tell him how sorry I am that I misjudged him."

"You dear little goose," cried her uncle amusedly, "Frank will begin to wonder then what the judging was about. No. Wait until you meet. Write, by all means, but leave problems for settlement during your first tete-a-tete."

So Ungud carried in his turban a loving and sympathetic note, which Winifred, with no small pride, addressed to "Major Frank Malcolm, Headquarters Staff, British Field Force, Cawnpore," and she said inside, among other things, that she hoped this would prove to be the first letter he received with the inscription of his new rank.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

COW VS. AUTOMOBILE

A Humorous Comparison, With a Preference for the Bovine

A Kansas City man who has owned an automobile for a year offers to trade it for a cow. This is encouraging, in showing that the "back-to-the-farm" propaganda is taking hold where it ought to. A whole lot of people own automobiles who would be better off with cows. No civilization will ever outlive the gentle and mild-eyed sister of the ox. The world sucks its life from her udder, and poetry, commerce and statescraft subsist by reason of her ministrations. She is the dumb and inarticulate savior of little children, the friend of tottering age, and the fountain of healing to the sick. You don't have to wind her up to make her work, or pour her full of grief when she gets hot.

She doesn't smell like an oil refinery, and you don't have to get down under her with a monkey-wrench every half mile to screw up something that has worked loose. Her spark plug is always in working order and her tires are punctureless. She never "blows" out, and your wife can run her as well as a hired chauffeur.

She is more beautiful than many [illegible] and more beautiful to behold than the pictures in the Saturday Evening Post. She encourages domestic tranquility and makes for [illegible] and chastity. No man who owned and operated a cow was ever [illegible] or [illegible] to find that his wife had run off the dog and gone with the chauffeur.

The smell of [illegible] exhausts displeasingly, but the fragrance of fresh new milk awakens visions of peace, virtue and a holy content. It carries with it the breath of clover fields and the music of the voices of happy women and joyous little children hedged in by love and purity. A cow shed is the open door to paradise guarded by good genii, and the garage is often a sliding panel to the infernal regions. The two of them, the cow and the automobile, stand at the opposite poles of our civilization, and the choice we make is going to determine the destiny of a people. The announcement from Kansas City indicates a return to safety and sanity.—Paris Mercury.

KAISER AS A DOCTOR

Many of His Subjects Desire to Consult Him

It was recently stated by "The London Globe" that the Kaiser had received the degree of M.D. "honoris causa" from the University of Prague. In Germany, we are told by a Paris paper, people take things in earnest, but he writer, who does not add that his confreres frequently draw upon their imagination, proceeds to relate an amusing incident relative to the Kaiser's honor. The other morning the Kaiser was inspecting one of his many regiments of which he is colonel-in-chief. One soldier fell out of the ranks, approached his Majesty, saluted, went back to his place, and put out his tongue. "What has he to say?" demanded the Emperor. "The man is wanting in respect." "No, sire," replied the soldier. "I am unwell, and respectfully ask your Majesty to prescribe for me." The fame of the new doctor of Prague University, who, by the irony of events, had to sign his name in the album immediately after that of the great—in every sense—opponent of Bismarchian policy, Virchow, has spread beyond the army. Outside the Palace at Potsdam, as soon as it was known that the Kaiser had become a doctor, crowds of the maimed, the halt, and the blind lined up, reminding one of the scenes outside a dispensary. Some even offered to pay a fee for the Kaiser's diagnosis. The Emperor was not only embarrassed, but annoyed, so he ordered the following notice to be put up: "The doctorate in medicine conferred upon the Kaiser is simply an honorary distinction, so his Majesty does not undertake the care of the sick either gratuitously or otherwise."

IRISH MIGRATION

A Parliamentary return of the migration of Irish agricultural laborers states that it is estimated that approximately 20,500 laborers went for temporary employment to England and Scotland in 1909. The estimated number in 1908 was 22,500, and that figure showed a decrease compared with the years immediately preceding. Of the total of 20,500, at least 500 or 600 were women.

COOLING OF MILK IS WORTH WHILE

A most interesting and conclusive experiment on the value of cooling the milk to a proper temperature was this summer made in a Lansdowne factory. The facts were given to an Ottawa reporter by a well-known Lansdowne farmer. The test was carried on for the month of August during the hot weather.

Ten patrons of the factory solemnly agreed to cool their milk to under 70 degrees, and have the cheese from it made in a separate vat. The [illegible] cheese was to be kept and marked separate from the rest of the cheese made from the milk delivered by the other patrons and cooled [illegible]. The cheese were sold at exactly the same price as the rest of the cheese.

The results were almost startling. The increased yield of cheese from the milk cooled below 70 degrees netted 5 cents per hundred pounds of milk more than the cheese from the milk delivered as ordinary, and this, too after paying the maker one dollar a day extra for making up the milk in a separate vat. The result was so convincing that other patrons were anxious to come into line and it is quite probable that next season will see all the milk delivered at that factory cooled to under 70 degrees.

The reporter was informed that it was the intention of the district inspector to publish to sworn statement of the facts and results of the test.

HIRED HELP IS SCARCE

Eastern Ontario Farmers Wait on Government for Aid

The question of hired help is a serious one for the farmers of Ontario. A deputation appointed by the Farmers' Institute of Leeds and Lansdowne recently waited on the immigration authorities to see what steps should be taken to secure efficient hired laborers. In brief, they were informed that the help secured by the immigration officers is secured in the old country practically by order and demand, and laborers are not brought out by them to this country at haphazard. The deputation was told that they would have to specify what they wanted, how many laborers, for what kind of work whether for yearly or only temporary employment, wages, and where situated. An effort would then be made by the immigration officers in the old country to meet their demand. Efficient hired help to be secured in Great Britain is not at all too plentiful and it was stated that only seven per cent. of the population are farmers.

HOW HORSES SLEEP

Many Sleep Standing—Others Lie Down—How They Get Up

Did you ever notice how horses sleep? Well, they don't all sleep one way, by any means. Some, in fact, a good many, sleep standing, and rarely lie down. Such a one you may approach and almost touch before he wakes up, if you come at the right time and without much noise. Others lie down, but not all one way. Usually they will settle back and drop over on one hip first. In rising they will put one front foot first and then the other, bringing up the hind parts last.

But some horses get up and down "cow fashion"—that is, they will get on their fore-nees first. Such a one may always be told by the dirty condition of his knees.

EARTHING UP CELERY

Earthing up celery is one of the main requirements necessary to make it toothsome. If unearthed the stalks are green and tough; if earthed they are blanched and crisp. In the former state it is good for nothing; in the latter it is choice and peculiarly nice. Earthing up must, therefore, not be omitted, and it should all be done before frost occurs, as if exposed then it will be injured, while earthing is a protection. Gather the leaves of each plant closely together near the top. Put a tie round them all. Break the soil along the sides down line. Push it in between the plants with the spade; then press it round each with the hands, and take the tie off. Be sure that not a particle of soil is allowed to fall into the centre.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it ? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER : THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say : "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

none has since been seen. However, there has been no official report of any missing outside of the crew of the lighters and the other known dead.

WHAT THE LAW SAYS.

Many officials who say the powder trust was primarily responsible also express the belief that there was carelessness on the part of the railway officials. The New Jersey State law on the handling of explosives is emphatic. It provides that dynamite shall be transported only under an official permit, and that not more than 5,000 pounds shall be handled at any one time. Inasmuch as 25 tons exploded yesterday, and more than twice that amount failed to detonate, it is argued that the railroad company could hardly have been in ignorance of the fact that the law had been violated.

In this connection Prosecutor Garvin said to-day :

"The law of New Jersey is sufficient to punish the guilty in this case, and whether he is the highest official of the corporation, or a street laborer, he will be punished. There is no chance for mercy in this case."

Most of the injured in the New Jersey and Manhattan Hospitals are reported as doing well to-day, and all but three or four will recover.

EFFECTS OF DYNAMITE.

The lighter receiving the dynamite, the Katherine W., owned by James Healing, of Jersey City, vanished utterly with her crew of seven men, including the master, Edward Traver. Alongside the lighter Whitler, owned by the American Storage and Delivery Company, of New York, was so badly shattered that she sank with her crew of two, while the Swedish steel barkentine Ingrid, a stone's throw to the south, was stripped of her rigging, and the lives of two deckhands aboard snuffed out. Fragments of one man's head was found swinging high on a tangled piece of rope.

The Jersey City Central terminal was wrecked and three ferry boats in the slips smashed into splinters. Lower Manhattan across the river was shaken from the street level to the top of the Singer tower, while severe damage was also done in Brooklyn, Staten Island, and the immigration detention station Ellis Island. The shock was felt on Long Island in Amityville, thirty-five miles distant, and in New Jersey at Long Branch, forty miles distant.

A PUFF OF DUST.

The freight car went up in a puff of dust. On the rear deck of the barkentine Ingrid were found a pair of iron trucks. They may be the trucks of the dynamite car or of one of the other four cars standing near, that were also torn to bits.

For 100 feet the pier-end itself was utterly demolished. The planking seemed to have been ground to powder. The few splinters left were utterly inadequate account of its bulky substance. Girders, planking, cross-stays, all the massive framework of a pier built to uphold locomotives and loaded trains, were mere nullity. Over the broken edges twisted the rails of the track. Steel gondola cars on the southermost track looked like an old hat that had been used by boys for football.

All about were strange freaks of the explosion. One freight car had the roof blown inward, as if it had been crushed by a fallen boulder, but the sides were untouched. The iron sheathing of the freight house on pier 6, to the north, were pushed inward on the side nearest the explosion and outward on the farthest side.

Tenders Called for Vessels for Navy

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—The Government has called for tenders for the construction of ten new vessels of the Canadian navy, contemplated in the initial building program, viz., four Bristols and six destroyers of the latest improved type. The plans and specifications are, as has already been stated, based on the plans received from the Admiralty last fall, and embrace the very latest advances in naval science. The tenders are not publicly advertised, since following the rule of the Admiralty, details have to be kept secret, and only firms in whom the department has confidence and who might be bona fide tenderers, will have access thereto.

Letters have been sent to all the leading British and Canadian firms who are in a position to tender, inviting them to inspect the plans and put in tenders. It is stipulated that all the vessels must be built in Canada. Tenders must be in by April next. When submitted they will be gone over by the experts of the Naval Department and probably some time must elapse then before a decision is reached as to which tender shall be accepted, all the conditions being considered.

As an evidence of the fact that there is to be no patronage list nor any opportunity for graft in the purchase of supplies, etc., in the Naval Department, it may be noted that in calling for tenders for any supplies, the department communicates with all Canadian manufacturers dealing in the items in question. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association was first communicated with, with a view to obtaining the names of all the Canadian manufacturers of the articles required by the department. On the advice of the Association the department adopted the Canadian trade index, a book published by the Manufacturers' Association, which contains the names of practically all Canadian manufacturers as its "patronage." Thus no distinction whatever is made between Conservative or Liberal firms in the matter of being invited to tender.

Deputation to Lindsay.

Lindsay Post—A deputation consisting of the court house engineer and the county property chairman of Peterborough, visited the local court house yesterday to view the heating plant of that institution. It is estimated that in the Peterborough court house they burn coal at the rate of 80 tons in about 74 days. Here the estimate is that 80 tons are consumed in the season of from 7 to 8 months. The Peterborough county council have been of the opinion that too much coal is being used in their plant and are trying to remedy the matter if possible.

VOL. XXXIV NO. 29 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, SATURDAY FEBRUARY 4, 1911 PRICE TWO CENT

A BANK MANAGER BLEW OUT HIS BRAINS

WAS MARRIED ONLY TWO WEEKS HIS HOME IS IN WOODVILLE, ONT.

Books Are Alright Head Officials State—Family Had Been Notified That He Died Suddenly.

After having been married only thirteen days, A. J. Ferguson, manager of the branch of the Dominion Bank at Hanley, Sask., blew out his brains last night.

A despatch says that the inspector of the bank had just arrived in that town and that Ferguson was "worried."

That was all the explanation that accompanied the announcement of the fatality as received in this city—one that has terminated so sadly the romance of two blighted lives.

General Manager Bogert said that Ferguson came from Woodville, Ont., and in an effort to secure additional particulars, Mr. Edward Weeks, manager of R. Edwards and Company, private Bankers, was called on the long-distance telephone.

EARLY BANKING EXPERIENCE.

"I am very sorry to hear those details," said Mr. Weeks, when the situation had been explained to him. "Young Ferguson was with me for seven years; it was under me that he obtained his first knowledge of banking."

"About four years ago he went to Winnipeg, where he joined the Dominion Bank forces. He was very bright and apt—a young man of much ability and promise—and it was not a great while before he was given an agency.

"The circumstances surrounding his death are particularly sad. He was only married two weeks ago, and he was to have brought his bride here to visit his mother during the course of the honeymoon. He was expected by her fully a week ago, and when he did not appear and had sent no word, she was the prey of much anxiety.

WOODVILLE IN MOURNING.

"Everyone here has expressed regret over his death, for he was a great favorite. They will now regret a great deal more the circumstances attending his death. The only word that came to his mother here that he had died suddenly."

"Is his father living?" he was asked.

"No," answered Mr. Weeks. "His father, Norman Ferguson, died six years ago. Mr. Ferguson, the elder, was a contractor."

"Do you know of anything that would induce him to end his life?"

"I can think of no reason. When he was in Woodville he lived a most exemplary life. He attended the Presbyterian Church here all his life until he went West, and was both a Mason and an Oddfellow. During his stay in Winnipeg he had an attack of typhoid fever. Unless ill-health prompted the rash act, I can offer no solution."

BANK DECLARES BOOKS RIGHT

At the head office of the Dominion Bank there is no intimation that Ferguson's books were wrong; it is alleged that domestic trouble was the cause of his undoing.

General manager Bogert received all the particulars but he refused to divulge them for the reason that they were entirely personal to Ferguson.

"He was one of our best and most capable managers in the West," said Mr. Bogert, "and I am advised by our inspector that the business of the branch at Hanley is in good shape."

ASKED LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

"The suicide, then, was not the result of his business connections?"

"No, early this year Ferguson wrote to me to ask leave of absence to be married, and that was granted. Later on, he wrote to say that he would marry, but that he would take his leave of absence when the weather was better. That was quite agreeable to us, and we thought nothing further of the matter," nothing further of the matter."—Toronto News.

Chamberlain Again Signs Cross to Name

London, Feb. 2.—Joseph Chamberlain paid his annual visit to the House of Commons to-day and took the oath of membership. He chatted for a little with Speaker Lowther and other intimates and appeared in a cheerful mood. The general impression was that the health of the veteran statesman had been improved slightly since he was sworn in a year ago. He was assisted in and out of the house by Austin Chamberlain and Lieut-Col. Arthur H. Lee, and the son signed his father's name to the roll, Mr. Chamberlain making a cross below the signature.

ESTIMATED THAT DEATHS WILL TOTAL OVER ONE MILLION

AS THE RESULT OF FAMINE AND PESTILENCE FOLLOWING IN ITS WAKE.

Relief Workers Are Aghast With the Realization of the Task Before Them—Murders Being Committed.

Nanking, China, Feb. 3.—That the deaths due to famine, and the pestilence following in its wake, will total a million before spring, was the estimate submitted to the relief committee here to-day. Relief workers are aghast with the realization of the task before them. Even were they in receipt of unlimited contributions for relief, the missionaries, doctors and other volunteer workers would be almost helpless in the face of two and one-half millions of suffering people in the Anhui and Kiang Su Provinces.

Murder is now adding to the death roll, reported William F. Junkim, the Presbyterian missionary at Suchien. In their desperation at the lack of food, he said, the holder of the natives have formed marauding bands, who stop at nothing in robbing wayfarers and plundering houses. In many towns persons wearing good clothes fear to go on the streets at night, lest they be waylaid and stripped of their garments, which can be sold for cash by the starving highwaymen. Scores of instances of kidnapping have been reported.

All but the very well-to-do in the affected districts have been reduced to gruel food, and a large portion of the peasants have not even that. In one town, reported Junkinn only three families had any dry food. As the peasants are selling their farms whenever they can find a large landowner to purchase them. Spring will bring little amelioration of their condition, it is believed. They will have no soil to till, and must be dependent upon charity until work can be found.

Pitiful tales are recited by relief workers. Nearly all the people are at home, too weak or ill to move and without clothes, even if they had the strength to go about. Thousands are homeless, and lie all day and night in the open, oftentimes in mud and water. To many death comes in the very hour of relief, while hundreds have died, it is reported, as a result of eating the food which they hoped would renew life.

RELIEF POURING IN.

Washington, Feb. 3.—With a sum of $10,000 cabled by the State Department to-day to the Consul-General at Shanghai, the total contributions of the Christian Herald to the Chinese famine relief fund reached $30,000. The American Red Cross Society has sent $10,000, and to-day issued another urgent appeal for funds.

Reports from the consul agents and diplomatic officers say that the suffering is almost inconceivable. The missionaries of all sects report that the situation is the most serious in many years, pestilence having followed in the footsteps of the famine.

The Court will Not Bar Catechism From the School

Morris Shaver, a ratepayer contributing to Union Public School Section No. 12, Cambridge, and No. 11 Russell, Russell County, sued the School Board and Oliver Thibeault, the teacher, to discontinue the denominational religious instruction in the Union School, and Mr. Justice Teetzel dismisses the action.

Shaver wanted certain resolutions, passed by the board, declared invalid, and an injunction restraining Thibeault from teaching the prayers and catechism of the Roman Catholic Church.

A resolution allowed half an hour for catechism during class every afternoon. This was repealed, and at the same meeting it was decided to close the school at 3.30 daily for the purpose.

The Lord's Prayer is read at the opening and closing. When the school closes, the Protestant children retire, and the Roman Catholic children are detained for instruction by Thibeault, who is authorized by the Catholic parish.

While dismissing the action, his Lordship does so without prejudice to any proceeding to compel the board to amend the resolutions and provide for additional instruction, should other denominations desire it.—Toronto Star.

British Parliament To Open Monday

London, Feb. 4.—Everything is in readiness for the opening of Parliament Monday. In view of the stirring national issues with which the speech from the Throne is bound to deal the event is certain to attract extraordinary attention. It is learned that the greatest precautions are being taken to prevent any suffragette demonstration in the vicinity of Westminster on the day of opening.

There are few scenes more imposing than that to be witnessed in the House of Lords when Parliament is opened by the King with the full state ceremony. It is customary for his Majesty to wear the brilliant uniform of field marshal, which is partly concealed by his great state robes. The Queen likewise wears over her gorgeous gown a cloak of snowy ermine. Her small diamond crown, and the bright ribbon of the Order of the Garter add to the brilliant effects of her appearance.

Besides their Majesties sit the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and other members of the royal family, while clustered around are the great officers of State. Peers in their robes make a line of white and scarlet along the back benches. In front sit the peeresses in beautiful dresses, with white plumes waving in their hair and diamonds glittering in countless tiaras and pendants.

GLAD KING GEORGE GOT A VERDICT

NEW YORK PAPERS COMMENT ON THE CHANGE IN THE TIMES SHOWN IN LIGHT SENTENCE.

Sentence Well Deserved—Family of Owner of Liberator Say That He Disgraces Them.

New York, Feb. 2.—Under the head of "Libeling a King," the World this morning says editorially:

"A British subject has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment for circulating a libel upon King George, and the fact has numerous aspects of interest.

"That royalty should apply to the courts for redress against a commoner is not so notable a proceeding as that the commoner when found guilty of seriously impugning the character of the monarch, should get off so lightly. In a day of greater royal prerogatives he would have been lucky to escape being hanged, drawn and quartered, or locked up in the Tower for life, according to the usuage of the time. As it is he is punished no more severely for reflecting on a King's honor than if he had circulated the same report about John Doe or any other fellow subject.

"The penalty in the present case may be cited as an exhibition in evolution of popular rights. The divine right, at least as concerns constitutional monarchs, no longer confers extraordinary privileges."

The Tribune under the caption "The Royal Libel Case," editorially says:

"The prompt conviction and sentencing of the scribbler who had uttered a gross libel on King George will be generally regarded with satisfaction, and so much because of the well-deserved punishment which is thus inflicted upon the culprit as because of the principle which is involved in the protection and vindication of a head of a state against calumny, and the warning thus given to reckless sensationalists who look for immunity in the eminence of the objects of their attacks."

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 2.—Edward Holton James, owner of the Liberator, of Paris, whose assistant, Edward Mylius, was yesterday sentenced to a year in jail for libelling King George, is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1896. He is a nephew of the late Prof. William James, Harvard's noted physiologist, but the family have disowned him. His aunt, the widow of Prof. James said to-day: "We are entirely out of sympathy with his projects, and are, moreover, ashamed to have our family name connected with his."

Cook Makes Another Attack on Peary

And on National Geographical Society for O.K.'ing His Proofs of Discovery.

New York, Feb. 2. In a bitter attack, in which the National Geographic Society "O.K.'d" the proofs of Commander Robert E. Peary's discovery of the North Pole, Dr. Frederick A. Cook to-day asserted that Peary's proofs are far from being convincing.

"In the Arctic," said Cook, "the problem of refraction presents possible inaccuracy not of seconds or of minutes, but possibly of degrees. mirages turns things topsy-turvy, and the whole polar topography is distorted by optical dilusions. Many explorers have seen the returning sun over a sea horizon after a long night one or two days before the correct time of its re-appearance. This gives you an error in observations which may be a matter of sixty miles.

"Yet the group of armchair geographers of the National Geographic Society pronounce a series of sun altitudes less than seven degrees above the horizon as proof positive of the attainment of the pole.

"Never before in the history of the world has the question of absolute geographical proof been raised. In the heated excitement of this polar problem a new and false position has been introduced. To settle the controversy, sextant readings and other figures were suddenly siezed upon as proof of a voyage of exploration.

"Those versed in nautical matters will know that is not the correct position. From the examination of such data that group of friends will stretch a point and endorse the claim Hostile ones, examining the same material, will pick it apart and come to a reverse opinion: but neutral men, straighforward and honest, will come to the conclusion, as the Danes have done, that in such matters there is no proof."

EXPLOSION LEADS TO EIGHT ARRESTS

FREIGHT AGENTS AND OTHER RAILWAY EMPLOYEES SUMMONED TO THE COURTS.

Little Chance to Punish—Law Only Permits a $25 Fine—No More Bodies Have Been Recovered.

Jersey City, N.J., Feb. 3.—Warrants are out to-day for the arrest of eight men in connection with the disastrous dynamite explosion of Wednesday at Communipaw.

Those charged with the responsibility for the explosion are:

Arthur Hamilton, general freight agent.

Louis T. Galladetto, pier master.

John M. Morris, terminal freight agent.

Frederick Peters, manager Dupont-de Nemours Powders Co.

R. A. Morse, assistant manager, Dupont-de Nemours Powder Co.

Capt. Burr, St. John.

James Healing, owner of the steam lighter Catherine W.

There is a single charge in each of the warrants, manslaughter. Responsibility is alleged for the death of Michael Massai, of Brooklyn, a stevedore. It was expected that all concerned would surrender later in the day and be admitted to bail.

Already complications in prosecuting those responsible for the presence of the powder on the pier are cropping up. The railway officials and others who have examined the law in the case say that all that can be done to anyone left alive directly concerned in the transportation of the dynamite is the imposition of a fine of $25 for failure to procure a permit from the Jersey City Inspector of combustibles for keeping dynamite in the city. Even that fine, it is pointed out, may not hold, because of the fact that the dynamite was being shipped as interstate work.

The search for bodies of the victims has proved futile. Divers have searched the river bottom below, and in the vicinity of the wrecked piers, but have found no trace of the crew of the Catherine W. It is believed the bodies were carried down the bay by the tide, and it is unlikely they will ever be recovered.

It developed to-day that the dynamite which exploded was designed for Brazil and was to have been transferred from the lighter to a tramp steamer anchored in the upper bay.

Only two names have been added to the list of missing, which is made up of the crew of the Catherine W. and the Hustler. These are of two longshoremen, who were believed to have been at work handling the dynamite. With two exceptions all of the injured in the hospitals are doing well.

Gould Wedding Sets New York Agog

COLONIST CAR FOR WOMEN

Regina, Feb. 3.—A resolution was passed yesterday at a crowded meeting of the Saskatchewan Agricultural Society's convention, to ask the railways to provide at least one Colonist car on each harvester's excursion to be used by women only and that they be carried at the same fare as men.

ANOTHER OF THE GOULD FAMILY TO WEAR AN ENGLISH TITLE.

The Wedding Promises to be More Gorgeous and Elaborate Than Was Contemplated in Early Plans.

New York, Feb. 4. The wedding of Miss Vivien Gould, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould and Lord Decies of London, which is to take place Tuesday, is the talk of fashionable New York. The affair now promises to be more gorgeous and elaborate than was contemplated in the early plans. From present indications it will be the most notable affair of the kind that has taken place in the metropolis in a long time.

The ceremony will be performed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in fashionable St. Bartholomew's Church in Madison Avenue. Bishop David H. Greer will officiate, assisted by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks.

Lord Decies will await his bride at the altar with his cousin, Lord Alastair Graham of the Royal Navy, a son of the Duke of Montrose, who will be his best man. Miss Edith Gould will attend her sister as maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Emeline Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jabish Holmes of New York; Miss Louise Cromwell, daughter of Mrs. Oliver Cromwell of Washington; Miss Beatrice Claflin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Claflin of New York and Lakewood; Miss Allison Pearce, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Winslow S. Pearce of Bayville, L. I.; Miss Hope Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hamilton of New York, and Miss Hannah Randolph, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Randolph of Philadelphia.

Miss Gloria Gould, the five-year-old sister of the bride, and Miss Diana Dalziel, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Y. Dalziel will be the flower girls. The ushers are to be Earl Percy, Lord Cumoys, Phoenix Ingraham, Robin Gray, Robert H. Russell, Frank W. Crowninshield, Monoure Robinson and Anthony Drexel, Jr. To-night at Delmonico's, Lord Decies gives his bachelor dinner with his best man, the ushers and several other intimate friends as his guests.

The veil will be of point lace and will the arm of her father, Mr. George J. Gould. She will wear a robe of white satin trimmed with point lace. The veil will be of print lace and will extend to the hem of the train. After the church ceremony the bridal party and guests will be driven over to the Fifth Avenue home of the Goulds, where an elaborate reception will be held. For the last week mechanics, decorators and chefs have been hard at work preparing for the wedding and reception. The town house of the Goulds has passed through an internal transformation, and has left the hands of the painters, decorators and upholsterers more magnificent than ever.

The bride of next week is not yet eighteen years old and made her social debut only a few weeks ago. She is the fourth child of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, there being two older brothers, Kingdon and Jay, and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., an elder sister. She has a brother and two sisters much younger than herself, Miss Gloria Gould being the baby of the family. Miss Gould is rather tall, slender and dark, with a richly colored complexion, and is fond of outdoor sports. Last May she accompanied her family abroad to attend the wedding of Miss Margaretta Drexel, sister of her brother-in-law, and Viscount Maidstone, and it was during this visit that she first met her future husband.

Lord Decies is forty-five years old, and succeeded to his title a short time ago through the death of his brother. He is a Lieutenant Colonel of the Seventh Hussars and a member of the Distinguished Service Order. He has fought in many campaigns, serving against the Mad Mullah, in the Matabele war and the Boer war. He is famous as a polo player and a cricketer and is keenly interested in hunting and racing.

The peerage of Lord Decies is an Irish one and does not carry with it a seat in the House of Lords. It was created just a century ago in favor of the first Marquis of Waterford's younger brother, William Beresford.

The members of the Beresford family are closely linked to America through marriage. The youngest brother of Lord Decies, the Hon. Arthur Beresford, married Miss Florence Miller of Providence, R. I., and they now make their home on a ranch in Alberta. John George Beresford, another of the family, took for his bride Miss Emilie Iselin, daughter of the late Adrian Iselin of New York. Then there was Lord William Beresford, who married the American widow of the Duke of Marlborough, who before her first marriage was Miss Lillian Price, daughter of Commodore Cicero Price of the United States Navy.

FARMERS BANK CROWD SNOWED IN

Ask a Royal Commission—Sir Wilfrid Will Hear Them at 3.45, If Train Gets There in Time.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—A deputation of shareholders and depositors in the unfortunate Farmers' Bank, was snowed up at Smith's Falls this morning, and so could not have an interview which had been arranged for with Sir Wilfrid at noon.

William Laidlaw, K.C., who is accompanying the deputation, wired the news to David Henderson, M.P. for Halton, who at once saw the Premier and arranged for the interview to be held at 3.45 p.m., provided the train gets in.

The object of the deputation is understood to be to ask for a Royal Commission to investigate the whole circumstances of the organization and operation of the Farmers' Bank.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Petes Again Defeat the Trenton Seven

Trenton came up last night with the idea that Peterboro was going to give them the game because Park was off, but before playing long they found out that they were not in the same class with Peterboro.

The game was fast and exciting, but never much in doubt as the locals had it on the visitors at every stage. Derocher in goal played stellar hockey, stopping many hot ones and clearing to perfection. Those that beat him were from close in.

Dennison in his old position brought down the house with his end to end rushes, nearly always scoring. He relieved the forwards time and again, enabling the team to keep up the fast pace from start to finish.

Ray, at rover, played in his usual form, always in the rushes and checking back at a fast clip. Giroux who took the place of Park at centre played a wonderful game, checking nicely and getting in on some of the scoring.

Sorel and Kelly were always on the job, each doing some of the scoring and figuring in the rushes.

Bond checked good and was always ready to relieve the forwards.

Trenton's change in their lineup did not help much.

STORY OF THE GAME.

Lawson Whitehead handled the bell.

For the first few minutes neither team could score though there were some nice tries.

In four minutes Dennison on a nice rush carried the rubber into Trenton's territory, and on a neat pass Kelly scored.

Sorel and Powers each took a rest and when Sorel got back he scored. Time 4 minutes.

Giroux made a nice lift, but McGiffon was in the way. Before he cleared Sorel batted it past him. Time 30 seconds.

Powers went off for tripping and Giroux for loafing, and before they got back Dennison scored. Time 30 seconds.

Both teams were playing like fiends and Derocher was called upon to stop some hot ones and he was right there.

Dennison made a nice rush and scored again in 1½ minutes.

Ray went off for slashing and Derocher made some beautiful stops.

McGiffon stopped one of Sorel's drives with his face.

Bond went off and Trenton scored two in his absence. The first by McGaw from close in. Time 4 minutes.

Derocher stopped a few good ones, but Cummings beat him for one in 2 minutes.

Dennison made a nice end to end rush and scored again in 30 seconds.

Peterboro 6, Trenton 2.

Dennison went off for a trip, and Palmer on a nice rush was stopped by Derocher who came out and met him.

Palmer went off for a trip and was soon followed by Croft and Sorel.

Cummings made a nice try which

ADOPTING COMMISSIONS.

A despatch in yesterday's paper stated that Prince Albert, Sask., has passed a by-law providing for the government of the city by a Commission, the chairman of which is to receive $2,700 a year.

The more one searches for examples and reflects on their merits the more he is convinced that the cities which are adopting this method of managing their affairs are progressive and well advised.

The principal advantage in government by Commission is that the men who are selected to control civic business are not constantly obliged to please the fickle and critical voter. Further the salary paid makes the position sufficiently attractive to permit an able man to give his whole time to the many and often complex problems that come up. Councils have been governing bodies for centuries in one form or another and have been capable of managing civic affairs well but to-day the men are few who care to sacrifice private interests to give their time, money and energy for nothing to a city. They appreciate the honor attached to such a position but competition in business being keen, they prefer to keep close to the pursuit that enriches them. Hence it is impossible for a city to ask or expect the same close scrutiny, the same vigilance, the same keen administration that would be demanded from a board which paid a good salary for that purpose. The municipalities that are governed by Commissions seem to be well governed or they would abandon the method and other places such as those mentioned above would not follow.

AGAINST WHITE PLAGUE.

At a meeting under the auspices of the Buffalo Association for the Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis, held the other day at the Iroquois hotel, forty-three secretaries, representing as many trades unions in that city, discussed the advisability of forming a permanent organization among the unions to aid in the fight against the white plague.

It was pointed out that all classes of labor are subject to the danger of tuberculosis and suggested that each union laborer in the city give ten cents a year for the distribution of literature and that a fund be started for the relief of families who suffer from white plague ravages.

This is an important move and should commend itself to all who realize what devastation is made by tuberculosis when it gets a foothold. The labor unions of Canada might well consider the advisability of following along similar lines.

Another effort which is being made to stamp out this dread disease and to help the families of them who are afflicted is revealed in a letter to Hall Caine. The novelist has been advocating government measures with the object of stamping out consumption principally through the States taking charge of all consumptives, and in writing him David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, makes the interesting announcement that he has already been considering the practicability of dealing with this problem in connection with his forthcoming scheme of invalidity insurance.

The Chancellor says that the chief difficulty is financial, and that it will be especially hard to estimate the maximum contribution which can be levied upon workmen.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

Ungud also took confidential details from the Brigadier for Havelock's information, and in three days, being as supple as an eel and cautious as a leopard, he was back again with a reply from the general to the effect that the relieving force would arrive in less than a week.

He brought another missive from Frank, cheery and optimistic in tone and still blithely oblivious of the existence of such baubles as hundred-thousand-dollar necklaces.

And that was all the news that either the garris or Winifred received for more than a month, when the intrepid Ungud again entered the lines to bring Havelock's ominous advice "Do not negotiate, but rather perish sword in hand."

This time there was no letter from Frank, and the alarmed, half despairing girl could only learn that the major-sahib was not with the column, which had been compelled to fall back on Cawnpore, after some heavy fighting in Oudh. Ungud did not think he was dead; but who could tell? There were so many sahibs who fell, for out of his twelve hundred Havelock had lost nearly half, and was now eating his heart out in a weary wait for reenforcements that were toiling up the thousand miles of road and river from Calcutta.

So the blackness of disappointed hope fell on the Residency and its inmates. Those few natives who had hitherto proved faithful began to desert in scores. About a third of the European soldiers were dead. Smallpox and cholera added their ravages to the enemy's unceasing fire and occasional fierce assaults. Famine and tainted water, and lack of hospital stores, and every evil device of malign fate that persecutes people in such straits, were there to harass the unhappy defenders. Officers and men swore that they would shoot their women-folk with their own hands rather than permit them to fall into the rebels' clutches, and, at times, when the siege slackened a little in its continuous cannonade, the devoted community gave way to lethargy and despondency.

But let the enemy muster for an attack, those veteran soldiers faced them with the dogged steadfastness that made them gods among the Asiatic scum. The Brigadier, too, never allowed his splendid spirit to flag. Though for three months he had not slept without being fully dressed, though he worked harder than any other man in the garrison, he was the life and soul of every outpost that he visited during the day or night.

Captain Fulton was another human dynamo in their midst. Finding plenty of miners among the Cornishmen of the 32nd, he sunk a countermine for each mine burrowed by the enemy. His favorite amusement was to sit alone for hours in a shaft, wait patiently until the rebels bored a way up to him, and then shoot the foremost workers.

And in such fashion the siege went on, with houses collapsing, because they were so riddled with cannon balls that the walls gave way, and ever-soaring sapping of the fortifications, and intolerable breaks in the monsoon, when the heat became so overpowering that even the natives yielded to the strain—and the days passed, and the weeks and the months, until, on September 16, Ungud, tempted by a bribe of five thousand rupees, crept away for the last time with despatches for Havelock.

CHAPTER XIV.

Why Malcolm Did Not Write

It was the saddest hour in Havelock's life when he decided that his Invincibles must retreat. Yet, after another week's fighting, that course was forced on him.

On July 25 he plunged fearlessly into Oudh, leaving a wide and rapid river in his rear, with other rivers, canals, and fortified towns and villages in front, on three sides swarms of determined enemies gathered under the standards of Nana Sahib and the Oudh Talookdars, and everywhere a hostile if not actually mutinous peasantry.

With his usual daring, trusting to the unsurpassed elan of his troops, he fought battles at Onao and Bussereitgunge. Then when the thunder of the fighting was faintly heard by listeners in the Residency, Havelock took thought and regretted that he had ventured to leave Cawnpore.

His force numbered about half the men who marched out of Allahabad on the 7th. Cholera had broken out; stores were scanty; there was not a single litter for another wounded man; and, worst of all, ammunition was failing. To advance farther meant the total destruction of his little army, the sure and instant fall of the Residency, and the disappearance of the British flag from an enormous territory.

Yet he hesitated before he gave the final order. He fell back a couple of marches and wrote to Neill on the 31st that he could "do nothing for the relief of Lucknow," until he received a re-enforcement of a thousand men and a new battery.

Neill, who was holding Cawnpore with three hundred rifles, returned the most amazing reply that ever a subordinate officer addressed to his chief. "The natives don't believe you have won any real victories," he wrote, in effect. "Your retreat has destroyed the prestige of England. While you are waiting for re-enforcements that cannot arrive Lucknow will be lost. You must advance again and not halt until you have rescued the garrison. Then return here sharp, as there is much to be done between this and Agra and Delhi."

Neill's zeal outran his discretion. Havelock told him in plain language his opinion of this curious epistle.

"Your letter is the most extraordinary I have ever perused," he said. . . "Consideration of the obstruction which would arise in the public service alone prevents me from placing you under immediate arrest. You now stand warned. Attempt no further dictation."

Yet Neill's advice rankled and there were men on Havelock's staff who agreed with the outspoken Irishman. Neill, however, coolly bottled his wrath and sent on a company of the 84th and three guns.

They brought despatches from Sir Patrick Grant, Commander-in-Chief at Calcutta, telling Havelock that the troops sent from the capital had been turned aside to deal with mutineers in Behar.

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and — just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

WOMEN IN THE AIR

The Growth of a Dangerous and Sensational Pastime

The evolution of the aeroplane is wonderful in all its bearings, but it is nothing like so wonderful as the amazing advent of the amateur aeroplanist. Flying schools are now being established and are reaping a rich harvest from enthusiastic would-be flyers who patronize the schools' aeroplanes in order to be instructed in the fascinating art of flying.

The successful aviator must have nerves of steel, practically a sixth sense of foresight, and perfect control over himself in moments of peril. During recent years the emancipation of women has certainly grown apace, but even the most confirmed female optimist could scarcely attribute even the most advanced woman with any two of these qualifications.

Morbid Sensation

Why is it that the attendance at a flying meet will go up nearly fifty per cent. if a lady flyer is billed to appear? One might as well assume that it is due to a spirit of morbid sensation similar to that displayed some years back when a woman revived the popularity of the sensational music-hall turn "Looping-the-Loop."

The public soon tired of watching a man endanger his life and limbs in such an act, but their interest was speedily revived when his mantle descended upon the shoulders of a woman.

A famous aviator recently stated that one of the secrets of successful flying is the complete understanding of one's engine. And he is a gentleman who employs a baker's dozen of skilled mechanics to daily groom his aeroplane.

Before making a flight you can see him crawling round his machine tightening stray nuts, and lubricating dry bearings with complete disregard to his personal comfort. After such excursions he is a sorry spectacle, oil-stained and dirty, with bruised and bleeding fingers from rough contact with refractory bearings.

Work for Men Only

What woman would—or could be expected to—indulge in such duties? Her delicate fingers were not constructed by nature to undertake work such as this. But unless a very keen personal interest is taken by the aviator in such seemingly trifling details, disaster is bound to occur sooner or later. There is a lady in France at the present time who is passing through a tedious term of convalescence, disfigured, and perhaps crippled for life, owing to her ill-timed entry into the world of aeronautics. She is the Baroness de la Roche who a month or so back fell from a considerable height whilst flying in her aeroplane. The accident was due to the sudden loss of her head, and consequently control of her machine, when she was passed by a fellow flyer. Experts who witnessed the accident were of opinion that had a man been in the place of the Baroness, the disaster might have been averted.

LIKE HIS GRANDSIRE

Prince Edward Visited an Old Tenant of the Royal Estate

During his holidays at Balmoral, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales went to see an old tenant on the Royal estate who had often accompanied the late King on fishing and shooting expeditions, when his Majesty was a boy.

When the young Prince entered the room where the old man was, the latter, who was sorely stricken with rheumatism, made an attempt to rise, but his Royal Highness ran over to him, and, putting his two hands on his shoulders said: "Oh, please do not stand up; I hope you don't mind my coming to see you, but I wanted to have a talk with you awfully."

Then tears came into the old man's eyes as he looked at the Prince, and he exclaimed: "Ah, sir, you remind me so of your grandsire when he was a boy."

The two sat chatting together for a long time, the Prince listening with immense interest to anecdotes of some youthful sporting adventures of the late King which the old man related. In his quick, impetuous moments the young Prince is very like his grandfather, and, when very much amused, he has a way of putting his hands behind his back when he laughs exactly as the late King often used to do, a little habit of the Prince's that has been noticed with much interest by members of the Royal Family.

PLUCKING OF GEESE ALIVE IS COMMON

In Ireland, Says a Writer in The Freeman—Brutal to Do It Three Times a Year

A remarkable article appears in the Weekly Freeman of Dublin on the plucking of geese alive. The writer says:

It was a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals who brought up the subject in our hearing a short time ago.

"I hear," he said, "horrible stories of the brutalities practised on geese in Ireland by the plucking of their feathers while they are alive but I do not know what amount of truth there is in them. Can you tell me anything about it?"

"It is allowed by the law, just as the shearing of sheep is," we temporized, evading a direct reply

"Is it true," he persisted, "that in many parts of the country there are feather pedlars going around buying feathers who pay the owners of geese so much for what they call 'a pluck'?"

We had to admit that we had heard of the institution.

"Is it true that to a large number of these pedlars 'a pluck simply means tearing off as much as he can get off the wretched bird without actually killing her, and that on the white goose, who can survive it, this barbarity may be practised three and even four times in the year?"

"The law allows it," we repeat. "But we agree with you that it is an abomination that ought to be put a stop to. . . . Yes, it is to be seen through the country in many parts—droves of shivering geese, with half-dead eyes, plucked so ruthlessly bare that their wings are dragging on the ground."

"Then you disapprove of plucking alive altogether?"

"Most certainly not. Goose feathers are very valuable, and a considerable amount of the profit of geese rearing arises from their sale. There is no cruelty in plucking feathers when they are beginning to loosen and drop off at the natural season, and when carefully and humanely done. On the contrary, it is as beneficial to the bird to remove the surplus coat as it is to the sheep to shear off its wool. But it certainly can't be beneficial either to the bird or to its owner to let it be plucked three times a year, because the stock that such tortured animals produce are scare worth the rearing—its laying powers, too, must be reduced to the lowest ebb."

In conclusion, we assured the inquirer that as far as we know, readers of the Weekly Freeman did not allow such cruelties to be practised on their defenceless stock. Certainly not those who in their childhood had been members of the Fireside Club, whose admirable object in existence is to encourage the love of nature and the humane treatment of all dumb creatures. The practice of such live plucking was general in England a hundred years ago, but the growth of the modern spirit of humanity, combined with utilitarian considerations—the harm done to sound stock birds—have brought it into discredit.

HOW HORSES SLEEP

Many Sleep Standing—Others Lie Down—How They Get Up

Did you ever notice how horses sleep? Well, they don't all sleep one way, by any means. Some, in fact, a good many, sleep standing, and rarely lie down. Such a one you may approach and almost touch before he wakes up, if you come at the right time and without much noise. Others lie down, but not all one way. Usually they will settle back and drop over on one hip first. In rising they will put one front foot first and then the other, bringing up the hind parts last.

But some horses get up and down "cow fashion"—that is, they will get on their fore-nees first. Such a one may always be told by the dirty condition of his knees.

EARTHING UP CELERY

Earthing up celery is one of the main requirements necessary to make it toothsome. If unearthed the stalks are green and tough; if earthed they are blanched and crisp. In the former state it is good for nothing; in the latter it is choice and peculiarly nice. Earthing up must, therefore, not be omitted, and it should all be done before frost occurs, as if exposed then it will be injured, while earthing is a protection. Gather the leaves of each plant closely together near the top. Put a tie round them all. Break the soil along the sides down fine. Push it in between the plants with the spade; then press it round each with the hands, and take the tie off. Be sure that not a particle of soil is allowed to fall into the centre.

ROYAL LOVERS IN BRITAIN

The Ten Years' Romance of Princess Clementine of Brussels—Defied the King

No Royal love romance has ever aroused such deep admiration and at the same time sympathy as that of Princess Clementine and Prince Victor Napoleon. It is now ten years since the couple met while driving in the Bois de la Cambre, near Brussels. According to all accounts it was a case of love at first sight.

Prince Victor, however, as heir to the Bonaparte dynasty and Pretender to the French throne, was politically undesirable. Certainly he is the last to take the Pretender business very seriously. For years he has been an exile in Brussels living comfortably enough on his moderate income of £2,000 a year. He was, moreover, thirty-eight when he first met the Princess, his junior by ten years. The Princess, unhappy in her home life, and on bad terms with both her parents, desired earnestly to be married to a man who has considerable strength of character and a simple heart.

But the old King Leopold, domineering in all his home life, refused his consent to the betrothal. He favored the Orleans family. He hated the Bonapartes, and it did not suit his policy with the French Republic to have his daughter married to one of the Royalist Pretenders.

The Countess of Flanders interceded for them, but Leopold refused to reconsider his decision. The aged Empress Eugenie, with whom Prince Victor has always been a favorite, traveled to Brussels and pleaded for the lovers, but with no more effect.

In order that there should be no chance of the couple meeting Leopold locked Clementine in her apartments in the Royal palace and informed her that she would have to remain under lock and key until she promised to forget the Prince. It was not until the medical men informed the King that this treatment was seriously affecting the Princess's health that he relented and sent her to the Riviera.

The Princess, living apart from her parents, and Prince Victor, an exile from France, met each other in private houses of friends and in the drawing-rooms of the Countess of Flanders and the present King. But they never appeared together publicly, and both were absentees at court.

A celebrated incident which caused some sensation a year or two ago, took place at a paper-chase on horseback, which was won by Prince Victor. Princess Clementine had been appointed to give away the prize, and when the victor came for his reward and she pinned the ribbon upon his breast she burst into tears, so that all present were profoundly touched.

Upon the death of Leopold the two lovers again appeared at Court, and shortly afterwards it was announced that young King Albert had given his cordial consent to their union.

"OWD LUKE" RETIRES

Veteran Newsagent's 30,000 Miles' Journey in Selling a Paper

"Owd Luke," of Barrow Hill, near Chesterfield, one of the oldest Sunday newsagents in the United Kingdom, has retired, at the age of eighty-six, from a business established nearly thirty years ago.

Mr. Luke Bennison, to give the old man his proper name, was born at Leicester, and in his early days followed the occupation of a boatman. The "pay" being hardly sufficient to buy food—or "snap," as he terms it—he "emigrated" to Derbyshire, finally settling down at Barrow Hill, nearly sixty years ago, to become a miner.

Whilst employed at this work, he witnessed many changes in labor conditions underground. From fourteen hours a day, when he first commenced, the working time had fallen to nine hours by the time he was compelled to leave his employment, through having reached the age limit.

"A great contrast, wasn't it?" he said, and drily added, "What would the present generation of miners, with their Eight Hours Act, think if they had to go back to the old system of sixty years ago? They wouldna like it, I know.

"And the poor pit lads! How they fared in those days was horrible cruel—words can't express my feelings."

Referring to his career as a news agent, "Owd Luke" estimated that during his weekly distribution of Lloyd's Weekly he has travelled a distance approaching 30,000 miles, in all weathers. He still enjoys good health, sight and hearing.

Tobacco and an occasional glass of beer "Owd Luke" indulges in, and appears none the worse for these luxuries. His descendants living include four sons, and two daughters, thirty-nine grandchildren, and twenty-two great-grandchildren. His wife died some time ago.

THE CHOICE OF A WIFE

Jeremy Taylor very aptly summed up his opinion of the unwise choice of a wife in the following words: "A very fool is he that chooses for beauty principally; his eyes are witty, but his soul is sensual. It is an ill band of affection to tie two hearts together by a little thread of red and white."

These are indeed true sentiments, and the man is both unwise and unlucky who merely selects his wife because she is a pretty girl. Prettiness alone never yet made for happiness; the girl who can be a true friend, a devoted companion and a loving wife is worth a great deal more to her husband than "the little thread of red and white" which the old-time divine condemns so strongly.

BEGGARS IN VIENNA

Vienna has fully 32,000 beggars, and their average income is more than that of most working men.

USE SUNFLOWERS FOR FOOD OR FUEL

In Western Canada sixty per cent. of the herbage in August is that of the sunflower family. The common sunflower is a great grower upon any moisture, and can be raised to great advantage by the farmer. In Russia the sunflower is largely grown and is used for a variety of purposes. Great quantities of the seeds are eaten by the peasantry and even by the higher classes, and are as much valued as peanuts are by us. In Russia and other Greek and Roman Catholic countries, where the use of meat is restricted at certain seasons, the use of sunflower seeds as food has become very common. Moreover the oil from the sunflower can be obtained at the rate of a gallon from a bushel of seeds. As 60 bushels of seeds can be grown on one acre, and as the oil sells at one dollar a gallon, it is evident that for the prairie farmer the growth of the sunflower would be quite remunerative. The oil of the sunflower compares very favorably with olive oil and has indeed been used in adulterating it. The crude sunflower oil has to some extent been used by painters, although it is inferior to linseed oil for paint. But, besides yielding value for oil, the other portions of the sunflower can be made profitable. When its stalks are cut green it is said that they make an excellent fodder for cattle. The oil cake obtained from the sunflower seeds and stalks is also stated to be useful in feeding stock.

The use of the stalk however, appeals to our prairie farmers. In China the fibre of the plant, which is said to be fine, silky and strong, is woven into fabrics both beautiful and serviceable.

To the farmers who live on our high plains where fuel is scarce there seems to be a most self-evident use of sunflower stalks and dried leaves. An acre of sunflowers when matured will yield many cords of good fuel. Experiments should be made by a number of our best farmers with sunflowers, as they seem to be a crop splendidly adapted to the climate and soil of Western Canada.—Winnipeg Free Press.

FATTENING CHICKENS

First Use Insect Powder Liberally and Then Feed

Chickens intended for fattening should be selected as regards size, and only those nearly the same size should be placed together. About the first thing to do with them is to dust them carefully over with insect powder, so as to rid them of vermin. This should be done at least two or three times more while they are being fattened. During the first few days it is just as well not to feed them too much, as they may get over-fed and refuse to eat satisfactorily afterwards. Feed very lightly for the first two or three days, and then gradually increase the feed until by the end of the first week they are eating all they will, three times per day. Never leave the food before them for more than fifteen minutes. From ten to twenty days should be the time required to fatten them, according to the condition in which they were at the time of commencing to feed.—E. C. M. in Canadian Farm.

EGGS FOR FEVER

White of Raw Egg is Antiseptic Diet For the Sick

When fever is present an appetite is nil, when we want an antiseptic article of diet the white of an egg raw, serves both as food and medicine. The way to give it is to drain off the albumen from an opening about one-half an inch in diameter at the small end of the egg, the yolk remaining inside the shell. Add a little salt to this, and direct the patient to swallow it. (Sucking eggs.) Dose: Repeat every hour or two in typhoid fever this mode of feeding materially helps us in carrying out an antiseptic plan of treatment. Furthermore, the albumen to a certain extent may antidote the toxins of the disease. Patients may at first rebel at the idea of eating a raw egg, but the quickness with which it goes down without the yolks proves it to be less disagreeable than they supposed, and they are very ready to take a second dose.

GRAIN FOR DAIRY COWS

There are plenty of people who would feed grain to their dairy cows if they had it. They will not buy it, however. They would not think of working the horse without grain, but they think it does not matter so much with the cow.

When the pasture starts to get short and cows need grain the most is just the time they are without it. Good cows under these conditions will milk all the surplus flesh from their bodies. When they get better feed they are not in shape to respond to it.

The man who feeds his cows a heavy grain ration six months of the year and lets them shift for themselves the other six months is the man who is feeding his cows grain at a loss. On the other hand the man who feeds his cows a good liberal ration twelve months of the year and keeps his cows in shape all the time is the man who is investing his money where it will bring him liberal returns.

The key to successful dairying is to breed better to feed better, and to butcher the boarders.

DEAR GERMAN FOOD

The Butchers Want All Importation Barriers Removed.

The prices of the necessities of life continue to rise in a most alarming way in all the large cities of Germany, with Berlin and Hamburg at their head. German housewives are in a state of growing anxiety, asking where all this is to end.

Another phase of the question is now opened up by the attitude of the butchers, who are actively petitioning the Government to "do something" if their trade is not to suffer seriously. In their petitions they state that the prohibition to import cattle from abroad does not enable home farmers to cope with the national demand, for oxen, sheep, and calves is practically stationary, and in some districts is even growing less, while the demand increases. They ask for the abolition of all frontier barriers to importation of live stock, and less drastic measures in dealing with cattle supposed to be affected with tuberculosis. This, they say, is carried to absurd lengths.

A curious political coloring is lent to this movement of the German butchers by the threat that if the Government declines to remove their grievances they will, as a body, join the Social Democratic organization. The butchers have hitherto been among the most loyal of the Kaiser's subjects.

THE PREACHER'S BARREL.

The interesting question of the preacher's "barrel" comes forward again in a suit for damages against a railroad by a Minnesota clergyman. The clergyman shipped his sermons—an accumulation of twenty years—and they never reached him in his new field. He wants the railroad to pay for them. One reason named is their value to him to preach again to other congregations. If the sermons are not recovered we hope the preacher will be able to collect—all they are worth. We should suppose the parishioners in his new charge would be willing to share with the railroad in paying the damages collected. Other churches that hear of this mishap will shyly advise their coming pastors to patronize this particular road. The preacher himself might find further compensation in observing the effect on himself of doing some original work.—Hom. Review.

WOOL IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The Exports Will Double and Amount to 800,000 Bales.

Since the conclusion of the South African war, says The Canadian Textile Journal, exports of wool from the Cape have more than doubled, and last year amounted to more than 400,000 bales. The best judges are of opinion that within a decade the exports will double again, and amount to 800,000 bales. To reach this quantity it will not be necessary to double

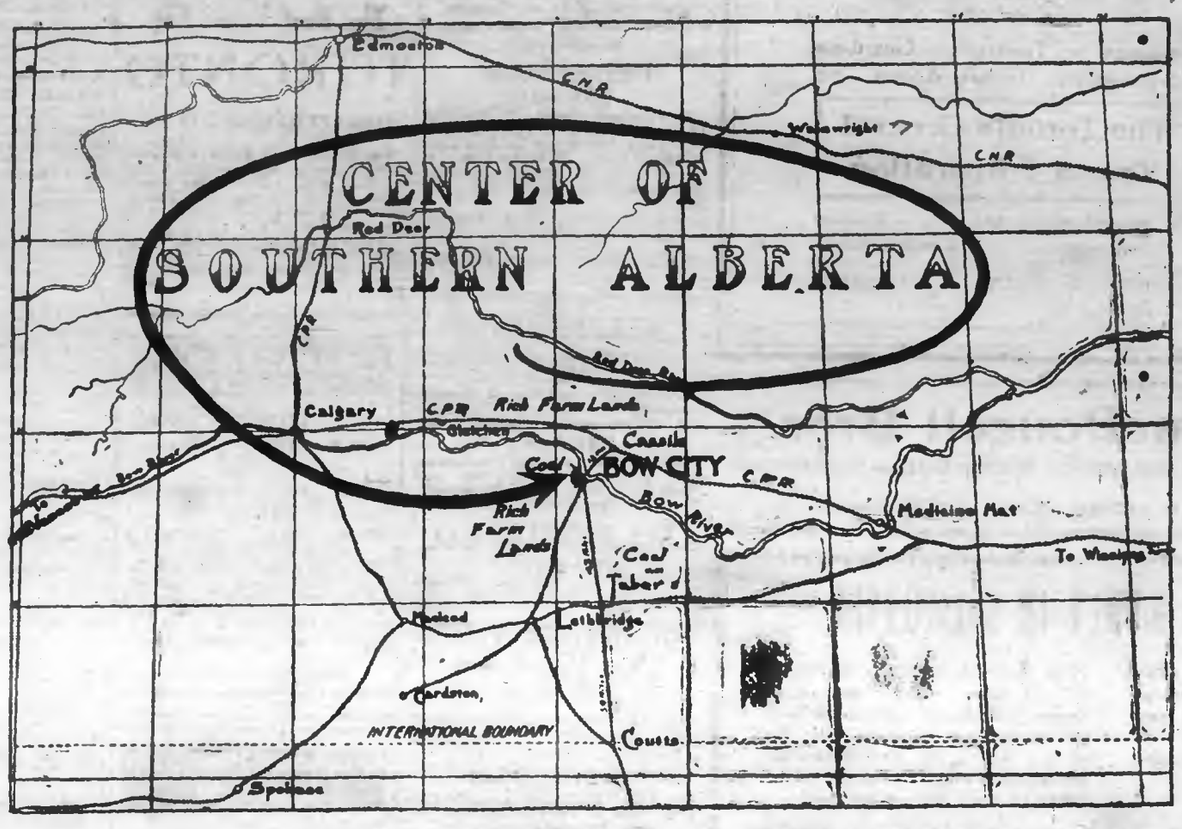
"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"



If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Alberta has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ago

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your application by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

AMERICA WANTS ERIN.

Strange Ambitions—Another is Reported to be Anxious to Contract a Disease

The secret ambition of the upper sort is usually the thing that is farthest removed from what the ambitioner is accustomed to. Thus some men who toil from morning to night think and plan a great time of rest. One man who is of this mind confesses that for years he has had an ambition to be ill enough to go into a hospital and remain in bed for three or four months. He has even planned out a suitable illness and taken steps to catch it, for he knows that unless he were really ill he would get up and go out after the first hour. He rather relies on scarlet fever, but he can't seem to get hold of it—or, rather, it won't get hold of him. He is a great contractor by trade, but he can't contract a disease to save his life. Even if he was successful he is not sure that scarlet fever would be the thing, but he thinks a broken leg might hold him.

Of all the wild ambitions that ever came into the head of man, that of an American politician is probably the wildest. He has it in his mind to buy Ireland. This is the subject of his dreams. Having made it his, he would proceed to lay out, peg, plan, and otherwise specify the Emerald Isle according to the way in which he thinks it should go. It is extremely doubtful if this dream will ever be realized. It is too American.

BRITAIN'S AIR FLEET.

New Ideas to be Incorporated in the Construction of Dirigibles

A very busy time awaits the officers and men of the Army Balloon School at Farnborough, England, this winter. In addition to the work of testing and completely overhauling the "Clement Bayard II.," the air corps will have ready the large gas bag begun a few weeks ago for the "Gamma," and at the same time start on the construction of the "Delta," another airship which the War Office has just decided to add to the present aerial fleet.

The "Delta" will be much larger than the two sister ships, "Beta" and "Gamma." Its envelope is to be made from a new fabric which, it is said, is far superior to any other on the market. By subjecting the material to a special treatment, of which the Army experts alone know the secret, the percentage of leakage will be reduced to an infinitesimal quantity. Reversible propellers and heavy six-cylinder engines are among the other new constructional details of the airship. The "Delta" is to be completed by the beginning of next spring, when the large admiralty dirigible now being built at Barrow-in-Furness will also be ready for active service.

The winter months at the Balloon School will further be occupied in training some 300 additional men to handle air-ships, so as to bring up the number of the corps to a total of 490.

GIRLS SELL LUNCHES

Parisians Now Talk of "Five O'Clock Tea," and Nibble Sandwiches

It is only within the last year or so that the words "five" (pronounced feeve), "o'clock" and "tea" have been incorporated into the modern Anglicised French language. "Goutter" (to taste), was, and is yet, the term employed by the conservative class for the five o'clock afternoon light meal, which all classes, high and low, in France, indulge in.

One enterprising young man who is the head of one of the most popular of the smaller hotels in the Tuilleries quarter, has cleverly and successfully introduced the custom of having girls wait on customers during the "tea" hours each afternoon. These young women wear black Dresden and white aprons and black bows in place of a head covering when they go out to serve ham, cheese omelettes, sandwiches, and other light food, at banks and similar large establishments during luncheon time. Carrying baskets they visit the places named in the neighborhood. Many of these girls sell 500 sandwiches in half an hour, while the sale of omelets at the luncheon rooms runs into hundreds of francs during the busiest hours.

KEEPS TAB ON THE AUTOS

France Knows Just Where to Get Cars for War Purposes if Needed

"In time of peace prepare for war," is a saying which France intends placing in active and immediate execution.

Beginning with the first of the year a general census of automobiles in France is to be made. The description of every machine is to be recorded, with the name, etc., of the chauffeurs. This will be done with the double view of enabling the Government to use the machines in time of war and also to call on the chauffeurs for military service. Strange to say, dozens of wealthy women, patriotically inclined, who own autos, have not waited until the Government calls on them for the information, but have supplied it to the proper officials. Their willingness to aid the Government in the manner indicated before having been approached on the subject is a matter of much satisfaction to officials high in authority.

PASSES AS A MONK

After passing eighteen years as a man in a monastery, where she was known as Brother Arsene, a woman of great beauty, the Countess Klusinska, has been arrested, and an extraordinary story revealed. Years ago a duel was fought between her lover and her husband, ending fatally for the latter. The lover, conscience-stricken, retired to a monastery, and the countess, unable to bear the separation, disguised herself, and to be near her lover gained access to the same convent, where she lived unsuspected for eighteen years.

KISSED THE MINISTER

The Bridegroom Was Excited—Some Odd Marriage Stories

A young man, a plain, good-hearted fellow, was about to get married, and he called on a clergyman to arrange all the difficulties he thought were connected with the ceremony. The clergyman assured him there would be no difficulty, that he would see him through all right.

"But," said he, "what about the ring?"

The clergyman explained; and then the young fellow asked, with a blush "When must I kiss the bride?"

The clergyman answered that at the close of the ceremony he would offer a prayer, and just as soon as he had said "Amen" the bridegroom was to kiss the bride.

The ceremony went through all right, the clergyman said "Amen," and looked at the bridegroom in a knowing way. He suddenly remembered his duty, made a little jump like a timid trout at a fly, and kissed—not the bride but the minister!

This amusing story indicates that frequently the very seriousness of the contracting parties contributes to the gaiety, the humor, and the absurd situations occasionally witnessed at the marriage altar. It is little wonder, therefore, that funny things happen when, as is frequently the case, the wedding party regard the proceedings with boisterous light-heartedness.

Sir Thomas Whittaker, the well-known temperance pioneer, tells an amusing story about his own wedding. He was then a Lancashire mill hand, was under age, and he had neither a home prepared, any money saved, nor even a decent suit of clothes. Moreover, the bride's parents were resolved to prevent the marriage. Nothing daunted, the bridegroom borrowed three pounds, rose very early one Sunday morning, before the inmates of the house were awake, surreptitiously donned his brother's best clothes, walked twelve miles to Stockport with some of his friends, bought a license from the vicar, and was married before half the people of the town had finished breakfast! When the brother awoke and found his clothes gone he was in a sad plight; and the father of the bride was in desperation on missing his daughter, and messages flew in all directions, but too late to prevent the consummation the reckless lovers were bent upon.

Between the prohibition of parents and the appeals of the bride and bridegroom the clergyman sometimes finds himself in an awkward dilemma. On one occasion the friends of the lady came to a clergyman in the East End of London, saying that the marriage would be forbidden at the last moment, and warning him against the bridegroom as a notorious pugilist, who would be likely to resent—professionally any hesitation on the clergyman's part.

The bridegroom proved to be of middle age, while his projected wife—a simple girl—had numbered only fifteen years. So when the agitated wedding party had entered the church the clergyman sent word for the bridegroom to come and see him in the vestry. Keeping a broad table between himself and the suspicious pugilist, the clergyman gave him a "piece of his mind," with considerable warmth, having arranged meanwhile to send the bride away. The man was so surprised at the unexpected collapse of his project that he adopted only a verbal remonstrance, and departed—happily for the clergyman—with his fists in his pockets.

There is perhaps more tragedy than humor in the experience related by another clergyman. The license had been presented, and the day was fixed, and at half-past two the bridegroom appeared quite alone, young, and evidently a gentleman. He was evidently anxious as three o'clock drew near and no bride appeared.

Suddenly a young woman appeared hurrying up the aisle. Ere she reached the rails, the clock had struck three, and the book was shut.

"You are too late,' I said. 'I cannot marry you to-day.'

"Oh, pray do!' she pleaded.

"But I cannot,' I replied. 'I shall be liable to punishment. It is your own fault. You must come again earlier to-morrow.'

"But they never came again," and I found afterwards that the woman was a maidservant, and had been detained by her mistress against her will, because the mistress rightly felt that the marriage was a very unfitting one."

TYPE-WRITTEN WILLS

May Be Established in Court, But Handwriting is Preferred

While typewritten wills may be established in court, yet should they be attacked greater difficulty might arise in establishing their genuineness than if written with pen and ink. For this reason careful lawyers prefer that wills be drafted by the latter means. If, however, a will be typewritten, and of sufficient length, both sides of the paper should be used. It is thought that this lessens the danger of forgery, as, should one or more vacant pages intervene, fraudulent provisions might be surreptitiously inserted upon the typewriter.

READY

The wolf has been extinct in Scotland for about 160 years; the last one (according to tradition) was killed by one Macqueen, a deerstalker, who lived near the source of the Findhorn. The wolf had killed two children who were crossing the hills, and all the laird of Mackintosh summoned his retainers to hunt it. All appeared at the appointed time except this Macqueen. At length he leisurely put in an appearance. He was soundly rated by his chief for his lateness, but at length he asked, "What was the hurry?" The angry lair impatiently replied, whereupon Macqueen lifted his plaid and drew forth the grey head of the wolf. "There it is for you," he replied, casting the head into the midst of the astonished circle.

There was no more scoring done in the first half.

—Second Half—

The locals started with a nice 3-man rush, but McGiffin cleared.

Peterboro 7, Trenton 2.

Giroux made a nice rush from the face-off and scored in 30 seconds.

Giroux went to the box again and Dennison made a nice rush, but failed to tally.

Palmer took a rest and Croft managed to score in 8 minutes.

Sorel tallied again in 1¼ minutes, for Peterboro and on a nice combination Kelly scored in 30 seconds.

Peterboro 11, Trenton 3.

Sorel went to the box and in 1½ minutes Palmer scored for Trenton.

On a nice combination rush by Dennison and Ray, the latter scored. Time 2 minutes.

Peterboro 12, Trenton 4.

Peterboro 13, Trenton 5.

In the nicest rush of the night Dennison scored the last goal in 1 minute.

The spectators shouted for another, but the gong sounded before it was done.

Peterboro 14, Trenton 5.

The lineups:

—Peterboro—
Goal—Derocher.
Point—Bond.
Cover—Dennison.
Rover—Ray.
Centre—Giroux.
R. Wing—Sorel.
L. Wing—Kelly.

—Trenton—
Goal—McGiffin.
Point—Powers.
Cover—McGaw.
Rover—Croft.
Centre—Fletcher.
R. Wing—Cummings.
L. Wing—Palmer.

Billy Breen was getting anxious about Percy Bond when he did not appear last night, but he was only pushing his way through the throng at the door.

The Trenton management had another disagreement yesterday afternoon and Art Armstrong did not play. The changes did not strengthen their team any.

Never mind, Trenton. Peterboro had not started to play hockey when they were beaten 18—4.

The last Trenton-Peterboro game was no fluke as demonstrated last night. Clearly the best team won.

What excuse will Trenton have this time?

Park didn't play and they were not blinded with smoke.

The locals look good for the silverware.

No Drinking Man Need Despair

The Neal Cure—Greatest of all Discoveries—Offers a Means of Escape from the Curse of Drink. A Cure of the Drink Habit is Guaranteed in Three Days, no matter whether the Patient is a Hard and Constant Drinker, Social Tippler or goes on Occas Sprees.

MANY SUCCESSFUL CURES IN TORONTO

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the washtub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do to-day!

But this home, which was made a hell on earth through strong drink—as every drunkard's is—may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as the result of the Neal Trgatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink; then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES, or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man physically and mentally in THREE DAYS' TREATMENT.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

Government by Commission.

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 4.—Advocates of the commission form of municipal government are confident that to-day's election in this city will result in the adoption of the plan. San Antonio is practically the last of the large cities of Texas to retain the aldermanic form of government. Beginning with Galveston, which originated and put into operation the commission plan about ten years ago, almost every city of size in the State of Texas has adopted the plan.

Milliner Kills Herself.

El Paso, Texas, Feb. 3.—A special to The Times from Clifton, Arizona, says Mrs. Jack Chambers, a milliner while being taken to jail on a charge of having sold a thirteen year old white girl to a Chinaman, shot and killed herself. The bullet passed through her heart, and into the hand of Sheriff English who had hold of the woman.

How Ovila Marcotte's Bright's Disease Was Caused and Cured.

A Cold Was the Cause and Dodd's Kidney Pills the Cure—He Recommends Them Because He Has Proved Them Good.

Lafond, Alta., Feb. 3—(Special)—In these winter days, when nearly everybody has a cold, and the cold goes to the weak spot, Backache and other symptoms of Kidney disease are almost epidemic.

For this reason the statement of Ovila Marcotte of this place is of interest to every one. He had a cold. It developed Backache, Kidney Disease, and finally the dreaded Bright's Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. Here is his full statement:

"For three years, due to a cold, I suffered with Backache, Kidney Disease and Bright's Disease. I was treated by a doctor, who did me no good. It was four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills did the work. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all persons who suffer from diseased Kidneys."

Luray, Va., Feb. 3.—Jas. P. Snyder, who died here yesterday, bequeathed to his housekeeper, Mrs. J. C. Southard, a glass jar containing a gallon of California virgin gold, which he has had buried for years. In addition he left her all of his household effects and a fine farm near this city. Snyder was a "49-er" and the gold represents his "clean-up" in California. He brought it home with him, put it in the glass jar, and resolved not to touch it except in case of need, an emergency which never arose.

FEAR FOR LIVES OF THE MISSIONARIES

IT IS THOUGHT THEY MAY HAVE BECOME THE VICTIMS OF THEIR OWN CHARITY.

May Have Been Murdered—Efforts Are Being Made to Get Into Communication With Them in China.

Shanghai, Feb. 6.—Great alarm for the safety of American missionaries in the famine districts of Anhui and Kiang Su Provinces was expressed to-day by members of the relief committee. Efforts are being made to get into communication with the men in the outlying districts beyond the railroad lines. It is feared that the missionaries may have become the victims of their charity.

Numerous instances of hunger-maddened mobs attacking and murdering persons known to possess even insignificant supplies are reported by field agents. Orders have been issued that no relief be given by missionaries as individuals, but only as representing the organized relief boards.

Two millions lives at $1.50 each, was the estimate of their task made to-day by officers of the famine relief committee. For one dollar and a half, they declared, they could save one person from starvation until the spring. Two millions are known to be facing certain death from famine or pestilence unless adequate relief is brought.

Relief stations have been established by the foreign and missionary committees at Linhwaikwan, Menchen Nanhsinchow, Lingpi and Kuchen. Gruel is dispensed to all who apply.

In the famine districts the streets are peopled by unburied dead and beggars. The well-to-do keep within their homes, fearing if they go out they will be surrounded by scores of starving men pleading for food. The prosperous fear if they give aid to a single famine sufferer, they will be besieged by the rest of the population.

At Shuan Chein a mob of desperate famine sufferers, in the early stages of the famine, sacked the town, killing a large portion of the inhabitants.

The remainder, in fear of summary punishment, have made their escape from that district.

A TORONTO MAN FOUND DROWNED

WM. BELL, TRAVELER FOR JARVIS ST. CO., LOST LIFE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

His Body in Arrow Lake—Family in New York—Local Firm Advised of Disappearance on October 15.

Nelson, B.C., Feb. 3.—The Provincial police received a report to-day that the body of a man had been found on the shore of Arrow Lake, four miles above Renata. The body is well-dressed, and is partially bald, with some grey hairs. The only person known to be missing is Wm. Bull commercial traveler, of Toronto, who mysteriously disappeared from Revelstoke, or from a steamer on Arrow Lake in October, and for whom legal firms in Toronto and Winnipeg have been making vigorous search.

The Pugh Manufacturing Company, of Jarvis street, Toronto, said to-day that their traveler, Wm. Bull, who went West early in the fall, has been missing since October 15.

"The descriptions we have received so far are so vague that we cannot tell as yet whether the body found is that of Mr. Bull or not," said the head of the firm.

"Mr. Bull was a man of 65 years of age. His wife and family reside in New York City. The Pugh Manufacturing Company state that they have had a firm of lawyers in Calgary investigating the disappearance of the traveler. They state that a New York firm of lawyers, acting for the family of the missing man, have had detectives searching for him.

The Former Sultan Kills Two Wives

Salonika, Feb. 3.—Abdul Hamed, former Sultan of Turkey has gone violently insane, has killed two of his wives and is to-day confined in irons.

The murder of the two women who were among those who accompanied Abdul Hamed from Constantinople when he was exiled by the Young Turks, was particularly cruel. He choked one of them to death with his own hands and dashed the other so violently against the wall that she died a few hours later, according to one of the men who have been guarding the deposed ruler at his villa where he is spending his last days.

The ex-Sultan was subdued only after a fierce struggle in which he himself was severely injured.

Abdul Hamed is confined in a dungeon beneath the villa Allatine which while set apart for him as a residence, is in reality his prison. He was sent there in April 1909, when the Turkish revolution brought about by the Young Turks party finally completed and Sultan Mohammed V. ascended the throne.

Abdul Hamed had reigned for 30 years up to that time, had deluged his empire in blood and had kept 200,000 spies to betray their fellow citizens. He was noted for having tricked the diplomats of all Europe and from time to time shocked the world by his sensuality and crimes.

When Abdul was sent to the villa here his suite, which was allowed to accompany him, was composed of three Sultanas, or full wives, four Cadines, or inferior wives; five Halfas, or lady housekeepers privileged to go out of the Harem, two princes, his daughter and nine servants. This really gave him the allowance of 12 wives.

Important Legislation

Winnipeg, Feb. 6.—The initiative and referendum and a number of other questions of public importance are included in the agenda of the Manitoba legislature, which will assemble in regular session Thursday.

YOUTH DEAD ON TRAIN WAS FROM HAMILTON.

He Left for the West About Christmas Time—Sister Identifies Remains.

Hamilton, Feb. 3.—Mrs. John Green, 21 Cannon street west, received word this afternoon that the man found murdered in lower berth, No. 13, some weeks ago on the Chicago and Western Railroad at Flint, Mich. had been identified as her son, Thomas, 17 years of age. Green left here at Christmas time, bound for the west, in company with his father, who is now thought to be in Fort William.

The body was identified by the murdered youth's sister, who resides in Chicago, through a photo that was published in Chicago papers. Green is the man who was at first thought to have been L. R. Lowes, of Cannington, Ont., who has since turned up.

The Laurier Government May Appeal to The Electors Next Fall

PREMIER WILL STAND OR FALL ON THE WASHINGTON AGREEMENT.

It is Said That Roblin and McBride Will be Called Upon by the Conservatives to Help Strengthen the Opposition.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—There is a rapidly growing feeling here that the Ottawa government will appeal to the people early in November next, and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will stand or fall on the Washington arrangement. It will make the people here in Quebec forget the Bourassa incident, and, in fact, the Nationalist leader has so far written more in favor than against the reciprocity agreement reached with the Americans by Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Paterson.

STRONG ADVERSE SENTIMENT.

Be this as it may, the sentiment here is running very high against any form of reciprocity, and even The Montreal Star has come down from its studied neutral position, and publishes a front-page appeal to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to save the nationality of the country, save the confederation from being split in two, and, in fact, save the west from becoming American.

It is held here that the days of the tall Canadian chimneys are over should the thin edge of the wedge be allowed to enter. All of the Conservative members who arrived here today to pass Sunday are unanimous against the arrangement, and they declare that there will be a movement all along the line; that Premiers Roblin and McBride will soon be in Ottawa in order to strengthen the hands of the federal opposition, and that a blast from the western statesmen may be expected any moment.

WILL APPEAL TO ELECTORS.

That Sir Wilfrid Laurier will appeal to the people next fall appears to be accepted by a great many well-informed politicians, and, in fact, it is stated here that during the prime minister's recent visit to Quebec he intimated to a close friend that this would be the last session of the present parliament. Sir Wilfrid is of the opinion that while he may lose, and lose heavily, he will be able to make up for this defection in the English-speaking provinces.

The Democrats will Vote for Agreement

Washington, Feb. 3.—It it becomes apparent that the vote on the Canadian reciprocity will be close, Champ Clarke, minority leader, will call a caucus of Democrats in order that they may present a solid front for the agreement.

Democratic House leaders declared to-day that from 80 to 90 per cent. of their members favor the treaty and will vote for it.

ASKS FOR IMPORTANT LEGISLATION

Toronto, Feb. 6.—Toronto City Council proposes that all Ontario saloons shall close—where the municipalities individually consent—at nine o'clock each evening except on Saturday when closing time shall be fixed at one o'clock in the afternoon. And the proposal, moreover, is that the saloons shall not open till eight o'clock in the morning. As compared with the present hours in vogue in Ottawa and in most other Ontario cities this proposal is radical enough, cutting off as it does twenty-eight hours a week of the time during which the saloons are allowed to sell liquor.

All public bars open as a rule at six o'clock in the morning, and do not close till eleven in the evening, except Saturday, when the closing hour is fixed at seven o'clock. This allows ninety-eight hours a week for selling intoxicants, whereas the Toronto proposal allows but seventy hours.

FORTY-THREE DROWNED FROM COASTING SHIPS.

On the Catalanian coast alone, five barks were wrecked, and forty-three persons drowned.

1910 HEALTHIEST YEAR ON RECORD

LONDON HAD 8,000 FEWER DIE THAN IN THE PRECEDING YEAR.

Growing Less Each Year—Average Death Rate Per 1,000 in Year was 13.4—In December It Was 21.1.

London, Feb. 4.—The Registrar-General's returns for 1910 show that year to be the healthiest on record. The aggregate deaths in London numbered 85,128, which is 8,065 fewer than the average for the preceding five years. This is over 4,500 fewer deaths than in 1908, which was previously the healthiest year on record, and is nearly 7,000 fewer than in 1903, which was notoriously wet year.

The deaths have been fewer than the average in each of the last ten years, and in the aggregate for that period numbered 78,659 fewer than the average, which is considerably more than the total deaths for a year. The deaths were below the average in each week throughout the year until the commencement of November, the five weeks ending respectively from November 12 to December 10 being the only weeks with the deaths in excess of the average.

SUFFRAGETTES DEMAND REFERENCE TO THE FRANCHISE IN SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

The Police Are Active—Suffragette Question is Causing Authorities as Much Worry as the Anarchistic Outbreaks.

London, Feb. 4.—Threats from militant suffragettes that they will mob King George on Monday if his speech opening parliament doesn't indicate a wish that the franchise be granted to women, resulted in extraordinary police activity to-day.

The building of parliament will be surrounded by the largest number of police that has ever been called out at the opening of parliament. The authorities fear that the declarations of the women that they will use greater violence than they have ever manifested heretofore will be carried out.

ANARCHISTS ARRESTED.

In fact, fear over the suffragette question is causing the authorities as much worry as the anarchists. They are now said to be more than two score members of continental anarchists, but as the police have refused to give out any names this cannot be confirmed.

According to one report which reached the police to-day, leaders of the suffragettes have purchased a large supply of chains and locks, planning to lock themselves to the seats if they are able to smash their way past the guards. Scotland Yard detectives are investigating this report and if it found to be true the chains will probably be seized.

TO-NIGHT'S BIG GAME.

The executive of the Peterboro Hockey Club intends running a special to Belleville to-night for the play-off with Trenton. It will leave the Grand Trunk station at 4.30 o'clock and will return immediately after the game. The round trip fare will be $1.15 for adults and half price for children. It is hoped a large squad of fans will go and cheer for the home team.

OTTAWA CLERGYMEN ARE UP IN ARMS AGAINST HIS ATTACK ON REV. MILNE.

They Condemn His Speech in the Commons as Unnecessarily Abusive and Low Tactics.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Local Protestant clergymen are up in arms, so to speak, against the slashing verbal attack made in the Commons a few days ago by Col. Sam Hughes upon Rev. J. W. H. Milne, of this city, in reply to some pulpit criticism of members of the Parliament, who take advantage of their privileged position to attack private citizens. A meeting of the Ministerial Association of Ottawa has been called for Monday morning at which the matter will be dealt with and it is expected that a resolution condemning Col. Hughes will be submitted. Several leading Protestant clergymen in interviews here to-day condemned the speech, which they characterized as unnecessarily abusive and low tactics, tending to cast reflections on the ministry as a whole.

PALESTINIANS IN OPEN REBELLION

TURKEY HAS A SERIOUS PROBLEM ON ITS HANDS IN HOLY LAND.

Many Towns Being Sacked—Probably 25,000 Tribesmen Are in the Field—Druses the Most Unmanageable.

Jerusalem, Feb. 4.—Official statements to the contrary notwithstanding, Turkey has a most serious situation on its hands with revolting tribes throughout Palestine, east of the Jordan and Dead Sea. Announcements that the rebels were yielding amounted to very little. Not many of them yielded at all, and most of those who did yield soon resumed hostilities in addition to this, large numbers who remained peaceful during the earlier fighting are now in rebellion, too.

Only the larger towns are safe from the tribesmen's attacks. Many of the smaller ones have been sacked. It is suicidal to travel through the country districts. Public works of all kinds have been forced to suspend. In fact, a very respectable little war is raging! Altogether, there are probably 25,000 tribesmen in the field.

Of all the rebels the most unmanageable are the Druses, who inhabit a district in Northern Syria, including Mount Lebanon, and the mountainous country south-west of Damascus. Their origin is doubtful. The Druses themselves say they are Arabs from the Yemen, but other traditions connect them with the Chinese and the Kurds. At any rate they have never fully acknowledged Turkey's authority, and when the Constantinople Government attempted to take a census among them, establish order, and enforce conscription, there was immediate trouble.

The Awan, Beno-Sakhr, Howeitat, Balgaweth, Shobakieh, Hajaya, Hamayde, Rawalla, Salayta, Maanieh and other lesser tribes quickly joined in the revolt. The nomadic character of the rebels, their mobility, and the fact that they are scattered in comparatively small war parties all over the country, makes them exceedingly difficult to supress. Turkey is steadily strengthening its forces in the disturbed region, and the end of the struggle is a long way from being in sight.

ARCHBISHOP BRUCHESI, BISHOP EMARD AND BISHOP ARCHAMBAULT WILL ISSUE ORDERS.

Forbidding Clerics or Members of Holy Orders to Air Preference for Parties or Newspapers.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal, Bishop Emard of Valleyfield and Bishop Archambault of Joliette will issue strict orders to their priests and to all members of religious orders under their guidance, strictly to confine themselves in future to their call and to the service of the holy see, by having nothing whatever to do with any political discussion, and by ceasing to show any preference to any political party or faction.

CLERGY IN POLITICS.

For weeks past a bitter controversy has been going on between French Liberal newspapers and Nationalist organs, but the matter arrived at an acute stage when the Rev. Father Lalonde S.J., took up the cudgels on behalf of the so-called Nationalist newspapers, and in a signed article in The Devoir, endeavored to justify the conduct of those who, while banishing from the colleges some of the French newspapers, tolerated and encouraged the reading of others. The same evening it is stated the chief editor of a Montreal French paper was called to the Archbishop's palace and saw Bishops Emard and Archambault who had attended during the day a function at the Montreal college and had been forcibly detained here by the storm.

The interference of some of the members of thee clergy in politics was discussed at length, with the result that could not leave any doubt in the minds of those present. The three dignitaries of the Catholic Church will, it is said, issue forthwith strict orders to their clergy, advising those who have shown public preferences for any political party to refrain in future from doing so.

It is also stated that instructions will follow advising the heads and directors of colleges and educational institutions in the archdiocese of Montreal and the diocese of Valleyfield and Joliette that not only political, but all newspapers are henceforth not to be read in the colleges, and that protection toward certain sheets must stop immediately.

FORCED TO INTERFERE.

Confronted it is said by the troubling problem which has been forced on them by recent occurrences and the bitter controversy between some of the French newspapers which has been going on for some weeks, the three heads of the Catholic Church mentioned saw nothing left but to call a halt to a state of things which had already gone too far and which threatened, if allowed to continue, to strike a fatal blow at the prestige and influence of the Catholic clergy.

An editorial article which appears in Le Canada of this morning, entitled "Politics and the Clergy," emphasized the contention that the church forbids expressly the unwarrantable interference of the clergy in matters of purely political bearing. Le Canada, in the course of its article, adds that it has recently received the testimony of competent authority as to the occurrence it takes exception to.

CHILDREN SUFFOCATED.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—Mrs. O. The children had taken refuge in a cupboard off the kitchen, and were both dead when the fireman managed to gain access to the place.

FEAR FOR LIVES OF THE MISSIONARIES

IT IS THOUGHT THEY MAY HAVE BECOME THE VICTIMS OF THEIR OWN CHARITY.

May Have Been Murdered—Efforts Are Being Made to Get Into Communication With Them in China.

Shanghai, Feb. 6.—Great alarm for the safety of American missionaries in the famine districts of Anhui and Kiang Su Provinces was expressed to-day by members of the relief committee. Efforts are being made to get into communication with the men in the outlying districts beyond the railroad lines. It is feared that the missionaries may have become the victims of their charity.

Numerous instances of hunger-maddened mobs attacking and murdering persons known to possess even insignificant supplies are reported by field agents. Orders have been issued that no relief be given by missionaries as individuals, but only as representing the organized relief boards.

Two millions lives at $1.50 each, was the estimate of their task made to-day by officers of the famine relief committee. For one dollar and a half, they declared, they could save one person from starvation until the spring. Two millions are known to be facing certain death from famine or pestilence unless adequate relief is brought.

Relief stations have been established by the foreign and missionary committees at Linhwaikwan, Menchen Nanhsinchow, Lingpi and Kuchen. Gruel is dispensed to all who apply.

In the famine districts the streets are peopled by unburied dead and beggars. The well-to-do keep within their homes, fearing if they go out they will be surrounded by scores of starving men pleading for food. The prosperous fear if they give aid to a single famine sufferer, they will be besieged by the rest of the population.

At Shuan Chein a mob of desperate famine sufferers, in the early stages of the famine, sacked the town, killing a large portion of the inhabitants.

The remainder, in fear of summary punishment, have made their escape from that district.

A TORONTO MAN FOUND DROWNED

WM. BULL, TRAVELER FOR JARVIS ST. CO., LOST LIFE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

His Body in Arrow Lake—Family in New York—Local Firm Advised of Disappearance on October 15.

Nelson, B.C., Feb. 3.—The Provincial police received a report to-day that the body of a man had been found on the shore of Arrow Lake, four miles above Renata. The body is well-dressed, and is partially bald, with some grey hairs. The only person known to be missing is Wm. Bull commercial traveler, of Toronto, who mysteriously disappeared from Revelstoke, or from a steamer on Arrow Lake in October, and for whom legal firms in Toronto and Winnipeg have been making vigorous search.

The Pugh Manufacturing Company, of Jarvis street, Toronto, said to-day that their traveler, Wm. Bull, who went West early in the fall, has been missing since October 15.

"The descriptions we have received so far are so vague that we cannot tell as yet whether the body found is that of Mr. Bull or not," said the head of the firm.

"Mr. Bull was a man of 65 years of age. His wife and family reside in New York City. The Pugh Manufacturing Company state that they have had a firm of lawyers in Calgary investigating the disappearance of the traveler. They state that a New York firm of lawyers, acting for the family of the missing man, have had detectives searching for him.

The Former Sultan Kills Two Wives

Salonika, Feb. 3.—Abdul Hamed, former Sultan of Turkey has gone violently insane, has killed two of his wives and is to-day confined in irons.

The murder of the two women who were among those who accompanied Abdul Hamed from Constantinople when he was exiled by the Young Turks, was particularly cruel. He choked one of them to death with his own hands and dashed the other so violently against the wall that she died a few hours later, according to one of the men who have been guarding the deposed ruler at his villa where he is spending his last days.

The ex-Sultan was subdued only after a fierce struggle in which he himself was severely injured.

Abdul Hamed is confined in a dungeon beneath the villa Allatine which while set apart for him as a residence, is in reality his prison. He was sent there in April 1909, when the Turkish revolution brought about by the Young Turks party finally completed and Sultan Mehammed X. ascended the throne.

Abdul Hamed had reigned for 30 years up to that time, had deluged his empire in blood and had kept 200,000 spies to betray their fellow citizens. He was noted for having tricked the diplomats of all Europe and from time to time shocked the world by his sensuality and crimes.

When Abdul was sent to the villa here his suite, which was allowed to accompany him, was composed of three Sultanas, or full wives, four Cadines, or inferior wives; five Halfas, or lady housekeepers privileged to go out of the Harem, two princes, his daughter and nine servants. This really gave him the allowance of 12 wives.

YOUTH DEAD ON TRAIN WAS FROM HAMILTON.

He Left for the West About Christmas Time—Sister Identifies Remains.

Hamilton, Feb. 3.—Mrs. John Green, 21 Cannon street west, received word this afternoon that the man found murdered in lower berth, No. 13, some weeks ago on the Chicago and Western Railroad at Flint, Mich. had been identified as her son, Thomas, 17 years of age. Green left here at Christmas time, bound for the west, in company with his father, who is now thought to be in Fort William.

The body was identified by the murdered youth's sister, who resides in Chicago, through a photo that was published in Chicago papers. Green is the man who was at first thought to have been L. R. Lowes, of Cannington, Ont., who has since turned up.

PREMIER WILL STAND OR FALL ON THE WASHINGTON AGREEMENT.

It is Said That Roblin and McBride Will be Called Upon by the Conservatives to Help Strengthen the Opposition.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—There is a rapidly growing feeling here that the Ottawa government will appeal to the people early in November next, and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will stand or fall on the Washington arrangement. It will make the people here in Quebec forget the Bourassa incident, and, in fact, the Nationalist leader has so far written more in favor than against the reciprocity agreement reached with the Americans by Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Paterson.

STRONG ADVERSE SENTIMENT.

Be this as it may, the sentiment here is running very high against any form of reciprocity, and even The Montreal Star has come down from its studied neutral position, and publishes a front-page appeal to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to save the nationality of the country, save the confederation from being split in two, and, in fact, save the west from becoming American.

It is held here that the days of the tall Canadian chimneys are over should the thin edge of the wedge be allowed to enter. All of the Conservative members who arrived here today to pass Sunday are unanimous against the arrangement, and they declare that there will be a movement all along the line; that Premiers Roblin and McBride will soon be in Ottawa in order to strengthen the hands of the federal opposition, and that a blast from the western statesmen may be expected any moment.

WILL APPEAL TO ELECTORS.

That Sir Wilfrid Laurier will appeal to the people next fall appears to be accepted by a great many well-informed politicians, and, in fact, it is stated here that during the prime minister's recent visit to Quebec he intimated to a close friend that this would be the last session of the present parliament. Sir Wilfrid is of the opinion that while he may lose, and lose heavily, he will be able to make up for this defection in the English-speaking provinces.

The Democrats will Vote for Agreement

Washington, Feb. 3.—It it becomes apparent that the vote on the Canadian reciprocity will be close, Champ Clarke, minority leader, will call a caucus of Democrats in order that they may present a solid front for the agreement.

Democratic House leaders declared to-day that from 80 to 90 per cent of their members favor the treaty and will vote for it.

ASKS FOR IMPORTANT LEGISLATION

Toronto, Feb. 6.—Toronto City Council proposes that all Ontario saloons shall close—where the municipalities individually consent—at nine o'clock each evening except on Saturday when closing time shall be fixed at one o'clock in the afternoon. And the proposal, moreover, is that the saloons shall not open till eight o'clock in the morning. As compared with the present hours in vogue in Ottawa and in most other Ontario cities this proposal is radical enough, cutting off as it does twenty-eight hours a week of the time during which the saloons are allowed to sell liquor.

All public bars open as a rule at six o'clock in the morning, and do not close till eleven in the evening, except Saturday, when the closing hour is fixed at seven o'clock. This allows ninety-eight hours a week for selling intoxicants, whereas the Toronto proposal allows but seventy hours.

MAKE THREATS TO MOB KING GEORGE

SUFFRAGETTES DEMAND REFERENCE TO THE FRANCHISE IN SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

The Police Are Active—Suffragette Question is Causing Authorities as Much Worry as the Anarchistic Outbreaks.

London, Feb. 4.—Threats from militant suffragettes that they will mob King George on Monday if his speech opening parliament doesn't indicate a wish that the franchise be granted to women, resulted in extraordinary police activity to-day.

The building of parliament will be surrounded by the largest number of police that has ever been called out at the opening of parliament. The authorities fear that the declarations of the women that they will use greater violence than they have ever manifested heretofore will be carried out.

ANARCHISTS ARRESTED.

In fact, fear over the suffragette question is causing the authorities as much worry as the anarchists. They are now said to be more than two score members of continental anarchists, but as the police have refused to give out any names this cannot be confirmed.

According to one report which reached the police to-day, leaders of the suffragettes have purchased a large supply of chains and locks, planning to lock themselves to the seats if they are able to smash their way past the guards. Scotland Yard detectives are investigating this report and if it found to be true, the chains will probably be seized.

It is hoped a large squad of fans will go and cheer for the home team.

1910 HEALTHIEST YEAR ON RECORD

LONDON HAD 8,000 FEWER DIE THAN IN THE PRECEDING YEAR.

Growing Less Each Year—Average Death Rate Per 1,000 in Year was 13.6—In December it Was 21.1.

London, Feb. 4.—The Registrar-General's returns for 1910 show that year to be the healthiest on record. The aggregate deaths in London numbered 85,128, which is 8,065 fewer than the average for the preceding five years. This is over 8,500 fewer deaths than in 1908, which was previously the healthiest year on record, and is nearly 7,000 fewer than in 1903, which was notoriously wet year.

The deaths have been fewer than the average in each of the last ten years, and in the aggregate for that period numbered 78,650 fewer than the average, which is considerably more than the total deaths for a year The deaths were below the average in each week throughout the year until the commencement of November, the five weeks ending respectively from November 12 to December 10 being the only weeks with the deaths in excess of the average.

OTTAWA CLERGYMEN ARE UP IN ARMS AGAINST HIS ATTACK ON REV. MILNE.

They Condemn His Speech in the Commons as Unnecessarily Abusive and Low Tactics.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Local Protestant clergymen are up in arms, so to speak, against the slashing verbal attack made in the Commons a few days ago by Col. Sam. Hughes upon Rev. J. W. H. Milne, of this city, in reply to some pulpit criticism of members of the Parliament, who take advantage of their privileged position to attack private citizens. A meeting of the Ministerial Association of Ottawa has been called for Monday morning at which the matter will be dealt with and it is expected that a resolution condemning Col. Hughes will be submitted. Several leading Protestant clergymen in interviews here to-day condemned the speech, which they characterized as unnecessarily abusive and low tactics, tending to cast reflections on the ministry as a whole.

Marlow went to a moving picture show yesterday afternoon, leaving her two children Donaldo and Anne, 6 and 7 years of age, in the flat occupied by the family on Chatham street. Boys playing in a yard at the rear noticed smoke pouring from the windows and summoned the firemen. A few dashes of water extinguished the blaze. The children had taken refuge in a cupboard off the kitchen, and were both dead when the fireman managed to gain access to the place.

LHE TORONTO GENERAL TRUSTS CORPORATION.

We heartily congratulate the President and Directors, as well as the shareholders of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation on the splendid showing made in the financial statement presented at the annual general meeting, which took place at the Head Office of the Corporation on Wednesday last, 1st instant.

Carefulness and efficiency are the two essential qualities in the management of a trust company, and these two qualities are to be found in the person of Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the efficient and popular managing director. It is with pardonable pride that he refers to his 29 years of effort in building up the business to its present splendid proportions. In his able address Mr. Langmuir stated, the duty of a trust company is not only to safeguard the trust funds committed to its care, but to avoid speculation of any kind even with its own capital and reserve funds, as these are the security for the safe management of its trusts. The directors of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation follow the rule of investing its capital and reserve under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act. Mr. Langmuir is justified in attributing the marked success of the Corporation in large measure to "the public's appreciation of the Corporation's determination to eliminate from its transactions all business of a speculative character, and confine itself exclusively to the management of estates and trusts, and the investment of funds under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act."

This marked success is indicated by the gratifying increase in the volume of the assets in the care of the Corporation, these assets having increased during the year by a net amount of $3,726,184.10, so that to-day they reach the surprising sum of $41,607,297.63. The fact that the new business received during the year reached a total of $6,725,047.90 is a tribute paid by the public to their appreciation of the conservative, reliable and efficient management of the past. When a man makes a will and appoints a corporation the executor, he is apt to choose the one in whose carefulness he has most confidence.

The directors of the Corporation have expressed their sense of the value of public confidence by electing to the presidency the Hon. Featherston Osler, for so many years a judge of the Court of Appeals of Ontario. His frank and cordial words of appreciation of the way in which its business is being conducted, and his belief in the principles underlying these business methods, will certainly add to the public's confidence in this reliable and sturdy company.

OLD LEADERS ON RECIPROCITY.

Sir Gilbert Parker, the Canadian Author, who represents Gravesend in the British House of Commons, says that the reciprocity agreement is a desperately serious thing, and will eventually mean the loss of Canada's grip on her independence. Sir Gilbert refers to the strong opposition of Sir John Macdonald and Hon. Edward Blake to commercial union with the United States.

Neither Sir John Macdonald nor Sir Edward Blake were opposed to reciprocity of the kind now proposed. Both expressly declared themselves as favoring reciprocity of that kind. In his famous letter to the electors of West Durham, Mr. Blake avowed his belief that in the political conditions as they then existed, the best arrangements would be, if practicable, a moderate revenue tariff with all the world, accompanied by liberal provisions for reciprocal free trade with the United States. The States, however, were opposed to a limited reciprocity, so that what seemed best was not attainable.

Sir John Macdonald, as we have already pointed out, was always in favor of as much reciprocity in natural products as he could obtain. He fought hard for that kind of reciprocity in Washington in 1871. In a resolution moved in Parliament in 1878, he expressed the belief that the National Policy would eventually bring about reciprocity. The N. P. tariff of 1879 contained an offer of reciprocity in natural products. Parliament was dissolved at Sir John's instance in 1891, in order that the Government might have a mandate from the people to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the United States. The opponents of reciprocity to-day must find their own support. They can obtain no support in the declarations of Sir John Macdonald or Mr. Blake.

By LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

The gallant Crimean veteran therefore hardened his heart, set out once more for Lucknow and fought another most successful battle at Bussecrutgunge. There could be no questioning either the victory or its cost. Another such success and his column would not number a half battalion.

That night he watched the weary soldiers digging graves for their fallen comrades, and, while his brain was torn with conflicting problems, a spy brought news that the powerful Gwalior Contingent was marching to seize Cawnpore. He hesitated no longer. As a general he had no right to be swayed by emotion. He must protect Cawnpore as a base and trust to the fortune of war that Lucknow might keep the flag flying.

Malcolm was with him when he formed this resolution. Outwardly cold, Sir Henry seemed to his youthful observer, who now knew him better, to resemble a volcano coated with ice.

"Major," he said, "the column will retreat at daybreak. But I will get my other aides to make arrangements. Are you quite recovered from your wound? Are you capable of undergoing somewhat severe exertion, I mean?"

Frank answered modestly that he thought he had never been better in health or strength, though he wondered inwardly what sort of exertion could be more "severe" than his experiences of the preceding three weeks.

But Havelock knew what he was talking about, as shall be seen.

"I want you to make the best of your way to Delhi," he said in his unbending way. "I leave details to you, except that I would like you to start to-night if possible. Of course any kind of escort that is available would be fatal to your success, but, if I remember his record rightly, that servant of yours may be useful. I do not propose to give you any despatches. If you get through tell the Commander-in-Chief in the Punjab exactly how we are situated here. Tell him Lucknow will not be relieved for nearly two months, but that I will hold Cawnpore till the last man falls. I hope and trust you may be spared to make the journey in safety. If you succeed you will receive a gratuity and a step in rank. Good-by!"

He held out his hand, and his calm eyes kindled for a moment. Then Frank found himself walking to his tent and reviewing all that this meant to Winifred and himself. He was none the less a brave man if his lips trembled somewhat and there came a tightening of the throat that suspiciously resembled a sob.

Two months! Could a delicate girl live so long in another such inferno at Lucknow as he had seen in Wheeler's abandoned entrenchment at Cawnpore?

"God help us both!" he murmured bitterly, passing a hand involuntarily over his misty eyes. With the action he brushed away doubt and fears. He was a soldier again, one to whom hearing and obedience were identical.

"Chumru," he said, when he found his domestic scratching mud off a coat with his nails for lack of a clothes-brush, "we get out for Delhi to-night, you and I."

"All right, sahib," was the unexpected parry to this astounding thrust, and Chumru kept on with his task.

"It is a true thing," said Malcolm, who knew full well that the Mohammedan understood the extraordinary difficulty of such a mission. "It is the General-sahib's order, and he wishes you to go with me. Will you come?"

"Huzoor, have you ever gone anywhere without me since you came to my hut that night when I was stricken with the smallpox—?"

"Only once, you rascal, and then you came after me to my great good fortune. Very well, then; that is settled. Stop raising dust and listen. We ride to-night. Let us discuss the manner of our traveling, for 'tis a long road and full of mischief."

Chumru laid aside the garment and tickled his wiry hair underneath his turban.

"By the Kaaba," he growled, "such roads lead to Jehannum more easily than to Delhi. Do you go to the Princess Roshinara, sahib?"

Malcolm's overwrought feelings found vent in a hearty laugh.

"What fiend tempted thee to think of her, owl?" he cried.

"Nay, sahib, no fiend other than a woman. What else would bring your honor to Delhi? Is there not occupation here in plenty?"

"I tell thee, image, that the General-sahib hath ordered it. And I am making for the British camp on the Ridge, not for the city."

Chumru dismissed the point. He was a fatalist and he probably reserved his opinion. Malcolm had beguiled the long night after they left Rai Bareilly with the story of his strange meetings with the King's daughter. To the Eastern mind there was Kismet in such happenings.

"I would you had not lost Bahadur Shah's pass, huzoor," he said. "That would be worth a bagful of gold mohurs on the north road now. But, as matters stand, we must fall back on walnut juice. You have blue eyes and fair hair, alack, yet must we—"

"What! Wouldst thou make me a brother of thine?" demanded Malcolm, understanding that the walnut juice was intended to darken his skin.

"There is no other way, huzoor. This is no ride of a night. We shall be seven days, let us go at the best, and meeting budmashes at every mile. If you did not talk Urdu like one of us, sahib, I should bid you die here in peace rather than fall in the first village. Still, we may have luck, and you can bandage your hair and forehead and swear that those cursed Feringhis nearly cut your scalp off. But you must be rubbed all over, sahib, until you are the color of brown leather, for we can have no patches of white skin showing where, perchance, your garments are rent."

Malcolm saw the wisdom of the suggestion and fell in with it. While Chumru went to compound walnut juice in the nearest bazaar, he, in pursuance of the plan they had concocted together, got a native writer to compile a letter which purported to emanate from Nana Sahib, and was addressed to Bahadur Shah. It was a very convincing document. Malcolm mentioned a garbled history of recent events, and one of the Brahmin's emis-

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $280,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,600, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roselyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, ey should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

BEAR'S FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

New York Zoo Keepers Triumph Through Chloroform—Polar Trip Sequel

A giant Polar bear brought to New York by Captain Bob Bartlett, put up a big fight for liberty.

Capt. Bartlett is the Englishman who went nearest to the North Pole with Commander Peary, and since then he has made another trip to the Arctic with Paul R. Rainey and Harry Whitney, the American sportsman. This bear is described as weighing nearly a ton and standing eight feet high on its hind legs. It is undoubtedly the biggest bear in captivity.

With dogs to distract the animal's attention, he was captured on an ice floe in the Arctic. Rainey, operating from the right flank, lassoed the bear, who has been christened Silver King, and Whitney, working from the left flank, swung his rope simultaneously. All hands of the hunting party were requisitioned. It was a sort of tug-of-war between Rainey's and Whitney's teams, both pulling in opposite directions, the main object being to pull the struggling and desperate captive from the ice-floe into the water.

This manoeuvre was accomplished, and by means of a derrick the animal was finally hoisted on board. He lay in the hold, starving for a few days, and was at length tempted into a strong cage, where provisions had been placed.

At New York, however, Silver King made his last struggle for liberty, and was not subdued until five pounds of chloroform had been placed into his cage. The latter was swung successfully from the ship into the pantechnicon, the bear growling and protesting, flinging himself against the bars at the sides of the cage all the time.

A large crowd had assembled at the ship's side, says the Telegraph correspondent. Suddenly, when twenty keepers from the Zoo were congratulating themselves, the giant bear succeeded in getting his paw through the back of the cage, and in a few minutes would probably have freed himself.

A race now ensued for two-inch planks and nails. The Zoo keepers fought the battle with hammers and nails against the teeth and claws of Silver King. As the bear gashed and ripped they boarded him in, closing up the holes as fast as he could make them. Suddenly, while the Zoo laborers reared, the bear's massive head, with his red tongue rolling out like a dog's, and his big amber eyes blazing, shot from a hole in the roof.

The Zoo keeper swiftly hammered the bear over the head with an iron bar, and in a second half a dozen men, with boards and hammers, were on the roof, ready to close the hole. The bear, however, was too quick for them, and he rose up, and the men fairly fell off the roof.

Then the Zoo curator, while the keepers plied the creature with iron bars, and policemen stood around with big revolvers, keeping the crowd back, had a sudden inspiration. He dashed away on his motor-car, ransacked several druggists' stores, and returned with five pounds of chloroform. He saturated lint with four pounds of the opiate, and forced it into the cage, every hole of which was now closely covered with canvas, and Silver King succumbed very speedily to the Zoo. Mounted policemen went in front, and more mounted policemen in the rear. The Zoo keepers rode on the top of the pantechnicon, and the Zoo curator courageously stuck to the top of the bear's cage, and at intervale renewed doses of the anaesthetic.

By the time the Zoo several miles distant, was reached, the bear was more dead than alive, so he was easily transferred to a big cage, where he was welcomed by several other natives of the frozen North.

A VARIED CAREER

Sir F. Lugard Hob-nobbed With Rough Italian Sailors

Sir Frederick Lugard, the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Hong Kong, has had a singularly varied and interesting career. The story of his adventures in Africa alone reads like a romance, his method of entering the dark continent for the first time being, to say the least, most unorthodox. With $250 in his belt and practically no outfit except an old rifle, paid for in India by shooting a man-eating tiger with a price on its head, Sir Frederick boarded a tramp steamer at Gibraltar, where he happened to be stationed at the time, and sailed away for Massowah with the intention of joining the Italians who were at that time fighting the Abyssinians. Funds giving out at Suez he was compelled to ship as a deck passenger on a timber boat, and hob-nob with the rough Italian sailors who manned it. Sir Frederick has told a good story of a fiery old colonel's visit to a village barber. The officer pounced into the shop, placed his sword beside a chair and said, "Shave me, sir, and beware; if you cut me I will cut your head off." This threat was too much for the man in charge, and he called an assistant, telling him to shave the gentleman, and informing him of what to expect should the razor not act peppery. The boy promptly got to business, and when the operation had been satisfactorily performed the colonel inquired, "Weren't you frightened at all?" The boy replied in the negative, and, asked his reason, he responded, "Well, it's like this, sir. If I had cut you at all, I should have had first chance. I should have finished you off for safety."

RARE SNAKE IN ENGLAND

A fine specimen of the North American bull snake has been killed at Preston, near Chippenham. It is surmised that it either belonged to a local fancier or had escaped from a travelling menagerie.

SHOEBLACK TO OPERA SINGER

How a Notable New Tenor Was Discovered in Humble Life—He Delighted Mascagni

A new tenor who, it is quite possible, will one day rank with the world's greatest singers, has appeared in London, England. This is Mr. B. Nevada Landino, who, like many another famous vocalist, began life in a humble way. Mr. Landino, who is twenty-seven years of age, is a Russian Pole of Jewish extraction. His family emigrated years ago to Cleveland, Ohio, and young Barney earned his living by blacking boots and selling newspapers. On the Sabbath he sang in the Synagogue, for among the Jewish colony his naturally fine voice was much appreciated.

Presently young Landino went to work as a cigar-maker, and in that capacity met a girl who was also one day to be raised to a much higher position in the social scale—Rose Pastor, who subsequently married a millionaire, and devoted her time and money to the betterment of the conditions of her less fortunate sisters.

Miss Pastor often told Landino that with his beautiful voice he ought to make a name. He was anxious enough to improve his condition, but who was there to help? At last, however, the editor of the Cleveland Press drew attention in an article called "A New Tenor" to Landino's abilities. This attracted the attention of Mr. Alfred Arthur, director of the Cleveland School of Music, who sent for him and gave him lessons gratis.

Later on Landino drifted to New York. One day he was passing the Grand Opera House with a friend and saw that Mascagni was to conduct. "Now's your chance," said the friend; "go in and try your voice." Landino went, but he was terribly nervous. Mascagni, who was producing "Iris," was testing the voices of the singers. Landino, shy and afraid, was the last. When he had finished Mascagni slapped him on the back shouted "Bravo!" and there and then gave him a part.

For two years he worked hard under Emma Nevada in Milan, and that is how he comes by part of his name. She was so proud of her pupil that she wished it. The new tenors repertoire embraces seventeen operas and two hundred songs, and he sings in four languages. He is a teetotaler and a non-smoker.

ABRUZZI'S STORY

The Young Eskimo Who Loved a Beautiful Maiden

The Duke of the Abruzzi is one of the most successful of living explorers, in which capacity he has had a fair share of adventures and hair-breadth escapes. During his North Pole expedition he had his right hand so severely frozen that two of his fingers had to be partially amputated. Another time during an ascent of the Ruwenzori range, as the Duke was making an observation in advance of his party, he slipped on a bank of loose stones and fell to the edge of an immense precipice, where he remained a prisoner for three hours. The Duke has picked up many interesting stories in the course of his various travels. Here is one of them, which he heard in the Far North. A young Eskimo loved a beautiful maiden whose father's hut was near his own, but, as is so often the case, the girl's parents would not hear of the match. One night a great storm ripped up a crevice in the ice, and between the two huts there yawned an abyss bridged only by a slender strip of ice. Here was the chance which the young lover sought. He crossed the frail bridge in the dead of night, and crept to the home of his sweetheart to steal her from her cruel father. The Eskimos sleep in bags of sealskin, and, with bated breath and loudly beating heart, he hoisted on to his back the one in which he thought his lady-love slumbered. He recrossed the strip of ice, and, safe on the other side, he broke it down with the blow of an axe, so that no one could pursue him save by the aid of a boat. Regaining his own hut he opened the bag to gaze upon the fair one, when, with a cry of horror, he staggered back dumbfounded, for, in his haste to get the affair over, he had stolen his sweetheart's father by mistake.

SCRAP DREADNOUGHTS

Remarkable Development in the Construction of Battleships

When his Majesty's battleship Dreadnought was launched in February, 1906, one had the feeling that finality had surely been reached in the matter of naval construction; but the navies of the world have been making giant strides ever since.

First came greater Dreadnoughts, and then Dreadnought cruisers, Bacchus scouts, and Tribal destroyers, entirely turbine-driven, followed by great steps in the use of oil-fuel.

And in the past few weeks several startling announcements have been put forward. Within a few days we had talk of motor-driven battleships, and a report of a coming small destroyer, of a height only 26 inches above the water, and with only two guns, but of such power and rapidity of fire that the money spent on Dreadnoughts and super-Dreadnoughts might as well have been thrown into the sea. These guns are to be of 17 inch bore, and will fire a weight of 6,822 pounds.

Nor must we forget the battleship cruiser Lion. She is more powerful than the most powerful Dreadnought, and faster than the fastest destroyer. The St. Vincent, the largest Dreadnought now in commission, has only 19,250 tons displacement, as against the Lion's 26,350 tons.

Fell From Train.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 2.—Thinking that she had reached the station, Miss Annie Clobesky, of Guelph, stepped off the train and is now in the hospital suffering from a sprained hip and thigh and a fracture of the skull.

London, Feb. 2.—Organized shoots are taking place every Wednesday throughout South Devon, in order to keep down the wood pigeon, which is increasingly dangerous to root crops. Last year 40,000 of these birds were killed last year.

ELECTION RIOTS IN THE LONG AGO

Famous Scraps in the "Good Old Times" in Edinburgh, Cheapside, Carnarvon, South Devon and Other Places

In the "good old times" the polls occurred during an election it was generally voted a very dull affair, especially as the rival parties would often hire burly ruffians to keep order at their meetings or defy their opponents during demonstrations.

One of the worst election riots occurred at Sixmilebridge, in County Clare, on July 22nd, 1853, when the military fired on the mob, killing no fewer than five of them.

Mobs in Edinburgh

But England cannot point the finger of scorn at Ireland, because hardly a General Election passes but what some constituency shows that it considers disorder a good argument. Scotland, on the other hand, takes its elections very seriously, trouble only being met with in the rougher districts.

However, these modern disturbances during election times are nothing like the wild riots that occurred during the Reform Act General Election of 1831. Scotland was especially vehement in her demonstrations, windows being broken and voters against Reform being prevented from exercising their constitutional rights.

In Edinburgh a mob seized the Lord Provost on election day and threatened to throw him over North Bridge, while at Lanark the Conservative candidate was seriously injured. At Jedburgh a howling mob hooted Sir Walter Scott. He wrote in his diary "The mob were exceedingly vociferous and brutal, as they usually are nowadays. The population gathered in formidable numbers—a thousand from Hawick, and blackguards."

Trouble at Cardiff

At Dumbarton the Conservative candidate had to hide all day in a garret, as his life was in danger, while at Ayr voters of the same color took refuge in the town hall. A gallant band of Whigs escorted them out of danger to a steamboat.

It was the riots that occurred in London at this time that caused the Duke of Wellington to have the windows of Apsley House guarded with the famous iron shutters. The people were so overjoyed at the dissolution of Parliament and the coming of a General Election that they smashed the windows of all who had opposed the passing of the Bill.

But there have been some pretty good riots in modern times. Feeling ran very high in 1886 in some places and serious disturbances took place at Cardiff. Sir Edward Reed, the famous naval constructor, was the Liberal, and the Hon. H. R. Brand, afterwards Viscount Hampden, the Unionist.

The contest was a very stormy one, and the return of Sir Edward caused the greatest exultation. After the declaration of the poll a crowd, estimated at 10,000 strong, armed with brickbats, stones, and sticks, proceeded to the offices of the Conservative newspaper intent on wrecking its offices.

The local police had been reinforced by members of the county constabulary, and they charged the mob with drawn truncheons. A fierce battle ensued, and there was considerable bloodshed, even women and children being injured in the melee. The Home Office sent down Sir John Bridge, the famous Bow Street Magistrate, to inquire into the matter, after peace had been restored.

Lloyd George's Town

Carnarvon is a town in which feeling has run very high during the past few elections, trouble occurring both in 1906 and last January. Miners and quarrymen sometimes allow their feelings to get the better of them, and in the first-named year hundreds of them swarmed into the town, driving all known opponents off the streets. Mr Lloyd George himself having to rebuke his exuberant supporters.

But matters were worse a year ago. Two thousand quarrymen came into Carnarvon and caused a reign of terror. Windows were broken, and even ladies assaulted. Fifty extra policemen had been imported from Manchester, but they were powerless, and as it was thought the crowd was disappointed because the result was not going to be declared that night they were quietly withdrawn; but the mob got to know of it, and several of them were roughly handled as they made their way to the station.

It was a crowd largely composed of quarry and pottery workers that caused the riot at Newton Abbott, South Devon, about two years ago when Captain Morrison Bell was returned at the by-election. Mrs. Pankhurst had a narrow escape, and the premises of the Conservative Club were nearly wrecked.

Last January a riot occurred at High Wycombe after the close of the polling, a "dump" shop being wrecked and its contents burned in the middle of the street. For the declaration of the poll 1,000 police were imported to keep order.

STAMP COLLECTIONS

One of Those in Vienna is Valued at a Million Dollars

The Ministry of Commerce has announced that an exhibition of stamps will be held next autumn in Vienna. A novel feature of it will be the famous Jugent or juvenile collection. One collection is valued at over a million dollars, and contains a newspaper stamp of the eighteenth century which originally cost a fifth of one cent, but for which $20,000 was refused recently.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amount necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

HANDLING OF POTATOES

Some Useful Hints as to Digging, Sorting and Storing the Crop

If potatoes have not been affected with blight or rot, the best time to dig them is as soon as the tops have died, if the weather is favorable. Too often potatoes are dug just before the frost becomes severe enough to freeze the soil to the depth of an inch or so. This time of digging is usually chosen as a matter of convenience and quite irrespective of when the stalks die. The stalks dry up in many places about September and often before. If the potatoes are planted on sandy, loamy soil or a gravelly loam with good natural or artificial drainage there is not much danger of injuring the crop by leaving them in the ground a short time, but if there is no disease the sooner they are dug the better. Potatoes which have been killed by blight will usually rot as soon as the conditions are favorable, and for this reason a diseased crop is better left in the ground, as the tubers which are diseased will most of them show signs of rot before they have to be taken up in October. If diseased potatoes are dug and stored as soon as the tops are dead the disease will almost certainly develop in the pit or cellar, and healthy tubers will rot from contact with the diseased ones. It is not a good practice to dig diseased potatoes early and put them in the field. It is better to delay digging as long as possible and then put the potatoes in a cool, well ventilated cellar where the disease may be checked. Potatoes in wet soil should be dug sooner than those in that which is dryer and well drained. They should be dug in dry weather, so that when they are taken to the cellar or storeroom they will be perfectly dry. If the tubers are housed when wet the conditions become very favorable for the development of the disease which may affect them and for the rotting of the healthy potatoes from contact with those affected.

Digging

The old-fashioned way of digging with the fork is too slow and expensive a method. One man with a fork will dig little more than half an acre a day, while a good potato digger will dig from four to six acres a day. Where several acres of potatoes are grown a mechanical digger becomes almost a necessity and although the outlay for a digging machine amounts to forty or sixty dollars or more it will harvest the crop at a much smaller cost per bushel than can be done by hand. Not only will it raise the crop more economically than by a fork or plough, but with it the grower is more likely to get his crop dug and picked up while the weather is fine, which is a great consideration.

Where large areas are grown it will be found most convenient to have a number of boxes laid here and there along the rows just far enough apart to allow a man to dump a pail full into them. These boxes should be made strong and of light material and capable of holding about one bushel. They can then be easily lifted by one man onto the wagon and drawn to the cellar or store-room.

Storing

Potatoes should be stored dry in a cool, well ventilated cellar or storeroom which is perfectly dark, as potatoes soon deteriorate in quality if exposed to light. There is no doubt that great loss occurs every year from the careless storing of potatoes by putting them in wet into warm and poorly ventilated cellars and piling them in great heaps. Instead of piling the potatoes against the wall or on the floor, slats should be nailed about one inch apart and about four inches from the wall and a temporary floor should be laid four inches above the permanent floor with small openings between the boards. This will allow air to circulate around and through the pile. If the piles have to be made very large, square ventilators of wood made partly with open slats on two sides and running from the top to the bottom of the pile could be put in here and there through the pile. Another good plan is to keep the potatoes in large crates made with slats nailed close enough together to prevent the potatoes from dropping through. Thousands of bushels of potatoes are lost every year through lack of ventilation. The temperature of the cellar or store-house should be kept as near to 35 to 35 degrees as possible. The cooler potatoes are kept without freezing the better. If too warm the value of the tubers for seed is lessened, since they sprout too easily. They are also much injured for eating.

A good sorting machine can now be obtained which lessens labor considerably. The practice of many growers is to sort and bag the potatoes just before marketing.

DO YOU KNOW?

Why Old Shoes are Thrown at Weddings?

Throwing shoes at weddings after a newly-married couple on their departure for their honeymoon originated in the old Jewish custom of handing to the purchaser of land an old shoe as a token of surrender or renunciation. The bride's father gave a shoe to the husband, or threw it after him, to signify they surrendered to him all authority over their daughter.

Who was "Jack Robinson"?

Few of those who make use of the name "Jack Robinson" in popular parlance of the figurative order are aware that the person referred to in the phrase had historical actuality. John Robinson was a political favorite of George III., and sat as member for Harwich for twenty-six years, during part of which period he was Secretary to the Treasury. In a debate on the India Bill this prominent statesman was once bitterly attacked by the witty and sharp-tongued Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who, denouncing bribery and its instigators, replied to the cries of "Name, name," by pointing to Robinson on the Treasury Bench, exclaiming at the same time, "Yes, I could name him as soon as I could say Jack Robinson," and thus originated the saying still current.

Who Invented the Compass?

The Italians claim the invention of the compass, attributing it to Flavio Gioja, a native of Amalfi, between the years 1300-30; but the probability is that he improved rather than invented the instrument, for there is evidence that as early as the year 1243 A.D. a primitive kind of compass was in common use on the Syrian coast, and it is said that on the return of Marco Polo from China in 1260 he brought with him a knowledge of this among other Oriental inventions.

What "Cocktail" Comes From?

In "the days which were earlier," when doctors sometimes used more strenuous methods than their successors do now in the cure of disease, there was a habit among them of treating certain diseases of the throat with a pleasant liquid, which was applied by the top of a long feather plucked from a cock's tail. In course of time this remedy came to be used as a gargle, still retaining its old name. During the course of its evolution the gargle gained most of the present ingredients—spirits, sugar, bitters, and so on—till it became the beverage of to-day.

Why the Red Sea is so Styled?

In the Red Sea reefs of bright pink coral are clearly to be seen. Much of the rocky bed of this sea is the work of the coral insect. But probably the true reason for the name of the Red Sea is because all along its eastern shore lies ancient Edom. This word signifies "red." It was given to the region—not from the color of its sandstone hills, but from its people. These are the descendants of him who came in faint and weary from hunting, and said to his brother, "Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint; therefore was his name called Edom."

BEATS JARNDYCE CASE

A Suit in Chancery Still Undecided After Six Hundred Years

A law case, which was begun in 1348, and was interrupted because Richard de Maundeville had to leave for the war in France, has just been resumed in the Chancery Court.

The point at issue is the right to hold a market at Stowmarket, Suffolk, and the suit was originally brought by the Abbot of St. Osyth, Essex, in the twenty-second year of Edward III., against Richard de Maundeville. According to the abbot, who claimed to be lord of the manor, Richard had wrongfully obtained the grant of the right to hold a market in Stowmarket, and his claim was "to the grave damage of the said abbot."

Richard claimed the King's protection, and eventually the case was adjourned sine die because of his departure abroad.

At the resumed hearing the modern representatives of Richard asserted that the modern representative of the abbot had no right to set up a rival market. This assertion was supported by Mr. Ogden, a famous London lawyer, who cited the Domesday Book and other authorities to prove his case.

"When Richard de Maundeville went abroad," remarked the judge, "he little foresaw that we would be fighting the same question 600 years afterwards."

The hearing was adjourned for the second time after extracts from the abbot's pleadings had been read.

AN ORGAN ON THE ROOF

A Queer Custom at a Bohemian Monastery—Primitive Instrument

In these days, when the music in churches and chapels has reached such a high standard, it is surprising to find such a primitive organ in use as one in Bohemia. This organ is one of the oldest forms of the mechanical organ, and is a very humble affair in comparison with some of the magnificent instruments to be found in English places of worship. It is still used in the Catholic Redemptorist monastery at Prague, and is played by one of the monks every Sunday morning on the roof of the monastery.

Although this strange organ is but a primitive-looking thing, it has a very sweet tone, and the harmonious sounds are heard for a great distance. Prague is an old-fashioned town in Bohemia, and its ideas are not very progressive, so that this strange old barrel-organ is quite in keeping with its surroundings. It has been in constant use for over [illegible] years.

The report to the Shareholders was then read, as follows:

To the Shareholders:—

Your Directors have pleasure in submitting the Twenty-ninth Annual Report of the Corporation, accompanied with the usual statements showing its operations for the year.

The Profit and Loss Statement herewith submitted shows the net profits after payment of all expenses of management at the Head Office and its Branches, and after making allowance for every ascertained loss, to be $178,674.01. Two Half-Yearly Dividends, No. 57 and No. 58, at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum	$ 80,000.00

The new building in course of construction for the Corporation on the corner of Bay and Melinda Streets is sufficiently advanced to show the exterior design, which has been very favorably commented upon. Some delay has arisen in receiving the Doulton Terra Cotta from England, but it is hoped that the building will be ready for occupation by the 1st of September this year.

Your Directors have pleasure in announcing that the Hon. Featherstone Osler, K.C., late a Judge of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, was appointed a director and subsequently accepted the Presidency of the Corporation in the place of Dr. John Hoskin, K.C., L.L.D., who resigned in the early part of the year.

All which is respectfully submitted.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATES.

We, the undersigned, beg to report that we have made a full examination of the books, accounts, and vouchers of The Toronto General Trusts Corporation to the 31st December, 1910, and find same to be correct and properly set forth in the above statements of Profit and Loss, and Assets and Liabilities. We have examined, and find in order, all the mortgages, debentures, bonds, and scrip of the Corporation, as well as those negotiated for the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, and Trusts, Estates, and the Agencies in the Corporation's hands, and we have checked same with mortgage and debenture ledgers and registers. The bankers' balances, after deducting outstanding checks, agree with the books of the Corporation.

We have also examined the reports of the Auditors of the Winnipeg and Ottawa Branches and find that they agree with the Head Office books.

R. F. SPENCE, F.C.A. "Can." GEO. MACBETH,

Ruditors.

Toronto, January 30th, 1911.

The President, Hon. Featherston Osler, made the following remarks following the report:

During the few months in which I have had the honor of being connected with the Corporation, I have had many opportunities of observing the general character of its business and the system adopted by it in relation to investments and the administration of estates.

To the general body of shareholders I would say that as to the former what at once struck me was the absence of anything that could be described as merely speculative in its nature, the funds entrusted to it under the agency and guarantee side of its transactions being invested, as trustees are required to invest them, upon securities approved by trained and experienced valuators and passed upon by the Board. Properties are examined and inspected from time to time, and re-valued upon any extension of a loan, and the securities accepted are closely scrutinized at short intervals by an Inspection Committee, and every care is thus taken that valuators and others continue to perform their duties.

Of the administration of the estates under the care of the Corporation I cannot speak too highly. This is done by an experienced staff of officers, and results in a promptitude of winding up and economy of administration which contrasts favorably with similar administration by individuals.

I need hardly say that it is in the interest of the shareholders that each of them should be, as he can be, a centre of influence for increasing the business of this important Corporation.

The Managing Director, Mr. J. W. Laarmuir, in presenting the financial statements of the Corporation for the year, said:—

The statements which have just been read to you showing the operations of the Corporation for the past year, and the financial results of such operations, should, I think, be satisfactory, not only to the shareholders of the Corporation, but also to the several thousand persons who are interested in our work as beneficiaries of estates and trusts under the management of the Corporation. With the exception of 1905, when an Executorship of over five millions fell into the Corporation, the past year brought to us the largest aggregate volume of new business since our establishment in 1882. Not only has the annual amount of new business largely increased, but the net profits are, as the result of such increase, in excess of any previous year in the history of the Corporation.

I think I am quite warranted in assuming that the continued success of the Corporation is largely attributed to the public appreciation of the Corporation's determination to eliminate from its transactions all business of a speculative character and confine itself exclusively to the management of estates and trusts, and the investment of funds under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act, unless otherwise provided by Will or Trust Deeds.

The Assets and Liabilities sheet shows the residuum of assets remaining under the management of the Corporation at the close of 1910, after large distribution to beneficiaries, to be $41,601,297.63, as compared with $37,881,113.53 in 1909; $35,161,646.79 in 1908; $32,909,902.68 in 1907; $31,466,279.39 in 1906, and $29,096,478.11 in 1905, thus showing an increase in assets of over $12,000,000.00 in six years.

The Profit and Loss Account shows net profits for the year of $178,674.01, which added to the balance of $54,770.94 brought forward from the preceding year, leaves $232,844.95 at the credit of that account for distribution. Out of this amount your directors have declared and paid two dividends at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, amounting to $80,000; have carried $100,000 to Reserve Fund, thus increasing that fund to $600,000, and have brought forward to the credit of Profit and Loss Account $52,844.95. It will thus be seen that our paid-up Capital, Reserve Fund, and Undivided Profits as at 31st December, 1910, amount to $1,652,844.95.

The Profit and Loss exhibit for 1910 is the more satisfactory when I state that we have been obliged to realize from our capital investments, funds to the extent of $336,637.39 for the purchase of the new site on which our building is being erected, and for payments made to the construction contractors, thereby reducing our earning power, until the building is ready for occupation. We have not as is frequently done, charged interest against our building account during the process of construction, as such a charge would only add to the cost of the building.

In the matter of the earnings of the Corporation for the year, I am sure, having regard to the fact that we have now in our hands for management assets over forty million dollars, that it must be conceded by everyone that our profits are exceedingly moderate. This statement should be all the more interesting to our clients, as well as to those having under consideration the employment of the Corporation, when it is remembered that, notwithstanding the expert service and experience required in the administration of estates comprising assets of almost every description, our total management expenses and all charges for rent, advertising, etc., were for the year just closed approximately only 2-5ths of 1 per cent. on the volume of business in hand. I am confident that this rate will be found to compare most favorably with other companies and indeed, with loan companies, notwithstanding the fact that a trust company business is necessarily much more complex.

Our new investments in mortgages amounted during the year to $3,147,206.85, and in municipal debentures to $335,976.90, these latter securities being purchased for estates where the Corporation is directed under the wills to invest in such securities; the policy of the Corporation being, as far as possible, to place the trust funds under its care in first mortgages on improved real estate as authorized under the terms of the Trustee Investment Act. Reference to our statement of Assets and Liabilities will indicate that out of total investments of over $20,000,000 made by the Corporation for Trust and Guaranteed accounts over $15,000,000 or 75 per cent. is invested in first mortgages on real estate; and I might add that nearly 20 per cent. of the investments in debentures were made under directions contained in wills or deeds of trust.

I am pleased to state that the supply of applications for loans on mortgages has been well maintained during the year, and that the close of the year finds our available trust funds practically all invested.

Respecting the collection of interest on mortgage investments, you will no doubt be interested in knowing that of the interest which fell due prior to October 1st last over 96 per cent was paid before the end of the year. With the short crop of the past year, in some sections of the North-West, we cannot, however, expect as prompt payment of interest this year.

Reference is made in the report to our new building now in course of construction on the corner of Bay and Melinda streets. We hope that this building will be ready for occupation not later than the first of September next, and I am sure, when completed it will be not only a credit to this Corporation, but also to the city, and, I trust, will bring a reasonable return on the amount of capital invested therein. We purpose making a very prominent feature of the Safe Deposit Department, which is being constructed and equipped up to the very highest standard that obtains in the largest cities in the United States. The entire basement, seventy-four by ninety-one feet, will be utilized in this branch of work, including the storage of all kinds of valuables. In the large cities of the United States efforts are being made with considerable success, by companies operating safe deposit vaults, to rent to every family, even to those of moderate means, compartment for the safe-keeping of securities, life insurance policies, deeds, etc., and there is no reason—provided excellent accommodation is furnished in the way of waiting and writing rooms, apartments for examination of papers, and for the holding of meetings of committees, companies, or beneficiaries of estates, who have securities under their care—why this class of business should not very largely increase in the city of Toronto.

The Board of Directors have had under their consideration for some time the opening of a branch of the Corporation in Vancouver, B.C., and authority has been received, subject to proper arrangements being concluded, to proceed with the establishment of a Branch to be located in that city. The Corporation has also opened up during the year an office at Saskatoon and agencies have been established throughout the Province of Alberta, such office and agencies being under the supervision and direction of the Advisory Board of the Winnipeg Branch.

The shareholders will be pleased to learn that it has been decided by the Board of Directors to pay quarterly dividends instead of half-yearly. The stock of the Corporation is held by about four hundred shareholders, the very large majority of whom reside within the Province of Ontario.

The shareholders of the Corporation and its many clients were doubtless glad to learn that the Board had secured the services, as President of the Corporation, of the Honorable Featherstone Osler, K.C., who retired from the Bench in the early part of the year. Mr. Osler brings to the performance of his duties not only the very highest legal qualifications, but a large and varied experience extending over thirty years on the Bench. In the selection of Mr. Osler as successor to such eminent lawyers as the Hon. Edward Blake and Dr. John Hoskin, the Board has practically concluded that it is in the best interests of a Corporation having charge of a large volume of estates and trusts in respect of which legal points are constantly presenting themselves for settlement, to have as its president one who has been a prominent member of the legal profession.

I would feel that I had neglected my duty to the shareholders and the general public if I did not again refer to the apparent want of discrimination that exists, both by the Parliament at Ottawa and the Legislature of Ontario, in granting charters to organizations designated "trust" companies, empowering them to speculate in the purchase and sale of real estate, underwrite industrial bond issues, act as holding companies and other work of a more or less uncertain character, and, at the same time, authorizing them to become executors, trustees, administrators, and to deal generally with the estates of deceased persons, I am convinced that the time will come when the Governments issuing such charters will have cause to regret the lack of discrimination between companies of the kind to which I have just referred applying for charters and companies strictly confining themselves to the management of estates and agency work.

It cannot be logically argued that because in Canada, so far, there has been no apparent loss occasioned through speculations on the part of Corporate Trustees, this country will in the future be exempt from such losses, for American Trust Companies in the United States have lost enormous sums by speculation. In this connection I would also include as trust funds not only the estates of deceased persons and minors, but also what is recognized as guaranteed funds which, in so far as this Corporation is concerned, are invested in mortgages and other securities that come within the terms of the Trustee Investment Act. With funds that are received under the guarantee principle by trust companies and are invested in this way, while the net earnings may not be so large, yet on the other hand, the trust companies' liability under its guarantee is reduced to a minimum. I take even stronger ground, and say that trust companies having care of trust funds should not even hazard their capital and reserve funds in speculation, but that the investment even of these funds should be made within the terms of the Trustee Investment Act, so as to leave their capital intact as a guarantee for the proper administration of the trust funds that have been committed to their care, and which may remain in the hands of a company for future generations.

I am well aware that more money has been and is being made by trust companies engaging from time to time in transactions that may be termed more or less hazardous than by being strictly confined to the performance of the duties of an executor and trustee. That kind of an argument should, however, have no weight with a trust company having trust funds under its control. One must look to the future, and, as far as it is humanly possible, provide against a series of years, whr because of crop failures or general trade depression, values of real estate, and particularly of industrial stocks and bonds may be very seriously depreciated.

In a recent number of the "Trust Companies" Magazine published in New York, I find an article by Oliver C. Fuller, President of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee, and President of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association, treating on this very subject to which I have referred, and in speaking of the services rendered by the Committee of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association he says in part: "The Protective Committee on the Trust Company Section is accomplishing very valuable results in securing laws safe-guarding the title of 'trust company' and discouraging the indiscriminate organizing of so-called 'trust companies' for speculative purposes, a condition which has prevailed in a degree in some States where the banking and incorporation laws are lax."

In this connection, in order that I may not be misunderstood, I wish to say that I am only pleading that a distinction should be made between companies organized for the administration of estates and trusts and the investment of funds under the Trustee Investment Act, and companies whose charter provides that while they may engage in this class of work, gives them also the additional privilege of entering into many other fields more or less hazardous or uncertain. I do not wish it understood that I am opposed to the existence of companies that act in capacities such as I have outlined. I only ask that they be confined in their operations to the investment of funds subscribed by shareholders or investors for those particular purposes, and that they be prohibited from handling the funds of deceased persons and minors.

So far as this Corporation is concerned we have for twenty-nine years strictly confined ourselves to estate and trust work, and now that we have over forty millions of estates, trust and agency assets in our hands, we certainly will not deviate from the rule adopted as our initiation, and this Corporation will confine itself, no matter how moderate the profits may be, to a legitimate trust and agency business.

In closing I have pleasure in expressing my appreciation of the very faithful and efficient services rendered by the staff of the Corporation during the year, both at the Head Office and its Branches.

The report of the Inspection Committee was adopted and signed by the Hon. J. J. Foy, Sir Aemilius Irving and Mr. Frederick Wyld.

The following shareholders were elected Directors for the ensuing year:—

W. H. Beattie, John L. Blaikie, W. R. Brock, Hamilton Cassels, K.C., Sir Wm. Mortimer Clark, K.C., L.L.D., Hon. W. C. Edwards, Hon. J. J. Foy, K.C., M.P.P., Hon. J. M. Gibson, K.C., Arthur C. LINCOLN COUNTY TO AID PROTEST

Votes $500 Towards Expenses of the Anti-Reciprocity Delegation at Ottawa.

St. Catharines, Feb. 3.—Lincoln County Council yesterday voted $500 to aid the fruit men of Niagara district in their protest to the Dominion Government against the removal of all the duties on tender fruits, and help defray expenses of the deputation of a thousand men who will go to Ottawa by a special train to interview the Premier and Ministers. The matter was brought before the Council at the adjourned session yesterday afternoon by Reeves Mitchell and Allan of Grimsby village and North Grimsby township. Although the resolution was finally adopted, the debate was long and keen, the motion securing a majority of one put to the vote.

In support of the resolution it was contended that the removal of the duties would kill the fruit industry in the district, and the growers, who form a large percentage of the population of the county, would suffer greatly.

EMPIRE IN DANGER.

Guelph, Feb. 3.—The annual banquet of the short-course-in-fruit students took place last night in the Royal Canadian Cafe. Hon. Jas. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, addressed the hundred and seventy-five students. In referring to the recent trade agreement, he advised a non-committal attitude, looking to the future benefit of Canada, instead of the small benefit to be derived at the present time. Even if the present treaty was put into force it would mean no permanent benefit to Canada. The British Empire must stick together in trade relations, or eventually go to pieces.

SASKATCHEWAN APPROVES.

Regina, Feb. 3.—At a crowded meeting of the Saskatchewan Agricultural Society's convention yesterday the following resolution was adopted with practical unanimity:

"That this community regards with approval the proposed reciprocity arrangement with the United States."

JOE CANNON IS OPPOSED.

Washington, Feb. 3.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon is out strong against the trade agreement with Canada.

"Ask the fruit growers of California what they are going to do when Canadian fruits are free," he advised. "What can they do under the favored-nation clause? Where's your protection if the hogs and cattle come in free? And what answer are we to make to one-third of the population of the country? The farmers will only come to a compromise, after all. So far as I am concerned, with all the work of the Congress, I do not believe that by legislation originating in the House and amended in the Senate we can do so great a work in the double somersault and hop-skip-and-jump fashion expected of us."

ONLY THREE VOTED NAY.

Belleville, Ont., Feb. 3.—At the banquet of the Belleville District Holstein Breeders' Club, held last night, with representatives from four counties present, approving references to the tariff agreement with the United States ran all through the toast list. At the conclusion of the speeches a resolution was moved by G. W. Anderson of Prince Edward County, and seconded by Elsey Tyrrell of Hastings, cordially approving of the agreement made. The resolution was carried by a practical unanimous vote, only three voting nay. The club is the most representative agricultural organization in the Bay of Quinte District.

OBJECTED TO CATCH VOTE.

Sherbrooke, Que., Feb. 3.—Reciprocity was discussed at a meeting of the Board of Trade last evening. A resolution similar to that passed by the Montreal Board was introduced, but several members opposed to it, objected to any catch vote, and the discussion was adjourned.

DEAR FOOD IN GERMANY

Crowded and Tumultous Protest Meetings

From all parts of Germany come reports of action taken by the people against the extraordinary rise in the price of meat. In the rich city of Frankfort-on-Main the Chamber of Commerce has petitioned the municipality to take steps to induce the Government to reduce the freight charges on meat on the State railways until the prices fall. The Saxon branches of German Trades' Association have protested against the present policy of practically closing the German frontiers to the importation of foreign cattle. The Hanse Alliance has had a joint sitting with representatives of the Berlin Butchers' Union to consider what steps should be taken in the presence of this grave crisis. In Hamburg eighteen public meetings of a crowded and tumultuous character have been held with the same object and to protest against the general fiscal policy of the Government. These are only indications of what is happening all over the empire.

MEDIÆVAL COFFINS

Excavators at work on the north side of Winchester cathedral nave have unearthed two stone coffins containing skeletons. Both were sealed with massive slabs of stone. In one of the coffins were two skeletons, and these are thought to be victims of the Black Death scourge in 1348.

HOME MADE LAVENDER WATER

Fill up a small dark bottle, such as a half-size claret bottle, with fresh lavender blossoms. Add four drachms of oil of lavender, and then pour in enough alcohol, rectified spirits of wine or unsweetened gin to fill the bottle right up to the cork. Cork thoroughly, and leave for three or four weeks, shaking well every day.

A WORLD'S RECORD

Boy of Eighteen Makes a Billiard Break of 986

George Gray, the eighteen-year-old boy champion billiard player of Australia, established a world's record at Leeds when, with F. W. Hughes, a Leeds professional, to whom he is conceding 1,500 points in 4,000 up, he made a great break of 986, which included consecutive runs of 447 and 522 of losing hazards, principally into the middle pockets off the red ball.

Gray thus beat his own world's record, which stood at 836, made at Melbourne last year.

He played with mechanical accuracy for about two hours. In this world's record Gray made no fewer than 949 points by losing hazards off the red.

The table was passed as standard before the match, and Gray is to receive a hundred guineas from the makers and fifty guineas from the Crystalite Ball Company.

A DEPLORABLE THING

Everybody who has thought about the matter must have deplored what they see going on throughout Europe—namely, the transfer of the population from the country districts to the big towns.—The Speaker.

EDUCATES HER YOUTH

Afterwards Germany Helps Them to Get Employment

Education in Germany has now reached a very high level of efficiency, and the nation's interest in its youth by no means ceases with the termination of school days. Before the German boy leaves school his teacher enters into communication with the parents, who are supplied with a pamphlet showing the chances and conditions in the various trades carried on in the neighborhood. The children visit the labor bureau from time to time until a position is secured for them. Once established in a workshop, the boy attends continuation classes for four or five hours a week. There are inducements to parents to place their boys in skilled trades, when the initial weekly earnings are from 5 shillings to 12 shillings a week.

If the boy takes up an unskilled trade he will join a general continuation course to stimulate his general intelligence; if he wants to be a shoemaker, a confectioner, or a compositor, he will join a technical course arranged with a special view to his trade; if he is a stonemason, a cabinetmaker, or a joiner, he will attend the building continuation school; there are also commercial classes for the clerk or bookkeeper. In Munich there are completely separate courses for chemists, saddlers, coopers, metal workers, watchmakers, lithographers, jewelers, to name only a few each with its expert craftsman to teach the practice and theory while composition, arithmetic, bookkeeping and drawing are taught also by special teachers for the purposes of the special trade.

ONE USE OF CHALK

Illustrated by a Billiard Story from Columbus

Harry Laughlin the billiard expert, told at an exhibition game in Toledo, a billiard story.

"Once, when I had my own parlor, in Columbus," he said, "I was a good deal disturbed by the loss of chalk. Chalk disappeared at a tremendous rate, and I said to my helper, 'Keep a better eye on the chalk, Jim. I'm no millionaire.'

"'I know the gents wet pockets the chalk, Mr. Laughlin,' Jim said; 'but they're regular customers. I guess you wouldn't want to offend 'em, would you?'

"'Well, no,' said I, 'I wouldn't. You might give them a gentle hint though. Use your diplomacy.'

"Jim, I found out later, used his diplomacy that night. He walked up to one of my best patrons who had just pocketed a piece of chalk, and he said:

"'You're in the milk business, ain't you, sir?'

"'Yes, why?' the patron asked.

"'I thought so,' said Jim, 'from the amount of chalk you carry away. The boss likes enterprise, and he told me to tell you if you wanted a bucket of water now and then you could have one and welcome.'"

ENGINE DRAWS HEARSE

A Strange Scene at a Showman's Funeral—Happened in Wales

It is quite a common thing for deceased persons to be followed to the last resting-place by some emblem of their occupation during life, but the scene witnessed at the recent funeral of a showman at Cardiff was indeed out of the ordinary. On his deathbed, the man expressed the wish that the huge traction-engine used by the showman in his business should draw the hearse containing his coffin to the cemetery, and this request was fulfilled.

On the day of the funeral, the streets of Cardiff were crowded with people assembled to see the unusual sight. The hearse was attached to the traction-engine, and thus taken to the cemetery gates, where the cortege halted. The coffin was then carried from the hearse to the graveside by mourners.

The showman's engine was beautifully decorated with flowers. A large floral heart, with a centre design of the Prince of Wales's feathers in white flowers, adorned the front, and the wheels were draped with crape.

LOVERS PERSISTED

And Were Rewarded at Last by Finding a Minister

A wedding in St. Mary's church, Brandon, on a recent Wednesday, brought to a close a most trying experience for the parties interested. The bride was Miss Silema Parsinage Gardener, of Antler, Sask., and the groom, Darcy Lewis Stewart, of Ochre River, Man. The wedding was arranged to take place at Antler on the Tuesday, but when the time for the ceremony arrived, no minister could be obtained. Sooner than postpone the wedding the young couple drove to the next town, but on arriving there found that the minister at that point was also away from home. From there they drove to several other towns but could not obtain the very essential clergyman. Upon arriving at the borders of Manitoba they were informed that it would be necessary to procure another license to marry in the Province of Manitoba, and it was then that they decided to go to Brandon and run no more risks. A special license was obtained here and the wedding took place.

WHAT HE OUGHT TO HAVE DONE

Lord Alverstone is the possessor of an excellent voice, and on one occasion (when he was Sir Richard Webster) concluded a political meeting by singing a sacred solo. At the close a gaunt spinster arose at the back of the audience and said: "With your face and your voice, Sir Richard, you ought to be teaching the Gospel truth to the poor heathen, instead of telling honest folk us be political."

No Drinking Man Need Despair

MANY SUCCESSFUL CURES IN TORONTO

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the washtub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do to-day!

But this home, which was made a hell on earth through strong drink — as every drunkard's is — may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as the result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink; then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES, or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man physically and mentally in THREE DAYS' TREATMENT.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

VOL XXXIV NO. 31 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, TUESDAY FEBRUARY 7, 1911 PRICE TWO CENT

The Rate is 22 Mills on the $

FOR PROTESTANT RATEPAYERS

And 24 Mills on The $

FOR ROMAN CATHOLIC SUPPORTERS

There will be no increase in taxes this year.

At the meeting of the City Council last night, Finance Minister, Ald. Bradburn introduced his budget for nineteen hundred and eleven, which estimated that $204,403.86 will be required to finance the city this year. The rates necessary to raise this amount will be the same as last year, viz.: 22 mills on the dollar from Protestant ratepayers and 24 mills from Roman Catholic separate school supporters. These rates will actually produce $204,976.75, thus leaving a few hundred dollars for unforseen contingencies that may arise.

A by-law fixing the rates at 22 and 24 mills was adopted without opposition.

Incidentally Ald Bradburn drew attention to the fact that the demand for sinking fund and interest on debentures is growing to an alarming extent—in fact comprises a very big end of this city's expenditures—and attention will have to be given the matter. The estimates and appropriations will be published tomorrow.

Retention of Industrial Comr. Endorsed by the City Council

$4,000 Provided for This Office in Estimates

Big Results Anticipated for This Year

The City Fathers met in regular monthly session last night. There were present: Mayor Morrow, Aldermen Morgan, Anderson, Graham, Kernaghan, Brown, Edgar, Metheral, Bradburn, Duncan and Buller.

The Clerk was instructed to write the townships interested that Council will meet them on any given date re pollution of Otonabee.

THE SIGN BY-LAW.

Ex-Ald. Turner addressed Council and contended that when a sign owner paid a $2 fee, he should not be asked to sign a paper, agreeing to assume all responsibility in case of accident. If a license fee is paid by citizens owning illuminated signs it is for the purpose of defraying the cost of inspection as to their safety, and it is manifestly unfair to ask, in conjunction, a release from responsibility in the city's favor.

This was referred to the Board of Works.

GRANTS WANTED.

Mr. Peter Campbell, representing the Horticultural Society, addressed Council, and stated that the concrete walk from the court house to the fountain in Central park will have to be renewed this year at a cost of $300; the County Council has promised a grant of $100 providing the city give $200. He hoped the city would unite with the County and thus enable the Society to build a new walk. This matter was referred to the Board of Works.

Mr. Harry Beal's request that the annual grant to the Horticultural Society be increased from $500 to $600 was also referred to the Finance Committee.

NO SANITARY INSPECTOR.

Clause 3 of Ald. Duncan's report of Property Committee, recommended the appointment of a Sanitary Inspector was struck out, it being understood that the police are to undertake such duties as far as possible this year.

$5000 MORE FOR PUBLIC LIBRARY.

His Worship read a letter to the effect that Mr. Andrew Carnegie will be pleased to increase his grant to this institution from $25,000 to $30,000, providing the city correspondingly increase its allowance. This was received with pleasure.

$3500 CHARITY BOARD.

A by-law authorizing the grant of $3,500 per year to the Central Charity Board, in 12 equal monthly installments. Passed Council.

FINANCE REPORT.

Ald. Bradburn submitted the following:—

Gentlemen,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

1. That a request of the Board of Police Commissioners that the City Treasurer be authorized to make payments for expenses connected with the Police Department on the order of that Board be granted.

2. That $5000 of the proceeds of the sale of the property on Simcoe street donated to the City by the executors of the Nicholls Estate be transferred to the credit of the Public Library account to defray the cost of the site purchased for the Public Library.

3. That a grant of $50.00 be made to the Hospital for Sick Children at Toronto.

4. That one copy of the Municipal World for 1911 be ordered and that a cheque be issued for that purpose.

5. That notice be given to the Chamberlen Estate that the City will terminate the lease of part of Lot No. One south of Charlotte street, and east of Water street on October 31st, 1911.

The report was adopted as read.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSIONER.

Ald. Bradburn here submitted his estimates for the year upon which the rates are fixed as printed elsewhere.

Ald. Morgan objected to the $4000 appropriation for an Industrial Commissioner in the face of apparent results.

Ald. Bradburn replied that Messrs. O'Connell and Denham, of the Board of Trade had estimated $4000 and more for the requirements of this office for the year commencing May 15th, which is not ½ a mill on the assessment. A man assessed for $1500 would pay but 70 cents for a commissioner. He had faith in Mr. Duggan, whom he thought should be retained for another year.

Ald. Buller said he was more than surprised at the work done by the Commissioner, which, however, cannot be made public for obvious reasons. He advised another year's trial.

Ald. Morgan offered that the Board of Trade should substantiate their faith in a commissioner by paying half his salary, as last year. He moved in this direction.

Ald. Bradburn pointed out that the Board of Trade have no available cash; they raised $2000 last year by private subscriptions from manufacturers, merchants, etc. Mr. Duggan has sowed the seed and he should get an opportunity to reap.

Ald. Morgan—"Can you show me that the Commissioner has accomplished sufficiently more by his efforts than the City Clerk did by his previous correspondence re industries to warrant the yearly expenditure of $4000?"

Ald. Metheral said he had been converted in favor of the Commissioner, from whose work he expected big results this year—possibly before May 15th.

Ald. Anderson moved in amendment that the Commissioner's salary be $3000 by the city, the balance to be raised by the Board of Trade by private subscriptions.

Ald. Duncan thought the Commissioner would make good. Two or three industries may be arranged for by May 15th, when his year's engagement expires, and until such time he should not be condemned.

The appropriation of $4000 for this office was allowed to remain, it being advised on Ald. Graham's questioning, that should the position be withdrawn after May 15th, the money can be applied in some other direction.

HOSPITAL MATRON.

Ald. Duncan reported that Miss Morey has returned from training in Montreal as matron for the Isolation Hospital here and moved her engagement, at $680 a year, commencing February 15th. This was seconded by Ald. Graham, and carried.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Ald. Bradburn was granted leave of absence for two months and a half. Ald. Anderson will act as Finance Minister during his absence.

A QUESTION OF SALARIES.

Ald. Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar—That there be no more increases in city officials' salaries this year.

Ald. Bradburn moved in amendment that no action be taken in this respect. The amendment was carried on the following vote:

Ayes—Ald. Duncan, Bradburn, Metheral, Graham, Anderson, Morgan.

Nays—Ald. Buller, Edgar, Brown, Kernaghan.

TO ENTERTAIN.

Ald. Morgan moved, seconded by Ald. Anderson,—That the Reception Committee be authorized to take whatever action necessary to entertain the Hardware Convention. When asked what cash this committee had available, its chairman, Ald. Graham replied: "What is left over from the other committees."

Ald. Duncan insisted that some steps be taken to provide for M.H.O. McPherson's increase in salary as promised when engaged. Ald. Duncan had to be content to leave the matter in abeyance until a later date.

Here's a Secret For Every Woman

MADAME JOSEPH LAVALLEE TELLS OF HER HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

Was Troubled With Aches and Pains and Anxiety Till She Tried Dodd's Kidney Pills — Now Well and Healthy.

Notre Dame, de Buckland, Bellechasse Co., Que., Feb. 6—(Special)—"I am sixty-six years of age and I owe my good health to Dodd's Kidney Pills." That's the answer Madame Joseph Lavallee, the kindly, cheery old matron, makes to all who enquire how and why she is so energetic and active at her advanced age. "Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills" Madame Lavallee continues, "my head and back ached. I was always troubled with my heart, too, and that made me anxious. Then I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and I sent for six boxes, which did the work. I am well and healthy as you see."

Madame Lavallee simply discovered the secret of health for women. For every woman's health depends on the Kidneys, and there is only one sure cure for diseased Kidneys — Dodd's Kidney Pills. Thousands of Canadian women are healthy and happy because they have used them. Thousands of other women are weak and suffering simply because they have neglected to do what Madame Lavallee has done.

W. J. Henry and Wm. H. Thompson are Assessors for 1911

Messrs. W. J. Henry and Wm. H. Thompson were appointed assessors last night on motion of Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Morgan. This action was taken in committee of the whole council, and subsequently confirmed in open council, when a by-law to this effect was adopted. The salaries will be the same as last year—$600 each. Contrary to many previous proceedings on momentous questions, the matter was definitely decided in committee, and not reopened in council. Ald. Buller did, however, move that T. B. McGrath's name be inserted in the assessors' by-law in place of that of Mr. Thompson, who had, he said, informed him (Ald. Buller) that he would not act were McGrath displaced. But the worthy alderman received no seconder, and the names of Henry and Thompson were inserted in the measure in the usual way.

At first it looked as though some difficulty would be experienced in the choice of assessors, as ten applications were on file, and each and every alderman seemed anxious to nominate. But the Mayor handled the situation in his usual business-like manner.

THE ASPIRANTS.

The following gentlemen were aspirants for the position:—

T. B. McGRATH.
GEO. W. POWELL.
W. C. BOURN.
W. J. HENRY.
WM. VAN EVERY.
WM. H. THOMPSON.
R. J. KIDD.
W. ALDRIDGE.
W. J. JOHNSTON.
THOS. McKEE.

Johnston and McKee's applications were received jointly as though the applicants would only accept the position in that way.

THE MEN APPOINTED.

After several resolutions and counter-resolutions, and a plea from Ald. Buller that all religious discrimination be dropped in fairness and justness to Mr. Thos. B. McGrath, whom he characterized as a capable assessor for many years, Messrs. Henry and Thompson received the appointment on a vote of 6 to 5.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Ald. Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Bradburn,—That Thomas B. McGrath be one of the assessors for the year.

Ald. Buller contended that the Roman Catholic element is not sufficiently represented officially. He then went on to say that in years gone by we have been taught as Protestants not to dominate the Roman Catholic when the minority, and we have also been advised that Roman Catholics would wipe Protestants off the face of the map had they the power. He regretted to say that present conditions in Peterborough pointed to the conclusion that now the minority are without official representation. Protestants are by their attitude leaving themselves open to the conclusion that they are infected with a desire to wipe their R.C. brethern from off the face of the map, so to speak. We should be fair to all men, continued the speaker, irrespective of religious faith, and deal squarely with Mr. T. B. McGrath who is a capable man. "I voted against him last year as a permanent assessor, and would do so now on a like question." In conclusion Ald. Buller contended that Mr. McGrath's past efficient service entitled him to just treatment at Council's hands.

Ald. Graham—"As far as I am personally concerned, I did not get justice from McGrath."

Ald. Morgan did not think the Council would be governed by the fact of a man being a Roman Catholic, Protestant, a Frenchman or a Dutchman. The applications were under consideration and each Alderman was entitled to his choice. Considerable kicking is prevalent as to the matter of assessment, and agitation for publishing the rolls is rife. This would prove expensive, and a change in the assessors for a year would afford opportunity for comparing the assessors' work and methods.

Only the mover and seconder voted for T. B. McGrath.

Ald. Bradburn seconded the resolution because Mr. McGrath had had considerable experience—more so, he said, than any other applicant before the committee.

Ald. Kernaghan and Brown moved for R. J. Kidd's appointment.—Lost.

Ald. Graham and Edgar, moved for Henry's appointment—Carried.

Ald. Morgan and Anderson moved for Thompson's appointment.—Lost.

Ald. Edgar moved for Aldridge's appointment.—Lost.

Ald. Morgan and Graham moved for Thompson's appointment.—Lost.

Ald. Buller again for McGrath's appointment.—Lost.

Things were not going very satisfactory in this way, so it was decided to nominate both assessors jointly. This was agreed to, and resulted in the offices going to Henry and Thompson.

CITY TRUST COMMISSIONERS.

On motion of Ald. Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Anderson, Mr. Vincent Eastwood was re-elected a member of the above commission.

On motion of Ald. Anderson, seconded by Ald. Edgar, Mr. E. A. Peck was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. LeBrun.

C.G.E. SIDING.

The C.G.E. were granted permission to run a double track crossing into their new building at Albert street, provided they pay any damage that may accrue to adjacent property therefrom. And that the Company or C.P.R. Railway, should occasion arise for protection at this point, furnish and maintain, either by flagman or gates, at their own cost. The city to be protected against all possible claims for damages.

POOL ROOM LICENSES.

Rev. Messrs. Pogue and Coon, representing the Ministerial Association, addressed the committee and asked that Council petition the Legislature to amend the statute so as to permit of municipalities controlling the number of pool room licenses granted. This was acquiesced in.

All the members were present.

RESULTS OF FOOD.

Health and Natural Conditions Come From Right Feeding.

Man, physically, should be like a perfectly regulated machine, each part working easily in its appropriate place. A slight derangement causes undue friction and wear, and frequently ruins the entire system.

A well-known educator of Boston, found a way to keep the brain and the body in that harmonious co-operation which makes a joy of living.

"Two years ago," she writes, "being in a condition of nervous exhaustion, I resigned my position as teacher, which I had held for over 40 years. Since then the entire rest has, of course, been a benefit, but the use of Grape-Nuts has removed one great cause of illness in the past, namely, constipation, and its attendant evils.

"I generally make my entire breakfast on a raw egg beaten into four spoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, with a little hot milk or hot water added. I like it extremely, my food assimilates, and my bowels take care of themselves. I find my brain power and physical endurance much greater and I know that the use of the Grape Nuts has contributed largely to this result.

The Report of The Peterborough Water Commissioners

ON CONSTRUCTION OF THE NEW DAM AND OTHER WORKS.

Some Small Amounts Remain to be Adjusted With Contractor in Relation to the New Dam and Pump House.

The Water Commissioners submitted the following report to the City Fathers last night, which was read and received without comment:—

To the City Council and the Ratepayers,—

Although there remain to be adjusted some small amounts with the contractor in relation to the new dam and pump house, your commissioners feel that the time has arrived when as full information as possible should be given of the works constructed and the sums expended by them.

When asking the people for a vote of $120,000 for a new dam and pump house and pumping machinery, it was the opinion of the commissioners and of their engineer, Mr. William Kennedy, Jr., of Montreal, that this amount would be sufficient to build the dam and pumping station, and install an additional set of pumps capable of discharging three million gallons of water every twenty-four hours against a pressure of one hundred and thirty pounds to the square inch. The commissioners had the estimate from their engineer, arrived at after a careful survey of the whole situation, and had also as a guide the judgment of their superintendent, Mr. Henderson, whose large experience is well known.

For several years your commissioners were convinced that it would be necessary to build a new dam, if it was desired to take advantage of the full flow and fall of the river for pumping and power purposes, the old dam having served almost to the limit of its usefulness the object for which it had been erected. If the city had remained stationary in population and consumption of water, it would have been possible to struggle on a while longer with the old dam and the same pumping plant, but when it was considered that the number of water takers had increased from 1070 in 1901 (with 18 miles of mains), to over 3000 in 1910 (with 35 miles of mains), and was likely to increase at the rate of 250 to 300 in water users each year, it will be seen that it had become an imperative necessity there should be increased pumping capacity, and that the city should erect a dam that could be relied on, and would developed greatly increased power.

As far back as 1906 the matter was carefully considered and information obtained from expert engineers, not only as to the rebuilding of the old dam, but on water purification and filtration as well, and the commissioners had decided to advise going ahead then, but during the next two years the condition of the money market together with the high cost of materials made it appear to be wiser to await a more favorable opportunity. Therefore the old dam was kept repaired and in as good working order as possible.

In the fall of 1908 it was thought that the time was opportune, and on the advice of the engineer and superintendent it was decided to abandon the old site and move down stream 700 feet to where apparently a better river bottom, more head, and consequently more power, could be obtained, and where the distance across the river was less by 200 feet than at the old dam. Estimate plans for the new dam, etc., were prepared, and two years ago the council was asked to submit a By-law to raise $120,000, for their erection, which was carried by a large majority.

When it became known that operations were about to begin, the company owning the power next above, notified the commissioners through their solicitors that they must not infringe on the company's rights by raising the water, and that their actions would be carefully watched. This related to the greater head of water proposed to be carried at the new dam, and the increased backing up of the water of the river towards Nassau. The owners at Nassau had considerable land on the east side of the river below their dam, but they did now own nearly all the land on the West side of the river, the larger part being owned by the Estate of the late J. H. Irwin. It appeared to the commissioners that it was of vital consideration to the city that this Irwin property should be purchased from the Executors, the National Trust Company, Limited, immediately it was found to be in the market. The land in question is known to many citizens as the home of Mr. Harvey and his bees, the portion of the river opposite his house being the "Harvey Rapids." This purchase included the large fields down the river from the house, and extends 1000 feet up-stream, to within 800 feet of the Nassau dam. The cost was $2000. Your commissioners felt at the time, and equally so now, that for obvious reasons this was a prudent and provident course to take and that it was necessary to act promptly in the matter. The city now owns the lands and power rights if any, on the one side of the river, and it is not likely that there will be the least friction with the Power Company at Nassau, so long as the water is not actually backed on their wheels. The city's dam will have from 12 to 13 feet of head instead of 10 feet. The McCauley property, on which the western end of the dam rests, had to be acquired, and cost $1500. It has a frontage on the river of about 450 feet.

The commissioners also purchased from Mr. John Strothart a further strip of land south of the McCauley property, of about 500 feet along the river, at the price of $200. This was obtained in order to secure a better tail race and enable dredging and excavation to be made at a future time when it is desired to have a more free discharge of the water from the wheels. The city now owns over 1500 feet of frontage on each side of the river and adjoining the dam, in addition to the Irwin property.

One unexpected heavy, additional expense incurred, was in connection with the river bottom where the dam was placed. The rock was found to be rotten and porous, and it was necessary to take out many hundreds of yards more than estimated, which called for the replacing by an immense mass of concrete. The estimated quantities of the engineer, and the actual amount of materials taken out and put in are dealt with on the statement presented with this report. In it is included a further large quantity for excavation and concrete for the erection of extra deep, heavy additional piers intended for the foundations of a power house that the city might think fit to erect at its own expense, and which were intended by the commissioners as a substitute, for the proposed expenditure by the City Council of $15,000, at the east end of the dam. This now represents an extra of about $3000.

Some time after building operations began, it was seen that the engineer's estimate would be below the actual requirements, but it was impracticable to suspend operations and ask for a further sum, as even then it could not be determined how much would be required. The situation presented was one that it was impossible to have foreseen. Therefore it was decided to push the work through to completion, and the only regret felt by the commissioners is that this should have been made the subject of discussion before knowing the facts, and before the final settlement had been obtained with the contractor, who in addition to the small items not yet adjusted, is making a large demand for unwatering, which the engineer has not allowed, and which your commissioners are advised by Counsel the city is not responsible for.

In addition to the above it was decided to do certain work along the banks of the river above the dam, so as to prevent contamination of the water, and also providing for cutting away a portion of the eastern bank, below the dam, in order to facilitate the escape of water at flood time. This also was extra work. It was necessary to put a concrete core wall in the embankment on the west side. The first intention was to build a watertight embankment with a clay core, but it was found impossible to obtain enough good clay for the purpose. The expense would not have been much different, and the engineer advised using concrete.

It was also decided to install another pumping unit to cost $9,736, in order to bring the capacity up to the point demanded by the Fire Underwriters, namely, ten million gallons per day of twenty-four hours. To make the plant still more efficient a Venturi Meter was purchased at a cost of $1,404, plus the cost of installation, in order that an accurate daily and also hourly record of the quantity of water pumped might be made, and also in order to enable the engineers to observe readily whether the pumps were in all respects doing their proper work.

After a careful scrutiny of the Engineer's estimate together with his final statements now given of the cost of dam construction, etc., your commissioners are hopeful the ratepayers will be satisfied they have throughout acted in the best interests of the city. To spend wisely, as they believe they have done, the large sum of money entrusted to them, has only been accomplished at the sacrifice of very considerable time on their part, and of continued, anxious attention to the details of all the works in hand. Every expenditure has been carefully scrutinized, and when the work is complete and the opportunity given of an inspection of what the commissioners consider to be the best municipal pumping plant of any city in Canada of less than 50,000 population, they are assured the cost will not be considered excessive.

About ... months ago at the request of the City Council your commissioners made a lease of the surplus water at the dam to The Canadian General Electric Company for a period of twenty years, at the reserved rental of $2000 per year, the company binding itself to erect on the extra heavy piers adjoining the east end of the pump house, a power house, similar to the pump house, of about 45 feet square, and to install therein modern machinery for the generation and transmission of electric power. It was estimated that if the city had proceeded with this development of power the cost would have been at least $70,000, and judging from the work already done by the company it appears to your commissioners that the cost will be considerably greater. All the improvements of the company and the machinery will become the property of the city at the expiry of the lease, and both the building and the machinery must at all times be kept in first class condition by the lessees. The commissioners reserved the right to take all the flow of the river that is necessary for pumping power, and for supplying water takers, and for fire protection, the surplus only going to the company. This surplus water is estimated to produce about 1000 h.p. It will be observed that the rent to be paid and the return of the property without cost to the city, at 20 years, represent an annual value of at least $4000, thus paying interest at 4½ per cent on $90,000. The arrangement looks like a good one for the city.

In conclusion your commissioners would point out that the revenue of the waterworks department is sufficient to meet the additional demand for interest and sinking fund required by reason of the construction of the new works, and no additional water rates or taxes will have to be imposed.

As a matter of further information it may be mentioned that the water rates have supplied sufficient income to operate the works and to pay the interest on all the debentures issued, and have also contributed from the year 1902 to 1910, inclusive $65,035 as a sinking fund to retire the debentures at maturity.

Your commissioners confidently believe the city is now possessed of a dam and pumping station, of excellent design and lasting construction, supplied with a pumping plant not surpassed in quality in the Dominion, to all which the citizens will be able to point with some degree of pride, and upon which they can always rely to effectively answer all demands on them.

Much attention has been given to the absolute necessity of securing a good and healthy supply of water for citizens, and the River and Stony Lake have been carefully patrolled for the past two years in an endeavor to prevent impurities from entering, which has had a very improving effect on the water supply. It is intended to continue in this course until every apparent source of danger is removed.

Attention is directed to the fact that the city owns a block of 18 acres on the east side of the river, at the dam, over which there is a bridge. This property is suitable for park purposes, and your commissioners would suggest that the city make the necessary improvements, and have the street railway extended to the pump house, which would make it reached in a fifteen minutes' ride from the centre of the city. It is hoped the city council may take this suggestion into their early consideration.

Yours sincerely,

THE PETERBOROUGH WATER COMMISSIONERS

THE MORNING TIMES

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1911.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL YEAR FOR THE CANADA LIFE.

The sixty-fourth annual statement of the Canada Life Assurance Company appearing in this issue is evidence that the Company enjoyed in 1910 another successful year. In the essential features that represent safe and sound progress the year has been a record one.

The surplus earned last year amounted to $1,233,163.00, the greatest in the Company's history of 64 years. The assets have more than doubled during the past twelve years and now reach the immense sum of $10,820,856.00. The new-paid-for business amounted to $10,838,384.00, making the total business in force $128,274,973.00.

The payments to policy-holders during the year reached the immense sum of over $4,798,000.00 which, as the report shows, is larger by over one and a half millions of dollars than the payments made in any previous year. The profits alone which were allotted to policyholders in 1910 amounted to over $2,000,000.00.

The expense ratio for the year was again decreased, the interest earnings were higher and the rate of mortality lower. All gains along these lines should be of particular interest to policy-holders for these form the elements of surplus from which their profits are derived. Such a splendid showing is highly creditable to the management of the Canada Life, and indicates that the business is conducted along economical lines, that the funds of the Company are invested in carefully selected securities, and that reasonable discrimination is used in accepting insurance risks. The reports of the Canada Life issued from year to year show that the most satisfactory results are obtained by their adherence to these principles.

ELECTRICITY ON THE FARM.

The Hon. Adam Beck, Ontario's great power authority, holds out abundant promise of a wide and successful application of electricity to the needs of the farm. The farmer is a large user of power; he employs more implements and a greater variety of mechanical devices than anybody else. But until lately his unfamiliarity with power apparatus and the machinery manufacturer's unfamiliarity with farm methods and needs have stood in the way of an adjustment advantageous to both sides. This difficulty is now in a fair way of being overcome.

Isolated plants, comprising complete outfits driven by gas engines, are now on the market and are being introduced. The day is at hand when a liberal supply of both light and power will be at the farmer's disposal.

Thrashing, wood-sawing, churning, pumping, corn-shelling, ensilage-cutting, feed-grinding, hay-hoisting, washing, cooking and scores of other operations may soon be carried on with greater quickness and ease. Electricity on the farm also guards against the fire risk from lanterns and matches, which is so much greater in the country than elsewhere; and it also saves travel over a wider area by enabling lamps to be controlled from a distance.

The Times ventures the prediction that the farmer of the future would make his switchboard his general headquarters.

In these circumstances the contention is properly made that agricultural colleges should take a more progressive stand as regards the increasing use of electrical appliances on farms and should make agricultural engineering a more important feature of their curricula. Progress in farming and the improvement of the rural districts both depend in increasing measure on the recognition of this need.

which came into Havelock's possession when Cawnpore was occupied, lent veri-similitude to the script.

Then the Englishman covered himself with an oily compound that Chumru assured him would darken his skin effectually before morning, though the present effect was more obvious to the nose than to the eye. Chumru donned his risaldar Brahmin's uniform and Malcolm secured a similar outfit from a native officer on the staff. Well-armed and well-mounted the pair crossed the Ganges north of Bithoor, gained the Grand Trunk Road and were far from the British column when they drew rein for their first halt of more than an hour's duration.

They had adventures galore on the road to Delhi, but Chumru's repertory of oaths anent the Nazarenes, and Malcolm's dignified hauteur as a messenger of the man who ranked higher in the native world than the octogenarian king, carried them through without grave risk. True, they had a close shave or two.

Once a suspicious sepoy who knew every native officer in the 7th Cavalry, to which corps "Rissaldar Ali Khan" was supposed to belong, had to be quietly choked to death within earshot of a score of his own comrades who were marching to the Mogul capital. On another occasion, a moulvie, or Mohammedan priest, was nearly the cause of their undoing. Malcolm was not sufficiently expert in the ritual of the Reka, and this shortcoming aroused the devotee's ire, but he was calmed by Chumru's assurance that his excellent friend, Laiq Ahmed, was still suffering from the wound inflicted by the condemned Ghours, and the storm blew over.

These incidents simply served to enliven a tedious journey. Its main features were climatic discomfort and positive starvation. Rain storms, hot winds, sweltering intervals of intolerable heat—these were vagaries of nature and might be endured. But the absence of food was a more serious matter. The passage to and fro of rebel detachments had converted the Grand Trunk Road into a wilderness. The sepoys paid for nothing and looted Mohammedans and Hindus alike. After two months of constant pilfering the unhappy ryots had little left. For the most part they deserted their hovels, gathered such few valuables as had escaped the human locusts who devoured their substance, and either retreated to remote villages or boldly sought a living in some other province. Indeed, it may be said in all candor that the Mutiny caused far more misery to the great mass of the people than to the foreign rulers against whom it was supposed to be directed. The sufferings of the English residents in India were terrible and the treatment meted out to them was unspeakably vile, but for one English life sacrificed during the country's red year there were five hundred natives killed by the very men who professed to defend their interests.

Malcolm and Chumru were given proof in plenty of this fact as they rode along. Generations of local feuds had taught the villagers to construct their rude shanties in such wise that any place of fairly large population formed a strong fort. Where the ryots were collected in sufficient numbers to render such a proceeding possible, they armed themselves not only against the British but against all the world.

Many times the travelers were fired at by men who took them for sepoys, and they often found active hostilities in progress between a party of desperate rebels who wanted food and a horde of sturdy villagers who refused to treat with men in any sort of uniform.

Still, they managed to live. In the fields they found ripening grain and an abundance of that small millet or pulse-pea known as gram, which is the staple food of horses in India. Occasionally Malcolm shot a peacock, but shooting birds with a revolver is a difficult sport and wasteful of ammunition. Where hares were plentiful Chumru seldom failed to snare one during the night. These were feast days. At other times they chewed millet and were thankful for small mercies.

The journey occupied nearly twice the time of their original estimate. Nejdi, good horse as he was, wanted a rest; Chumru's steed was liable to break down any hour; and it was a sheer impossibility to obtain a remount in that wasted tract.

All things considered it was a wonderful achievement when, on the evening of the eleventh day, they began their last march.

They planned matters so that the Jumna lay between them and their goal. When they left the tope of trees in which they had slept away the hot hours their ostensible aim was the bridge of boats which carried the Meerut road across the river into the imperial city.

That was their story if they fell in with company. In reality they meant to leave the dangerous locality with the best speed their horses were capable of. There could be no doubt that Delhi was the stronghold of the mutineers. Even discounting by ninety per cent the grandiloquent stories they heard, it was evident that the British still held the ridge, but were rather besieged than besiegers. For the rest, the natives were assured that the foreign rule had passed forever. Their version of the position was that "great fighting took place daily and the Nazarenes were being slaughtered in hundreds."

The one statement nullified the other. Malcolm reasoned, correctly as it happened, that the British force was able to hold its own, but not strong enough to take the city; that the Punjab was quiet and that the general in command on the ridge was biding his time until re-enforcements arrived. Therefore if Chumru and he could strike the left bank of the Jumna, a few miles above Delhi, there should be no difficulty in crossing the stream and reaching the British camp.

For once, a wild-laid scheme did not reveal unforeseen pitfalls. He had the good fortune to fall in with a corps of irregular horse scouting for a half-expected flank attack by the rebels, in the gray dawn of the morning of August 11. Chumru and he were nearly shot by mistake, but that is over the risk of those who wear an enemy's uniform—and by this time John Com-

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, and should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

LONDON'S POLICE FIGURES

Some Statistics of the Highways and Byways of the Metropolis

Crime as a profession is declining in London; Londoners are becoming more fond of walking and more careless; the "growler" is still making a determined struggle for life; between 3 and 6 a.m. is the burglar's busy time; he likes insecure windows best as a means of entry; and Jane Heath, a retired charwoman receives a pension of $62 a year.

These are only a few of the things which the average Londoner does not know, and which he can learn from a perusal of a primly-bound panorama of London, issued under the title of "Report of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for the year 1909."

There is one constable now serving in the forces who joined in 1867. Those were the "good old days" when the burglar's life was worth living. In those days (to take the record of the year 1870) there were 19,095 felonies relating to property when the population was 3,618,993—and only a few more than half the felons were caught. Now the police catch 12,122 people for 17,982 felonies; and although the population has doubled, the total amount secured by "professionals" only advanced from $396,110 to $666,195, while the amount recovered advanced from $98,630 to $124,990.

The returns of public vehicles allow some interesting inferences. Hansom cabs, for instance, have fallen in number from 6,696 in 1905 to 3,299 last year, and fleets of taxi-cabs have been launched to take their place. There were only nineteen taxi-cabs in 1906, but there were 3,996 last year.

There is, of course, a notable increase in motor-omnibuses and tramcars, and a corresponding decrease in their horse-drawn predecessors; but the most remarkable thing about the public carriage statistics is this: there are fewer vehicles in use now than there were in 1905. In that year there were 16,535 vehicles on the road. Last year there were 15,906. Many of them are larger, of course, but then the population has also grown considerably in the same time. So, obviously, London walks a good deal now.

London still goes on in its absent-minded way shedding its possessions in cabs and omnibuses. Sixty-five thousand three hundred and seventy-five articles were reported found by the conductors of public conveyances last year.

Twenty-eight thousand and sixty-two of these articles were restored to their owners. The rest, after three months, went to the drivers or conductors who found them. One man was rewarded with theu um of $450 for his find, another received $280.

DRUIDS PLANT OAK

Strange Ceremony in England in Honor of the Peacemaker

Frequenters of Finsbury Park London, Eng., recently witnessed a strange and, in spite of certain grotesque features, a not unimpressive ceremony. Druids from all parts of the kingdom, from the Continent, and even from distant Colonies assembled to take part in a ceremony of planting an oak to the memory of King Edward, "the Peacemaker."

There was an inclination on the part of many of the spectators to make fun of these hundreds of reputable citizens clad in long white gowns, wearing fantastic cowls, and carrying various symbols of their Order, marching solemnly across the park, only for the purpose of planting a tree. But when they had all assembled at the chosen spot and had spread around it in a series of wide circles, and the first hymn, the invocation to the Trinity, was raised by at least 1,000 voices, the spectacle was not without its touches of solemnity.

It was not necessary, says a writer in a London paper, to accept the theory of the descent of this Order from the worshippers of the oak and the mistletoe in ancient days to see a certain beauty in their proceedings.

All that was needed was to remember that the promotion of universal peace is one of the principles of the present-day Order, that the oak is their symbol, and that the planting of the sapling in Finsbury Park was intended to commemorate the efforts of the late King Edward in the direction of world-wide peace.

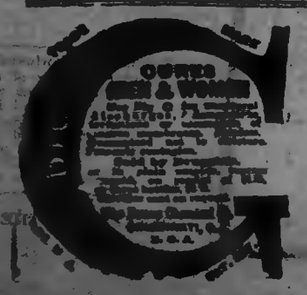
A symbolic procession walked around the newly-planted tree, when they received the Druidic salutation, consisting of the clapping of hands and the making of some mystic signs, while wierd Druidic hymns were sung by French and German choirs.

C. P. R. MAN POPULAR

C. B. Foster Honored by Associates at Vancouver

C. B. Foster, the successor of C. E. McPherson, as general passenger agent of the western lines of the C.P.R., was presented in his Vancouver office with a gold watch and fob, on the occasion of his leaving for Winnipeg to take his more important position. The presentation was made by D. E. Brown, the first passenger traffic official the C.P.R. had on the Pacific division, and was the joint gift of the passenger staff of the Pacific coast, which includes the cities of Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, Tacoma and Bellingham. In the presentation address, Mr. Brown mentioned that when the company took over the line in 1886, there were but two passenger traffic men west of Lake Superior, Robert Kerr and the speaker. He complimented Mr. Foster on the loyalty of his staff, a loyalty which, Mr. Brown said, had been inspired by Mr. Foster's own fair treatment.

Mr. Foster was formerly D.P.A. at Toronto, and is widely known throughout Ontario.



THE QUEUES HAVE TO GO

Chinese Imperial Edict is Being Carried Out—How Queue Was Introduced by the Manchus

The most distinguished queue in San Francisco's world-renowned Chinatown was cut off recently by a pair of American shears when Li Yung Yew, Chinese Consul-General, entered a barber shop and had his hair trimmed a la pompadour.

"Next!" the barber called out, and Li Yung Yew stepped into the chair, ready for the hirsute rite, which he underwent with the blandness of any western dandy having a haircut.

Fu Chien Yu, secretary of the Chinese legation in Mexico, accompanied the Consul-General and also sacrificed his queue asking the barber to go over his head with a pair of clippers to get the extreme effect in contrast to the manner in which he formerly dressed his locks.

Both hair cuts were the result of the imperial edict issued recently at the suggestion of Tao, Prince Regent, ordering all Chinese consular and embassadorial representatives to sacrifice their queues and adopt Western dress and manners.

Prince Tao visited the United States about a year ago, and upon his return to China he interested himself in many reforms founded on Western ideals.

Young China had already begun to wear its hair short, but it took a royal proclamation to make the more conservative government officials consent to the shearing of the queue.

"The passing of the queue means that China is officially committed to a broad and general scheme of emancipation," said Consul-General Yew.

"The kingdom is not prepared for any radical reforms as yet, but Western ideas and institutions are being assimilated by the reigning dynasty as rapidly as is commensurate with circumstances. Many Chinese have been waiting for years for just such an edict relating to the queue.

"They considered the queue a nuisance, making them different from other people when they went abroad and subjecting them to unnecessary ridicule. Personally, I believe that in a comparatively short time a Chinese with a queue will be a curiosity, even among our own people. In the Chinese colony here many merchants and others will be led to dress their hair in the Western fashion as the result of the edict, as the Chinese as a class generally model their dress and customs after the imperial officials."

Vice-Consul Owang dispensed with his queue two years ago, as did all the other attaches of the consulate.

Dr. John Gardner of the immigration service, who speaks Chinese and is an authority on their manners and customs, said the agitation for dispensing with the queue came with the awakening of China.

"The queue is about 270 years old in China and dates from the time of the invasion by the Manchus," explained Dr. Gardner. "The Manchus wore queues, and they compelled the conquered people to adopt them as a badge of submission and servitude. Many Chinese sacrificed their heads rather than have the queue forced upon them. The Chinese are a people who make a virtue of a necessity, however, and before long they began to ornament their queues and to be as proud of them as the Manchus.

"By a paradox of time the people who had first objected to the queue became so accustomed to it that they resisted the attempt to do away with it just as strenuously as they had originally objected to its adoption.

"The more wealthy a Chinese the more elaborate is his queue. The common people generally braid it with black silk, and the more prosperous with scarlet. When in mourning they braid it with blue and white.

"It is believed that the queue was introduced into Japan by the Chinese, and since the Japanese have made such national advancement since they abolished it, the awakened Chinese believe they will be able to profit by their example and do likewise."

ROYALTY WILL ATTEND

The King and Queen Will Appear in Costume at a Fancy Dress Ball

One of the most brilliant social events of the coming coronation season next year in London will be the fancy dress ball to be given by the Duchess of Roxburgh. It is said that the ball will be on a scale of magnificence seldom seen here before, and it will be attended by the King and Queen and practically all the younger members of the Royal Family, and all of them will appear in fancy costume. This will be the first time in nearly a century that a King of Great Britain has appeared in costume at a fancy dress ball, though King Edward, when Prince of Wales, once appeared at one given by the Duchess of Devonshire, dressed as Henry VIII., as depicted in the famous painting by Holbein.

MAMMOTH NEW HOTEL

What will be the largest hotel in England, and one of the largest in Europe, is to be built near Piccadilly Circus, London, Eng., by the Strand Hotel Company. The hotel will have twelve or thirteen hundred bedrooms and will occupy a piece of ground with an area of 44,000 square feet, bounded by Air Street, Glasshouse Street, Sherwood Street, and Brewer Street. The principal entrance will be a few yards from Piccadilly Circus, near the Monico.

The land is now chiefly taken up by shops, all the leases for which expire in 1912.

NATURAL PUNCH BOWL

At Kenmare Castle Ireland, is an enormous cockleshell, weighing 120 pounds, brought from the South Sea Islands. It is moulded into a most fantastic form and exquisitely elaborated by the hand of Nature. In the olden days of baronial hospitality it was used as a punch bowl. When this gigantic natural bowl, filled with its ocean of choicest punch, was placed on the oaken table in the vaulted hall of the castle it is recorded that the effect was very pleasing.

Government by Commission.

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 4.—Advocates of the commission form of municipal government are confident that to-day's election in this city will result in the adoption of the plan. San Antonio is practically the last of the large cities of Texas to retain the aldermanic form of government. Beginning with Galveston, which originated and put into operation the commission plan about ten years ago, almost every city of size in the State of Texas has adopted the plan.

MEN WHO TOILED IN THE ATTICS

Masterpieces That Have Been Produced in Garrets—Paderewski Drummed His Fingers There

Even within human memory great men have dwelt and worked in attic and have often enough hungered and starved there. Yet, most curious of all, many of the world's most noble masterpieces have been produced in humble, slope-roofed garrets. Lane, in writing an epoch-making novel at a table the position of which you have continually to shift to dodge the arge drops of rain that come through a faulty roof, and on the other side of the door an irate landlady declaiming against you having not paid your rent

That is just what happened to Oliver Goldsmith when in Green Arbor Court, Old Bailey, he was preparing his immortal "Vicar of Wakefield." Besides a ramshackle bed and a table, the only other piece of furniture the room contained was a chair. Nor did Goldsmith reap any of the rewards of his genius; he was born poor, and lived and died in London garrets, with swallows his only companions.

Coming nearer to our own times, Thomas Carlyle occupied a top-back room in Cheyne Row, Chelsea. It was lighted from above where no sight or noise penetrated. He could have lived there all his life without anyone ever knowing of his existence.

If the question as to who is the greatest living woman were given to ten people, nine of them would unhesitatingly answer, Mme. Curie. Now, Mme. Curie and her husband lived for years in apartments in Paris which would not favorably compare with many a London attic. Except for half a dozen acquaintances, few knew of their existence; but in that tumble-down dwelling (it was not even rain-proof), these two, husband and wife, were doing a work that was eventually to revolutionize science. They discovered radium, and it was not until the news had been shouted from one end of the world to the other that the neighbors began to take a sort of interest in the quaint couple who kept the light going all night long in their window.

A Young Inventor

Strange, too, is the story of the young inventor who one day walked into the office of the famous Commodore Vanderbilt, the founder of the Vanderbilt millions. He had devised an air-brake, he said, and wanted to interest the multi-millionaire in it—in short, he wanted money.

"Do you mean to tell me," cried Mr. Vanderbilt, "that you claim you can stop a train by wind?"

"That is exactly my intention, sir," replied the young fellow.

"Go away," said the elder man; "go away. I've no time to waste on fools."

The inventor went back to his attic, where for weeks, nay, for months, he had existed on the most meagre of allowances. Among his friends he became known as "Crazy George." One day a railroad manager good-naturedly allowed him to experiment.

Capitalists who had snubbed him and who were present at the trial were staggered, dumbfounded, when "Crazy George" demonstrated by actual fact that a train could be brought to a dead standstill by air.

That was forty years ago, and today that man, whose name is George Westinghouse, is himself responsible for over a hundred patents, and is the head of a corporation having a capital of $100,000,000.

For days and weeks and months Paderewski drummed his fingers on a plain deal table in a Paris garret. He knew he could play the piano as few others could, but the information was unfortunately native to himself. All he wanted was the opportunity to convince people what he was capable of; but who would dream of looking for a musician in a damp, out-of-the-way attic near the Seine?

But one day somebody did go there and engage the young Pole to play some accompaniments at the house of a society lady. So overwhelmed was his employer with his performance that she offered on account of the rain, to send him home in her own carriage.

"No, madam," said Paderewski, "are not my own carriage and coachman waiting for me at the end of the street?"

And overcoatless and umbrellaless, through the rain and the slush and the mud, he walked home. That night the tide turned, and the young Pole soon found himself with no further use for such things as garrets.

Victor Hugo

The story of men of genius hungering for food and pining for recognition is a long one. Take Victor Hugo, according to some critics the greatest genius of modern times, who executed some of his finest poetical masterpieces in a garret in Belgium, where the rain came through the tiled roof and which was so small that he could but take four steps as he walked about thinking. His writing-table consisted of a hinged shelf, which he always put up against the wall so his four steps could not be curtailed.

Tom Hood the author of the celebrated "Song of the Shirt," rented a top-back room in London at six shillings a week, and it was dear at that. Charles Dickens's blacking-factory days were spent in equally miserable surroundings. De Quincey spent half his life in a garret off Oxford Street, and Maxime Gorgy wrote some of his most realistic stories in the over-heated and unhealthy atmosphere of a baker's oven-room. Chatterton, the boy poet, died in a tiny apartment at the very top end of a flight of stairs; and Whistler, the famous impressionist once had his pictures sold to pay off his attic landlord.

CAPTURED ALIVE

A raccoon was captured alive at Lucknow, Ont., the other day. It entered a drug store and by means of considerable strategy was captured alive in a box. It is supposed that while hunting for food along the river it became frightened and lost its way.

MONUMENT TO SHAKESPEARE

The city of Verona is erecting a monument to Shakespeare. The Veronese consider they have an intimate connection with the poet through "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," and because their city is that of "Romeo and Juliet."

Visitors to the city are shown by the guides the Palace of the Capulets and the ruined house of Romeo. There is also, of course, the tomb of Juliet, the genuineness of which visitors are expected to accept. Verona, with Romeo and Juliet, rivals Elsinore with Hamlet in tribute to the imagination—and London is still without the monument to the world's greatest poet.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or ever more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amount necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

FINE SKELETONS FROM STONE AGE

Important Discovery Made During Excavations in Old Country—Are of Priceless Value

A discovery of considerable antiquarian value has been made at Astwick, near Biggleswade, North Bedfordshire, England. Workmen employed by Mr. Marland, contractor of Ashton-under-Lyne, were laying a conduit near the bed of the old River Ivel, when they came across two human skeletons male and female. The skeletons were examined by Dr. Waddell, a well-known local antiquary, who pronounced them to belong to the the stone age and to be of almost priceless value. From the evidences he gathered that the male was a chieftain, and he must have been a man of magnificent physique. The woman was laid at right angles to the man, with her feet resting against the side of his body, and apparently when her lord died she had been slain and buried with him, according to the custom of the time. Both skeletons are complete and in a good state of preservation, due to the nature of the soil. Dr. Waddell is quite convinced that the remains belong to the neolithic period, and considers the discovery to be of great importance to the world of science. It is proposed to communicate with the British Museum authorities with a view to the bones being transferred to the museum when their antiquity has been authenticated.

BLOODLESS OPERATIONS

Latest Triumph of Electrical Science Reported From Berlin

Surgical operations without bloodshed are the latest triumph of electrical science. The discoverer is Dr. F. Nagelschmidt of Berlin, who has just demonstrated it to the members of the electrotherapeutic section of the Royal Society of Medicine.

The advantages claimed are that many operations can now be performed without blood being spilt, as the passage of this type of electricity through the diseased tissue coagulates all the albumen in the blood and tissues, and prevents the blood from flowing.

This will be particularly useful, the London, Eng., "Daily Mirror" points out, in the case of large cancers on the surface of the body, and particularly in the type called "en cuirasse."

The current that the doctor uses is a very distinct modification of the ordinary high-frequency electricity. It is applied as follows:—Two wires lead from the generator to two metal plates (electrodes). These are placed on each side of the part to be operated upon, and the flow of blood in the region between the two electrodes is stopped.

All blood and tissue contain a very large proportion of albumen—a substance similar to the white of egg—and this the current coagulates, so that the flow of the blood is arrested.

A LADY STRIKE AGITATOR

One of the most remarkable women in Europe is Mme. Sorgue, a Frenchwoman of independent means, who, during the last ten years, has taken part in some fifty strikes. She has assisted in strike agitations all over Europe purely for the love of the thing. Many times she has been arrested, and at Milan she was put in a cage for trial at the assizes. The Public Prosecutor demanded that she should be sent to solitary confinement for five years, but public agitation against this terrible sentence, which usually drove prisoners to madness or suicide, was so strong that Mme. Sorgue escaped with two months' imprisonment. She is regarded as a comrade by millions of workers throughout Europe, and her influence is such that England, according to her own confession, is the only country she has visited where she has not been shadowed by the police.

"CUT AND COME AGAIN"

Amongst the amusing stories told by Mr. Inman, who made such a good fight with Stevenson for the billiard championship, is one concerning a notice which he saw displayed in the billiard-room of an hotel in Ceylon, when he was making a tour of the world. The notice read as follows: "Gentlemen cutting the cloth will pay, for first cut, 100 rupees; second cut, 50 rupees; third cut, 30 rupees; any subsequent cut, 10 rupees." "Judging from the appearance of the cloth," says Mr. Inman, "I should think that table must have been a veritable goldmine to its proprietor, if he collected all the fines. Evidently his motto was 'Cut and come again.'"

WHEN MONARCHS ARE MISTAKEN

Some Instances When Monarchs Figured in Cases of Wrong Identity — Amusing Incidents

It is not given to every man to be on familiar terms with his sovereign, and although most of us, through the medium of profusely illustrated periodicals, are conversant with the features of our monarchs, yet there are still many unobservant folks who would not know their kings and queens if they saw them. To the last category belongs the man who on one occasion came in actual contact with the German Emperor.

His Majesty was returning to Potsdam, dusty and weary, after a long tramp, when he asked a peasant, who was driving a farm cart, to give him a lift. He eyed the travel-stained stranger suspiciously, and not liking his looks, whipped up his horse and drove away as furiously as he could. Two hundred yards farther on he met a soldier.

"What did the Emperor want of you?" asked the latter.

"I don't understand," the peasant answered. And when the other explained who the wayfarer was to whom he had refused a seat in his wagon, he was so alarmed that he again lashed up his horse, and in the twinkling of an eye disappeared out of sight.

When, a year or two ago, the King of Spain visited a small town outside Madrid, he joined in the crowd that thronged the streets to catch a glimpse of himself. When the news passed through that the King was coming, a shrill female voice just behind him irritably exclaimed:

"Let me get in front! Do you think I've walked all this way and spoilt my best black dress for nothing? I want to see what the boy is like!"

Turning round with a smile, King Alfonso remarked to the pushing, perspiring old lady: "Here is the King."

After looking him up and down the woman said:

"Well, of all the cheek and impudence! Why, the King is a good-looking young man, and even your own mother couldn't say that of you."

German Princess

As all the world knows, the Crown Princess of Germany takes no little interest in women and their work. Once she applied in person at a leading firm of Court dressmakers for the post of model, which she thought would be just the thing for a protege of hers.

"I came," she said to the manager, "because I saw your advertisement, and I thought—"

The manager laid his hand on her shoulder.

"My dear girl," he said kindly, "I'm sorry, but it is no good, you are not quite good-looking enough. But you have a pleasant face, and I'll tell you what I'll do. Come again in a month's time, and then I'll see if I can find you a place as junior sales woman."

The consternation of the good man in discovering the applicant's identity was only equalled by the tact of the Crown Princess, who soon made him forget his discomfiture in admiration of her charming manner.

Queen of Italy

It is singular that a Customs official, of all people in the world, should fail to recognise the features of his king; yet this actually happened quite recently when the King and Queen of Italy were crossing in a motor-car one of their own frontiers.

"Where do you come from?" shouted the official, in the sternest of tones.

"From Modane," faltered his Majesty.

"And where is the number of your car?"

"There is none, I believe."

"Aha! And so you would enter Italy? Now, what's your name, sir?"

"Victor."

"Come, come, no trifling; what is your other name?"

"Emmanuel."

"Your profession?"

It was no good; the King must own "I have hitherto enjoyed the reputation of being the only Victor Emmanuel in my own kingdom."

The official withered away, but no doubt was taught a much-wanted lesson in dealing with travellers.

King of Wurtemburg

Another motor-car story has to do with the King of Wurtemburg. During his small kingdom one day his Majesty stopped at a wayside restaurant. He paid for his refreshment and added a coin for a "tip."

"Well," exclaimed the young woman, agreeably surprised, as she looked at the money and then at the generous donor, "one can see that you are not a Wurtemburg, anyhow."

WAITED MANY YEARS

A Frenchman Waited Long for Revenge and Got It

An extraordinary story of a strange revenge comes from St. Enogat, near Dinard, France. A fisherman named Gastebois met an old school acquaintance called Beslon by accident some years ago. Gastebois took his friend out to dinner, and showed him over his boat and generally made much of him. Recently the two men lunched together, but when after luncheon they went into the garden, Beslon suddenly drew a revolver. "You brute!" he said. "Do you remember what you did to me twenty-six years ago?" Before Gastebois could answer he fired, and as his old friend fell smashed his scull with the butt-end of the revolver.

Neighbors who had heard the shot took the man prisoner and handed him over to the gendarmes. Gastebois was taken to the hospital where he died.

Beslon remained quite cool. "Twenty-six years ago," he said, "that man struck me when I was defenceless. I have been waiting my opportunity for revenge myself, and I am glad that I have done so."

No Drinking Man Need Despair

MANY SUCCESSFUL CURES IN TORONTO

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the washtub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do to-day!

But this home, which was made a hell on earth through strong drink — as every drunkard's is — may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as the result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink; then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES, or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man physically and mentally in THREE DAYS' TREATMENT.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

LONDON COUNCIL FEARS TOLSTOISM

THE RUSSIAN COUNT'S BOOK BARRED FROM LIBRARY BECAUSE IT TAUGHT ANTI-MILITARISM.

London, Feb. 4.—It was Boy Scouts whom the London County Council was trying to protect from the anti-militarist influence of Count Tolstoy's "Empty Drum" when it barred the volume of folk-stories in which the "Empty Drum" is included from the libraries over which the Council has control.

It is true that chairman Rogers of the book-sub-committee of the council's education committee did not explicitly make the admission at the meeting held to consider among other things, the objections raised by the Count's English admirers to the ban on his book, but he ostentatiously dodged all questions upon the subject, and after the meeting several members of the sub-committee confessed that the dodging was done because a direct answer must have been in the affirmative.

The Rev. Stewart Headlam headed the delegation of Tolstoyites who visited the sub-committee to find out what was wrong with the book. "Some of the stories," conceded Chairman Rogers, "are unquestionably quite fit for children, but others are distinctly anti-militarist in their nature."

"Is it not a fact," inquired Tolstoy Delegate Cotton, "that the whole book tends to the glorification of peace? What is the Council afraid of? That the volume will interfere with the Boy Scouts movement?"

This was too plain talking for Chairman Rogers. He did not answer directly at all, but plunged off into a complicated discussion of the educational merits and demerits of the book. Other delegates asked the Boy Scouts question later on, but with as little success as Cotton had met with. Nor did they succeed in getting the book accepted. It remains on the Council's black-list, and will probably remain there indefinitely.

Mr. MacIntosh says:—"At the hospital I was kept masked night and day for five days. At the end of that time the burns were still very bad and the doctors would not hear of my returning to work. I knew if I could only get some Zam-Buk for the burns I would be back at work in quick time, because I had previously used the balm and knew what it would do.

At last I left the hospital and went straight to a local store and bought some Zam-Buk. At the hotel I applied a Zam-Buk dressing and this cooled the burning pains and gave me quick relief. I kept on with the Zam-Buk treatment and returned to work. Within just one week after first commencing with the Zam-Buk treatment I might have defied anybody to detect where the burns had been, so splendidly did Zam-Buk heal the injury."

STABLES BETTER COLD THAN DAMP

No kind of live stock can thrive and do well in ill-lighted, poorly-aired buildings. One of the first requirements in a stable is that it should be well provided with windows and have means for letting fresh air in and foul air out. Neither of these requirements are difficult to fill. Sunlight and fresh air cost nothing, and the expense of getting a sufficiency of each in the stable is no greater than that to which some stable builders go to keep these two health essentials out. The first care should be to have the stable light. Sunlight is Nature's most effective germicide; the next, to get the fresh air in. Fresh air contains the vitalizing oxygen that the blood takes up through the tiny cells of the lungs every time an animal breathes.

To get light in is not so difficult, but to provide for the taking out of foul air and the getting in of fresh is regarded by some as a problem of some difficulty. Elaborate systems of ventilation have been built into farm stables, and some of the simpler of them work satisfactorily. The system invented by Professor King has worked well under a wide variety of conditions. It is probably the most useful of the more elaborate systems. However, lack of ventilation cannot be excused on the ground that the system necessary for effective work is too costly and difficult to install. Cotton or duck tacked onto the window frames will let in and diffuse abundance of outside air, as well in horse or cattle stables as it does in poultry houses. The curtain system of ventilation has disadvantages, so has the open window method, or ventilation by means of holes in the ceiling or walls, but is a long ways ahead of nothing at all. Because one cannot afford, or does not understand the construction of the more complicated system, is not reason why simpler methods should be neglected. Every one building a stable this fall or with an old stable that is damp and foul and dark when the stock are in it in winter, should arrange now to have these defects remedied. A horse or cattle stable is better a little cold than damp.—Winnipeg Farmers' Advocate.

CARE OF MILK

The Ontario Department of Agriculture Issues Some Advice

Much effort has been properly put forth to secure the production of milk under cleanly and satisfactory conditions. That this may not fail of its purpose it requires to be supplemented by an equally thorough campaign of education among consumers. Millions of gallons of fairly good milk are contaminated with deleterious and disease-producting bacteria in the households where it is used. From a little circular, distributed with the compliments of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, the following pointers are taken:

"As soon as the milk is received put it in a cool place, away from the rays of the sun and not exposed to the heat of the kitchen or dining-room. If the bottle is to be placed in a refrigerator or near food products, the outside should be thoroughly wiped and rinsed, thus preventing contamination of the surrounding air and foods from the street dust and other dirt which may adhere to the bottle. Leave the milk in the bottle and the cap on, until such time as it is required for use.

"It is well to have a separate compartment in your cupboard or refrigerator for milk and butter.

"When the milk is placed in an open vessel, it is well to cover it with a clean, damp cloth. Several thicknesses of cotton, wrung out of cold water, will answer the purpose. This will not only protect it from dust, but will also assist in keeping the milk cold.

"All vessels intended for milk should be sterilized (scalded with boiling water), and thoroughly cooled fast before being used.

"Do not disturb the milk, or pour it from one vessel to another more often than is necessary. It is well to keep your milk in one medium-sized vessel, rather than a number of small vessels.

"Milk delivered at different times should not be mixed.

"Left-overs should be kept by themselves, and used before the fresh supply is drawn upon.

"If milk is to be kept until the following day, and there is a likelihood of it souring, pasteurize by placing in a double boiler and heating to near the boiling point (170 to 180 degrees F.). Cool as quickly as possible after it has been pasteurized. Always rinse thoroughly the cap and top part of the bottle before removing the cap.

"Open vessels containing milk should not be exposed to foul odors or produce which will flavor the milk.

"To clean milk vessels, first rinse with water, which may be slightly warm, but not hot. Then wash thoroughly with water containing a washing compound, scald, and allow to drain and dry.

"Thoroughly wash milk bottles before returning them to your dealer."

SEA BATHING

To bathe before breakfast is never free from risk, and sometimes seriously injures weakly subjects; for after the long fast of the night the circulatory and central nervous organs are more liable to depression from sudden shock or over-fatigue. On the other hand, to bathe soon after a meal arrests the process of digestion and may give rise to unpleasant gastric and cerebral symptoms. The best results are obtained from bathing two or three hours after the early morning meal, when the stomach is nearly empty, and there should be an interval of rest between the bath and the following meal.

Sad Accident to a Downeyville Farmer

A serious accident, which is likely to prove fatal, happened to Mr. Robert Winn, a farmer of about 62 years of age, living about 2 miles south of Downeyville, on Thursday evening. Mr. Winn and his son had been busy drawing wood all day and were returning home with a load late in the evening, just before dusk, when the accident happened. The son was driving the team while Mr. Winn was sitting on the back of the load, when the sleigh slewed on the glare ice, throwing him to the ground.

He lighted on his shoulder and head, resulting in a fractured shoulder bone and a fracture at the base of the skull. The son picked the injured man up and hurried home, where the doctor was called, and an examination showed the above injuries.

When picked up Mr. Winn was unconscious, and no hope is entertained of his recovery.

Peterboro' Party Lost on Chemong Lake

Thrilling Experience—All Night on the Ice.

A party consisting of four prominent citizens undertook to drive to the Indian village at the head of Chemong Lake. The party was composed of an official of the canal, a railway ticket agent, the head of a leading cereal concern and the manager of a local bank, who only recently came to Peterboro to live. They left after dark and in due time reached Chemong Lake, where the road took them over the ice. Some good stories were told to wile away the time, and it was only after a two hours' drive on the ice that they discovered that they had missed their way. The night was dark, and to make matters more serious, a mild blizzard had set in, making it almost impossible to see the road. The horses were, however, urged forward and in a short time it was with a joyful feeling that the party found themselves once again on terra firma. But, their disgust was exceedingly great when they found that the horse had evidently made a circuit of the lake and landed them at their starting point. After a consultation it was decided to secure a guide, and a man living on the shore of the lake undertook to pilot them to their destination. Although the night was bitterly cold, a second start was accordingly made, and for a time everybody was happy. But, alas! the darkness and the snow was too much even for the new pilot and after aimlessly wandering around the lake, they again found themselves at Bridgenorth. This was exasperating, especially to the canal man, in whose honor the Indians were holding their pow-wow. It was then far on in the night and further effort to reach the Indian settlement and smoke the pipe of peace, was useless. So they turned the heads of their thoroughly tired nags homeward, reaching Peterborough shortly before daylight.

The adventure might really have been serious, for the channel at the head of the lake is open, and there was always the danger of driving in to this opening, where a few years ago two men lost their lives in attempting to reach Bobcaygeon.

The party suffered from the cold, but fortunately without serious results, although one of them was confined to his bed for several days.

Capt. Pearson Wins Fine Gold Watch

Popular Captain of Steamer Manita Makes Good.

Last spring the Ottonabee Navigation Co., through its manager, Mr. R. Pinchin, donated a gold watch as a prize to the captain of the Company's steamers who made the best record for the season. This included the care and comfort of the passengers, the cleanliness of the boat, the engines, the percentage of profits compared with the capital invested in the particular steamer, and the fewest breaks in the machinery. There were five boats in competition for the prize, viz: The Ottonabee, Capt. W. H. White; Moncrief, Capt. W. C. Harris; Manita, Capt. S. R. Pearson; Water Lily, Capt. W. C. Copperthwaite, and the Maid-o-vale, Capt. Geo. D. Prower.

When the annual report was presented at the meeting of the directors a few evenings ago, in which the details of the work of the steamers were presented, Capt. Pearson was declared the winner of the watch, and it was accordingly presented to him. Capt. Harris made a close second.

It is needless to say that Capt. Pearson is quite proud of his trophy, and will enter on his duties the coming season with his usual energy and force. His tidy little craft was completely overhauled last fall, and will be in better shape than ever next season. Capt. Pearson's many friends in Lindsay and points of call along the steamer's route, will be pleased to know that he is again to be in charge of the Manita, and will be better equipped than ever to handle the rapidly growing trade on the Lindsay waters.

...DER PRESENT FEE SYSTEM FOR SUPPLIES.

...70 Saved in Book III Grade—An Economical Measure.

Many citizens are under the impression that under the present system which the School Board supply ...blic school scholars with supplies a fixed fee, they are paying more ...an such supplies are retailed at. ...perusal of the following report of ...e Supervision Committee, presented by Dr. Morrison last night, will ...rrect this erroneous impression and ...ow the substantial saving effected ...der the present conditions. It will ...seen that in Junior III Grade, ...instance, that whereas the retail ...ce for the supplies amount to ...70, but $2 is charged each pupil—saving of $2.70.

"Your committee has had under consideration the matter of text book ...s paid by the public school pupils. ...uring the year 1910 a large number of new text books were authorized by the Department of Education ...introduced into the schools. This ...ed a small deficit in the fees ac...t for the past year.

"For the year 1911, the actual average cost of supplies will be as fol...s:

"The fees paid by the pupils of these ...des are 50c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 ...$2.00 respectively per year. It ...be seen that the fee for Book II ...de is slightly in advance of the ...e of the supplies used by them. ...others get full value for their ...

"The actual amount of supplies used by each and every pubil is carefully recorded by the teachers.

"The retail prices of the supplies ...ished each pupil is much in excess of the fee charged. A detailed ...ement of the amount and retail ...e of supplies furnished each pupil ...the Jr. III Grade is appended and ...illustrates the advantage of the ...system.

"The retail price of the supplies furnished each pupil of this grade is ...0, while the fee charged is but ...0. In the other grades a less ...considerable saving is effected.

Much Improvement to School Property Needed

EAST CITY AND THE WEST WARD SCHOOLS WILL UNQUESTIONABLY RECEIVE ATTENTION THIS YEAR.

The Board of Education met in regular monthly session last night. There were present Chairman John Crane, and Trustees Adams, Miller, Eastwood, Ackerman, Hill, Dr. Morrison and Fair.

Principal H. R. H. Kenner wrote that Dr. Burnham had donated eleven volumes to the Collegiate Institute library. Received and a vote of thanks tendered to the doctor for his very acceptable gift.

MODEL SCHOOL TEACHERS' GRANT.

Mr. Hill moved, seconded by Dr. Morrison,—That a memorial to the Legislature be prepared requesting that the government grant to Model School Teachers be increased.—Carried.

Mr. Hill moved, seconded by Col. Miller,—That Mr. Hazen Ritchie be re-appointed on the Public Library Board for three years, commencing February 1st, 1911.—Carried.

DEFECTIVE WIRING.

Mr. Fair drew attention to the defective wiring in some of the schools, which, if not remedied will effect the insurance rate. Renewing same would cost $140. The Property Committee was given authority to act in this matter.

IMPROVEMENTS NEEDED.

Mr. Robert Fair reported that the following work on school property will need to be undertaken this year:

Additional class rooms in King Edward school, to be provided by putting into commission the third flat.

New Heating system in the old Collegiate Institute.

Sewer connection and lavatories for East City school. Same for the West Ward school. This school is also congested.

Dr. Morrison thought the committee might well go into the condition of affairs at both East and West Ward Schools. He did not favor, however, incurring the expense just now of opening the third floor in the King Edward building, and offered, from an economical standpoint, that the kindergarten department might be discarded and room thus provided for other class rooms. The practical part of Kindergarten might be incorporated in primary classes.

Mr. Hill contended that the King Edward and Queen Alexander are the only real good public schools in the city.

Col. Miller believed that the only way to relieve present deplorable conditions in the East City would be to erect a new building. Patching up the old one would prove unsatisfactory.

Mr. Fair replied that should the Board ask Council this year for a large sum for school improvements they would probably be turned down and referred to the ratepayers with probably a like result.

Mr. Ackerman thought a two-room addition to the East Ward building, with basement for lavatories, should be undertaken.

On motion of Mr. Hill, seconded by Dr. Morrison, the whole matter was referred to the Property Committee to report in detail at next meeting.

China has been making some important advances recently, but that country has not apparently progressed much in the business of getting rid of plagues. What China needs most is disinfecting.

Young Folk Indulging to Excess in Amusements and Social Functions

Principal Kenner Complains That Their Education is in This Way Retarded---School Board Discusses the Situation

At last night's meeting of the Board of Education, Dr. Morrison submitted the following, which it is important that all parents should read, mark and act upon :—

Gentlemen,—Your Supervision Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows :—

That after consultation with the Principal of the Collegiate Institute, the Inspector of Public Schools, this committee views with alarm the many counter attractions that detract from the child's mind, and injure the body physically rendering them unfit to do their school work, we particularly refer to such indulgences as late parties on evenings of school days, excessive sports, small boys and girls attending 5c shows, and boys on the streets till late selling newspapers, etc., and we therefore recommend that this Board take some action to try and lessen these evils.

Dr. Morrison went on to say that children are indulging in counter attractions to such an extent that they are not getting the best out of their school life. The deleterious effects of this reflects unjustly upon the teachers, and finally upon the Board. He would not wish to deprive children of all recreation, but thought that excessive indulgence in amusements and social functions should be curtailed to no inconsiderable extent. Children staying out late at parties, go to school next day tired out and with clouded brain.

Mr. Hill offered that parents should act in this connection. Parties and social functions should break up at eleven o'clock, so that children could reach home by twelve at the latest. In fact he thought no school pupil should attend parties on any other evening but Friday.

Col. Miller contended that the Board would be justified in bringing the question before the whole community. At seven and eight o'clock each evening, one sees the streets thronged with young folk going to amusement in some form or other. Strongly worded circulars might be sent to parents, drawing attention to the harmful results accruing from excess in amusements and social functions. He did not think any good arises from 5c shows.

Mr. R. Fair concurred in the previous speakers' views, and knew of young people serving in inferior positions through neglecting their educational opportunities for pleasure.

Mr. Eastwood suggested that the City Council be recommended to increase the license of 5c shows three fold.

No definite action was taken, although the Board are determined to adopt some course, if necessary, that will remedy present conditions with respect to the foregoing, in the interest of all concerned.

WIFE BEATER GET LASH.

Baltimore, Md., Feb 7.—Five lashes on his bare back and two months in jail was the sentence imposed by Judge Duffy in the Criminal Court here to-day on George E. Wooden for assaulting his wife and terribly mutilating her face with a knife. The last time the whipping Post in the jail here was used was in 1907.

MAY RE-OPEN CRIPPEN CASE

HALF-SISTER OF MRS. CRIPPEN LATE CLAIM TO THE SMALL ESTATE.

Conviction Not Legal—Hearsay Evidence Only Put In—Probate Court Is Asked to Reject It.

London, Feb. 6.—What amounts to a retrial of the case of Dr. H. H. Crippen, recently hanged for the murder of his wife, was requested to-day by counsel for Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, who is seeking the property willed to her by Crippen, who was her lover.

The issue was raised as the result of Mrs. Teresa Hunn, of Brooklyn, a half sister of Mrs. Crippen, to defeat the will, on the grounds that Crippen's murder of his wife destroyed his legal right to inherit her property, which is involved in the bequest to Miss Leneve.

Miss Leneve's lawyer appeared in the Probate Court and contended that Crippen's conviction in the criminal court was on such palpable hearsay evidence that it should have no legal status in the Probate Court. The Probate judge took the point under advisement for a week.

In the event of a Probate Court reversing the verdict of the criminal court jury, a legal scandal would be sure to result, but this, of course, is not expected.

Kingston Defeats Grillers by 11-4

The Peterboro Grillers went down to defeat at the hands of the fast Kingston Frontenacs by a score of 11—4. The half-time score being 4—2.

A large crowd witnessed the game, which was fast from start to finish. The Frontenacs are a much heavier aggregation and used their weight to advantage against the locals, who put up a splendid game. This gives Kingston a lead of seven goals on the return game Friday night.

BELLEVILLE WOMAN DIES SUDDENLY.

Mrs. Frederick R. Lingham a Victim of Heart Disease—Was a Well Known Woman.

Belleville, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Frederick R. Lingham of Belleville, dropped dead in her home this morning from an attack of heart disease. She was the founder and directress of St. Agnes' school of this city, a ladys school which is largely attended, and an adjunct to the Anglican Church. Mrs. Lingham was a lady of exceptional ability and eminently suited as the head of such an institution of learning. She was 60 years of age. A husband and one daughter, Mrs. S. S. Lazier of Vancouver, B.C., survive. She was prominently connected with St. Thomas' Church and all philanthropic institutions.

Thousands Saw the Gould-Decies Wedding

New York, Feb. 7.—The old story of American wealth and foreign title meeting at the altar was re-staged to-day in the marriage of Miss Vivien Gould, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. J. Gould, and Lord Decies of England. In St. Bartholomew's Church, before an audience that represented American and English aristocracy, this eighteen-year-old girl and fiance of 44 years were wedded this afternoon.

As is usually the case in international alliances of such prominence, to-day's wedding again demonstrated the morbid curiosity of the public and thousands of persons crowded about old St Bartholomew's to get a glimpse of the bride and the notables in attendance. The services of several hundred policemen were required to keep the streets clear for the endless string of automobiles that depositted their richly gowned and faultlessly groomed guest at the church doors. Similar scenes were enacted at the Gould home, 857 Fifth Avenue, where a reception was held immediately following the ceremony. Owing to threats by cranks, the police guards were doubled.

The full Episcopal service was performed by the Rev. Leighton Parks, rector of St Bartholomew's and bishop David H. Greer. Ten thousand dollars worth of flowers had turned the interior of the church into a veritable bower, the scene of enchantment being enhanced by a special musical program, under the direction of Organist Hyde. In addition to the regular choir of St. Bartholomew's, there was the boys' choir from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The soloist for the occasion was Richard Martin of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

BAD CASE OF ECZEMA CURED BY ZAM-BUK.

Another case of the healing power of Zam-Buk, in cases of eczema, is to hand from Winnipeg. Mrs. H. Cross, of 176 McIntosh Ave., Elmwood, is the subject, and gives the following facts, with a view to leading other sufferers to a means of cure :

"For five years," she says, "I was terribly afflicted with eczema on my legs, and despite all the doctoring and numerous remedies I tried, I seemed unable to get relief. The disease first started with watery blisters, which itched terribly, and when rubbed, burned and smarted very much. The pustules then spread and formed sores. These were irritable and very painful. One blister was no sooner rubbed — or I might say touched—than another started.

"They soon spread over both limbs and I suffered much inconvenience. I tried various remedies, as they were recommended, but could find no relief. Ordinary salves and ointments seemed unequal to my case.

"At last a friend suggested my using Zam-Buk. I acted on this advice and began the Zam-Buk treatment. A few applications gave me considerable ease, and the burning, smarting pains were reduced. I persevered with the balm, and in the course of a week the disease was under control and the sores healing. From that time forward I continued to improve, and the sores, too, became less and less troublesome, until in a wonderfully short time, considering the seriousness of my case, and the long time I had been suffering, Zam-Buk worked a complete cure."

Such is the nature of the great cures which Zam-Buk is daily effecting. Purely herbal in composition, this great balm is a sure cure for all skin diseases, cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ring-worm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns and bruises. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful imitations and substitutes.

Woman's Sudden Death.

Huntsville, Feb. 6. Standing before the mirror in the act of removing her hat, after returning from the church service yesterday morning, Mrs. John Youngson was taken with a sudden attack of heart failure and fell prostrate, dying before help could reach her. She came to Huntsville from Victoria Harbor about four years ago, and was the wife of the former manager of the Huntsville Engine Works. The remains are to be taken to Hamilton for interment.

Inspector Spotten's Report on P. C. I. Highly Satisfactory

CANNOT, PERHAPS, BE EXCELLED IN THE PROVINCE.

Teaching Staff, Subjects Taught and All Forms Grade in No. 1 Class.

FLATTERING REFERENCE TO PRINCIPAL KENNER.

The Board of Education is pardonably proud of the report of High School Inspector Spotten on the Collegiate Institute, which was read at the regular monthly session last night. The Inspector graded the teaching staff, all forms and subjects taught in No. 1 Class throughout. In referring to Principal H. R. H. Kenner, he said, "the principal is administering with marked ability the affairs of the school so long and successfully conducted by his predecessor, Mr. Fessenden." Some minor changes in property and equipment, were referred to their proper committees for immediate action.

It is gratifying to know that Mr. Dumble's recently expressed contention that the standing of our high school in the province is exceptional, is substantially endorsed by so eminent authority as Mr. Spotten. And the latter gentlemen's flattering report renders it difficult to conceive of Peterborough's Collegiate Institute being excelled by any similar institution in Ontario, if not in Canada.

In this connection, Principal Kenner suggested that an annual grant of $50 for a few years to the reference library would be appreciated. Their should be a case for the specimens in the museum, which otherwise will deteriorate through dust. A bulletin board is also needed, and provision made for printing commencement exercises programs.

Mr. Eastwood moved, seconded by Mr. Hill,—That a grant of $50 be made this year for the improvement of the reference library.—Carried.

The bulletin board will also be furnished, and the matter of providing a case for the museum will receive the Property Committee's attention.

YOUTH PAID $25 FOR HUG AND A KISS.

Brantford, Feb. 7.—For offering his company to a young lady while walking along Brant avenue last night and finally hugging and kissing her against her wish, Otval Saunders, a local young man, was fined $25 or 60 days by Magistrate Howell at the Police Court to-day.

McCURDY FLEW AROUND MORRO

FAMOUS CASTLE AT HAVANA ENCIRCLED YESTERDAY BY CANADIAN AVIATOR.

Havana, Feb. 6.—With practically the entire population of Havana looking on J. A. D. McCurdy, who recently nearly crossed the Straits of Florida in a biplane, made a magnificently spectacular flight yesterday from the drill grounds of Camp Columbia to Morro Lighthouse, which he encircled twice, and returned.

The official time was 16 minutes 12 seconds. The estimated distance is 11 miles. The machine used by McCurdy was a 50 horse power biplane, and the prize for the flight was $3,000 offered by the city. This, however, is open to competition until February 28.

THE MORNING TIMES

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1911.

THE RUSSIAN MASSACRES.

The Federenko case in which the Russian Empire appealed for the extradition of a subject of Russia who fled to this country after being charged with murder, reveals through the evidence taken a state of affairs that one could hardly credit the middle ages with tolerating. In referring to this matter the Ottawa Journal says that any one who has read the depositions taken in the case, and in another similar case that has just gone its way through the court of the State of Illinois, with a similar result—the liberation of the prisoner Russia desired — cannot but agree heartily with the decision reached. Indeed in view of this evidence, it is a question if Russia can be considered a civilized nation, and if Canada would ever be justified in turning over to her government any prisoner who had once obtained sanctuary in America.

Take the Illinois case. In it Russia appealed for the return of a man who had been accused of murder in the province of Courland. Part of the evidence dealt with the conditions in that province at the time of the alleged crime.

The prisoner was a brick-maker, and lived in a small village. Meetings were sometimes held, in which certain mild political protests were made. These protests were ignored, and finally some of the rasher spirits broke into a private country mansion near by, and stole guns and ammunition.

News of this reached the nearest centre where Russian troops were stationed. And one afternoon the troops rode down on the village as though to a picnic. One of the first buildings, as they entered the village, was the school, which was then in session. A couple of troopers entered, and before the eyes of the horrified children, killed the teacher, a young fellow who was by no means definitely connected with the riots, and almost decapitated him.

They then rode into the village. At the house of every man who was said to have taken part in the recent riots brief stop was made. And in each case the result of the stop was at least one corpse. Some were hanged some were decapitated, some were speared, in some cases women were killed. No mercy was shown, no quarter was asked, no resistance was made. The inhabitants were murdered like sheep, and like sheep met their end.

Nearly all the village's political leaders met with death on this occasion, and on another similar trip which the troopers paid a few days later. This, by the way, is Russia's method of discouraging anarchy and political agitation. But how did the troopers know who to kill? Investigation by the villagers showed that the information was conveyed to them by a woman, the wife of a villager who had boasted of her treachery and had received money for it. A couple of nights later masked men waited on her and her family; their houses and barns were burned, the woman and her son were killed, and the property belonging to the family that had profited by the treachery that had cost so many lives was wiped out, as far as fire and destruction could accomplish this.

This is but the story of one Russian village in a portion of the empire by no means the most restless. The accused who escaped to America, was not connected by any close evidence with the murder of the woman traitor, but his lawyers took the view that even if he had been connected with the murder, the province was, if not actually, at least in effect in a state of war and rebellion. And at any rate the Illinois jury did not take long in ordering the liberation of the subject whose return Russia demanded, and who was one of the few of the village ringleaders who escaped the soldiers' spears, or the hangman's rope.

This took place in one Russian village in the year 1907. Multiply it by the ten thousand of similar villages in Russia where similar happenings have been reported, and continue it year after year, and the outside world may gather some idea of the life of fear and horror of the average Russian and the reign of military terror under which he exists. A nation which permits such things, in peace, may be civilized in name but not in effect. And the civilized world should not treat her as civilized till the possibility of official massacres such as this is forever removed.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

pany's livery was quite discredited in the land which he, in his corporate capacity, had opened up to Europeans.

Moreover, between dirt and walnut-stain Malcolm was like an animated bronze statue, and it was good to see the incredulous expression on a brother officer's face when he rode up with the cheery cry:

"By Jove, old fellow, I am glad to see you. I am Malcolm of the 3rd Cavalry, and I have brought news from General Havelock."

The leader of the scouting party, a stalwart subaltern of dragoons, thought that it was a piece of impudence on the part of this "dark" stranger to address him so familiarly.

"I happen to be acquainted with Mr. Malcolm—" he began.

"Not so well as I know him, Saumarez," said Frank, laughing. He had not counted on his disguise being so complete. But the laugh proved his identity, for there is a more distinctive character in a man's mirth than in any other inflection of the voice.

Saumarez testified to an amazed recognition in the approved manner of a dragoon.

"Either you are Malcolm or I am bewitched," he cried. Then he looked at Chumru.

"This gentleman, no doubt, is at least a brigadier," he went on. "But, joking apart, have you really ridden from Allahabad?"

The question showed the lack of information of events farther south that obtained in the Punjab. By this time the sepoys had torn down the telegraph posts and cut the wires in all directions. Even between Cawnpore and Calcutta, whenever they crossed the Grand Trunk Road they destroyed the telegraph. As one of them said, looking up at a damaged pole which was about to serve as his gallows:

"Ah, you are able to hang me now because that cursed wire strangled all of us in our sleep."

His metaphor was correct enough. There is no telling what might have been the course of history in India if the sepoys had stopped telegraphic communication from the North to Calcutta early in May.

Malcolm gave Saumarez a summary of affairs in the Northwest Provinces as they rode on ahead of the troops.

"And now," he said, "how do matters stand here?"

"You have used the right word," said the other. "Stand! That is just what we are doing. We've had three commander-in-chiefs and each one is more timid than his predecessor. Thank goodness, Nicholson arrived four days ago. Things will begin to move now."

"Is that the Peshawar Nicholson?" asked Frank, remembering that Hodson had spoken of a man of that name, a man who would "horse-whip into the saddle" a general who feared to assume responsibility.

"Yes. Haven't you seen him? By gad, he's a wonder. A giant of a fellow with an eye like a hawk and a big black beard that seems, somehow, to suggest a blacksmith. He turned up at our mess on the first evening he was in camp. Everybody was laughing and joking as usual and he never said a word. I didn't understand it at the time, but I noticed that Nicholson just glowered at each man who told a funny story, and, by degrees, we were all sitting like mutes at a funeral. Then he said, in a deep voice that made us jump: 'When some of you gentlemen can spare me a moment I shall be glad to hear what you have been doing here the last ten weeks.' There was no spoor in his words. We have had fighting enough, Heaven knows, but we felt that by 'doing' he meant 'attacking,' not 'defending.' Sure as death, he will create a stir. Indeed, the heaven is working already. He sent me out here this morning, as he has gone to meet the movable column from Lahore, and there was a rumor of a sortie from Delhi to cut it off."

Malcolm fresh from association with Havelock realised that a grave and serious-minded soldier could ill brook the jests and idle talk that dominated the average military mess of the period.

"Nicholson sounds like the right man in the right place," he commented.

The dragoon vouched for it emphatically.

"He has put an end to pony-racing and quoits," said he, "and there is to be no more fighting in our shirt sleeves. Bear in mind, we have had a deuce of a time. I've been in twenty-one fights myself, and that is not all. The sepoys usually swarm out hell-for-leather and we rush to meet them. There is a scrimmage for an hour or so, we shove 'em back, Hodson gets in a bit of sabre-work, we pick up the wounded, tell off a burial party, and start a cricket match or a gymkhana. Of course the fighting is stiff while it lasts and my regiment has lost its two best bowlers, a really sound bat and a crack rider in the pony heats. Still if we don't lose any ground we gain none, and I can't help agreeing with Nicholson that war isn't a picnic."

Frank managed not to smile at the naivete of his companion. Though Saumarez was nearly his own age he felt that their difference in rank was not nearly so great as the divergence in their conception of the magnitude of the task before Britain in India. Nevertheless Saumarez saw that Nicholson was a force, and that was something.

"Is the Hodson you mention the man who rode from Kurnaul to Meerut before the affair of Ghazi-ud-din-Nuggur?" he asked.

"Yes, same chap. A regular firebrand and no mistake. He has gathered a crowd of dare-devils known as Hodson's Horse, and they go into action with a dash that I thought was only to be found in regular cavalry. But here we are at our ghat. That is a weedy-looking Arab you are riding—plenty of bone, though. Will he go aboard a badgerow without any fuss?"

"Oh, yes. He will do most things," was the quiet reply.

Malcolm dismounted and fondled Nejdi's black muzzle. How little the light-hearted dragoon guessed what these two had endured together! Nejdi as a weed was a new role. For an instant Frank thought of making a match with his friend's best charger after Nejdi had had a week's rest.

It was altogether a changed audience that Havelock's messenger secured that evening when Nicholson rode to the ridge with the troops sent from the

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roselyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car. should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

ECORDING MUSIC ON NEW MACHINE

...strument Invented That Is of Great Help to Composer—No Notes Will Be Lost Now

A famous critic once made the ra... sweeping statement that "more ...terpieces were lost to music than ...re ever gained." Strange as this re...ark may at first appear, there was ... good deal of truth in it. He meant, ...course, that many wonderful pas...ges which must have been played by ...nt composers while idly fingering ... piano were lost forever. The ...ats of the genius is notoriously fit ..., and while working out one idea a ...en others might subconsciously be ...mmunicated to the fingers, and their ...ne not appreciated until too late. ...ch tragedies must be frequent.

Now, however, by the aid of a new ...vention with the rather formidable ...me of the "Automusicograph," noth... need be lost to music in the fu...re. This ingenious apparatus, which ...n be attached to any piano, records ... a roll of music paper every note ...at is played whether good, bad, or ...different. Many an amateur can ...mpose melodies in his head, and ...ay them but few can write music as ... should be written. Now this little ...achine does that part of the work.

It takes the form of a small cabinet ...ith a glass front, and is fixed over ...e reading desk. A paper roll, mark...d with different colored lines, is ...aced inside and the clockwork mech...ism set going. As it revolves, every ...te that is touched is marked upon it ... typewriter fashion. When the ...eet of paper is detached after play...g, a graduated gauge is placed by ...e side of it which determines the ...ect position of the note.

Don Angelo Barbitri, the inventor, ...aims for it that it is not only ac...rately reproduces the notes played, ...t also the time. The value of the ...vice, therefore, to every composer ...o extemporizes will be enormous.

HATS FROM PARIS

resent Large Picture Creations the Most Artistic Yet Seen

A hat from Paris! Show me the ...oman who is not attracted by such ... bait. In the French capital to-day ...00 is regarded as a comparatively ...w price to pay for one of the popu...r hats of automobile-tire dimen...ons, and having but the slightest ...pology for trimming in the way of ... tiny cord or band of fur or a single ...ow. But why so dear? may be asked. ...ell, it is all because of the line, the ...t, if one may so term it, as a leading ...illiner expressed it the other day.

Truly, the present large picture hats ...e the most artistic headgear seen ...re in many years. During the sum...er season when Paris is supposed to ...e dead the designers for great milli...rs spend many an hour in the ...ouvre or the Carnavalet galleries, or ...udying the wonderful collection of ...e National Library, and the result of ...hich can be easily seen in this year's ...ats, many of which are copies of the ...irectoire and Louis XV. and Louis ...VI. styles. These large hats are ...ainly for afternoon wear, it may be ...plained.

The winter models are so varied ...d becoming that there will be no dif...culty of selection. The poise of an ...grette or a bunch of plumes suited ... the individual face, will entirely ...ange what looks like an impossible-...ooking toque into the most chic and ...coming headgear.

KOEPENICK AGAIN

... Prussian Town That Was Victimized Furnishes Another Startling Episode

Within three days of the fourth ...niversary of the immortal exploit ... the spurious captain, the little town ... Koepenick in Prussia has been ... more shaken out of its pursuits ... by a strange drama of mis...d authority. In this case insanity, ... not crime, was the actuating ...

... forty-five years, Wilhelm Doer...er, station-master of Koepenick, had performed faithful and constant services on the Prussian State Railways, but a few weeks ago his health broke down, and his doctor ordered him a change of scene. The other morning, when his leave had still some days to run, he reappeared at the station and resumed control over the arrangements. His subordinates now remember that his manner was strange and his orders a little perplexing, but the day passed without any critical development.

Towards midnight, however, Doerfel, who had retired to rest, emerged from his official residence, very imperfectly attired, and wandered restlessly about the station till he found a ticket collector, whom he at once set to abusing with great vehemence for having "joined the French railway strike." One by one he tackled all his subordinates who were still on duty with the same accusation, and told them that as soon as he had taken the steps necessary to counteract the effects of their treachery, he intended to commit his complaint against them to paper and forward it to the Emperor without delay.

The staff of the station was at first completely nonplussed, but it gradually dawned upon them that their chief had taken leave of his senses, and they made efforts to propitiate him and induce him to retire to bed once more. Their persuasions, however, only heightened his mania, and the situation became really grave when he began to rush about, shouting crazy orders, which he declared were necessary to remove the disorder in the traffic occasioned by the strike.

Fortunately, a police sergeant, who happened to be at hand, possessed not only presence of mind, but also ingenuity. Procuring a sheet of foolscap paper, he approached the demented stationmaster, and urged upon him the necessity of drawing up a report on the strike for the Emperor before the movement had spread further. At the same time, he pointed out that the place where he would be least likely to be disturbed in his work by the molestations of the strikers would undoubtedly be the famous Town Hall. The unhappy stationmaster fell readily into this trap, and allowed himself to be conducted thither. Though he calmed down after being placed under restraint, it has been found necessary to consign him to the local asylum.

MARQUIS A SMUGGLER

A Dangerous Smuggling Game Carried on Along Italy's Frontier

Marquis Gino Capponi, a member of a famous old Florentine family of that name, has been arrested at Varese, Italy, under extraordinary circumstances.

To retrieve his fallen fortunes, the Marquis, who is now 54 years of age, placed himself at the head of a powerful band of smugglers, mostly of Neapolitan origin, operating on the Italo-Swiss-Austrian frontiers with ramifications in most of the big Italian towns. The Marquis was condemned by the criminal courts last May, but managed to elude capture by fleeing to Lugano. He continued to superintend daring incursions of his armed bands into Italy, carrying cargoes of contraband tobacco choice lace, watches, coffee, sugar, and huge quantities of saccharine, which were distributed by parcel post to hundreds of agents.

For several months hardly a night passes without an exchange of shots between the Customs guards and the smugglers, who usually number from thirty to a hundred, and who, to enter Italy, must scale or penetrate a thick fence of metal network twelve feet high extending all along the border line, and wherefrom numerous bells are suspended, whose least tinkle serves to arouse the guards.

The captured Marquis foolishly led in person one such expedition, into which the Italian officials poured a volley of musketry, disabling some and obliging the fugitives to drop over a ton of tobacco and saccharine. Another of Capponi's gangs succeeded in rushing the frontier, and got nearly as far as Bergamo, when they were pounced upon. They had in their possession three million contraband cigars and cigarettes.

OBJECTED TO TIGHT LACING

The interest which Queen Amelie has always taken in medical work is well known. She studied medicine, passed her examination, and obtained a degree, and is thus the only Queen M.D. extant. Her Majesty made a specialty of nursing, and maintained a dispensary and hospital for sick children at her own expense. Among the reforms which she preached to her own sex was the discontinuance of tight lacing. It is said that her Majesty was delighted when the Rontgen rays were discovered. She photographed by the aid of the rays a tight-laced lady, and thereby was able to prove how pernicious the habit is, and to show the deformity caused by undue pressure on the internal organs. It has been said that the Queen's precept and example have diminished tight-lacing in Portugal.

AEROPLANES FOR AFRICA

According to the Paris "Journal," M. Merlaud-Ponty, Governor-General of French West Africa, has decided to include in the estimates of the colony a credit of $20,000 for the establishment of an aeroplane service.

BIG QUESTION FOR THE COMMONS

A Vital Subject at the Coming Session Will Probably be the Payment of the Members

The coming session of the British Parliament will in many respects be one of the most interesting England has ever witnessed, so many are the vital question to be taken up. But of all these probably none is of more practical importance than the payment of the members of the House of commons, a question that has been pushed into the front rank by the now famous Osborne judgment, which refused the labor unions the right to use their money for political campaign expenses and to pay the labor members in the House for their work. The judgment of the court has caused violent excitement in labor circles and the demand was made that the government, whose political existence to a certain extent depends on labor support, must bring forward a bill granting the labor unions the right to use their money for political purposes. A bill of this kind will hardly be able to pass through the House of Commons, as it is constituted now, and if it does, it will surely be killed in the House of Lords. A solution has to be found however. To drive the representatives of labor out of the House of Commons because they cannot afford to sit there is, of course, out of the question, and both great parties are, therefore, advocating, with more or less sincerity, the payment of the chosen representatives of the people. The government will hardly oppose this solution which was already suggested by Gladstone in a conversation with John Morley in 1891, but what is more remarkable is that even the ultra conservative press, like the "Morning Post," is in favor of it. Mr. Balfour has not said anything yet, but it is more than likely that Austen Chamberlain, who tries to imitate his father in everything, even in appearance, may champion the cause Joseph Chamberlain fought for twenty-five years ago. At any rate, the question will surely come up for discussion in the House of Commons, and the demand made by the Chartists in 1873, and which was then considered revolutionary, may be carried through in 1910.

PALACE ON WHEELS FOR HIS MAJESTY

Most Beautiful Railway Carriage in the World in Which King Takes His Journeys

To embellish and beautify a railway carriage so that it combines the perfect taste, the elegance, and comfort of a famous apartment in a Royal palace, would seem almost an impossibility to those who know by experience how uncomfortable a long railway journey can be. The impossible, however, is achieved in the magnificent Royal railway carriage made for the King and Queen of England. There is nothing in the world that furnishes such a striking contrast with the ordinary railway coach. It is really a drawing-room—in fact, a Royal palace on wheels.

This unique train is composed of six carriages, and the decorations and fittings of the interior are said to be unequalled in any rolling-stock in the world.

There are two saloons, one for the King and one for the Queen, and every conceivable contrivance for their Majesties' comfort has been installed. King George's saloon is decorated in white enamel and light green the furniture being of satin-wood inlaid with ivory. The saloon occupied by Queen Mary is also white enamel, relieved by touches of blue, and soft shades of pink. The smoking-room is a cosy apartment in mahogany, with fine inlays of rosewood and satinwood, while the dining-car is a sumptuous coach, the kitchen a model. There are balconies to each saloon, which are fitted with windows, so that they can be used as observation cars.

But even before their Majesties' comfort comes the consideration of their safety, and the precaution taken by a railway company to ensure against accidents during the Royal progress are of the most elaborate character. Fifteen minutes ahead of every Royal train goes a pilot engine, to see that the line, which has been cleared a quarter of an hour earlier, is in perfect order. Every quarter of a mile on both sides of the line a plateslyer is stationed with hand signals and detonators in case of emergency. Each keeps in sight of his fellow, both on the right hand and the left, and no matter if the journey is from London to Scotland, the line is guarded in the same way throughout. When either the King or Queen travels to Balmoral, for instance, several hundred workmen are so engaged. By the side of the driver on the engine is a special look-out man, and on the train itself are all the principal officers of the company, a full complement of artificers in case of a breakdown, and two guards in electrical communication with the driver.

It also means that all ordinary traffic on the route is paralyzed for an hour, but thus their Majesties' safety is secured.

A WHITE CANARY

Among the exhibits at the 35th show of the London and Provincial Ornithological Society, held in the Lambeth Baths, England, was a pure white canary. Both its parents were ordinary colored Yorkshires.

"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"

If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

¶ Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Albert has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ago.

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your application by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots. On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

EIGGEST EGG PLANT

Largest in World is on Rhode Island —Great Output

The largest poultry plant in the world it at Little Compton, Rhode Island, and is owned by Isaac Wilbur, who ships about 150,000 dozen eggs a year from his home. Mr. Wilbur builds his houses 8 x 10 feet in size and houses forty hens in a house this size. He has 100 of these houses and they are set 150 feet apart in rows over sloping fields. The feed is hauled to each house in a wagon; twice a day this wagon makes the rounds, morning and evening. In the morning it is a mash made of cooked vegetables and different kinds of meats; in the evening, or rather late afternoon, only in this case, it is whole corn the year around. The eggs are gathered when the afternoon feed is given. Different fields are given over to these houses As the grounds need cleansing they are moved to renewed grounds.

RECORD AS CORONER

This Doctor Has Conducted 19,000 Inquests in 25 Years

To show that he was qualified to address the Medico-Legal Society on "An East End Coroner and His Medical Neighbors," Dr. W. Wynn Westcott, coroner for North-East London, England, told the society that he had been a coroner for a quarter of a century, and had held 19,000 inquests.

He expressed the opinion that at present doctors kept back much evidence as to the effects following drink and disease, chiefly in order not to hurt anyone's feelings, and the result was that some of the Registrar-General's returns were very misleading. An Act of Parliament should be passed to make death certificates secret.

MATCHES MADE BY MUSIC

"A church choir is one of Cupid's most happy hunting grounds," affirms a tenor who sings in a fashionable London church.

"I believe that if statistics were obtainable on the subject it would be found that of single people who join church choirs a larger proportion get married within a year than among an equal number of young people that might be selected anywhere else. Singing, even if about things celestial, sets the deepest of all emotions going, and hearts chord with each other just as voices do.

"If the singer doesn't discover an affinity in a fellow-singer it is pretty apt to be found in the congregation. If a woman has a sweet voice, a face to match, and a figure to go with the other two attractions, she has the best possible opportunity for displaying them, as anyone can understand; and the same principle applies to a handsome man."

ANGLER'S ADVICE

A novice at angling was out on his first fishing expedition with his brand-new rod and other elaborate equipment, and after a long day of fruitless toil he hooked a salmon. The question now was as to how to land his captive, and he had been struggling vainly for some time to accomplish this object when an experienced fisherman arrived on the scene. The novice had wound in the line till the fish's nose touched the ring at the end of the rod, and he was now absolutely beaten.

"What shall I do?" he inquired, in desperation, of the new-comer.

"Climb up the pole and fetch him in," was the expert's cruel answer.

WORLD'S GREATEST MOTHER

Mrs. Jane Morris, who resides in Jackson County, Kentucky, can boast of a total of 513 descendants, nearly all of whom are living, and none of whom has been accused of crime.

"Aunt Jane," as she is called, lives with her son near the little hamlet of Sand Gap, and her descendants own and occupy most of the land in Jackson County. She is eighty-six years old, and she says she expects to live to be a hundred, and to see descendants of the fifth generation.

Mrs. Morris's husband died twenty years ago, six years after they had celebrated their golden wedding. She was never married again, and remarkable as it may seem, the entire number of descendants are from this one union.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD HERO

The Royal Humane Society's medal has been awarded to an eight-year-old boy named Douglas F. T. Gibson, who plunged into deep water in Causeway Bay, Hongkong, and saved a younger sister, who fell from a boat.

Before the boy went in a Chinese youth was asked to save the child, but he refused, saying the devil would want him if he did.

LOST THRONES

The fate of King Manuel recalls that he is not only the only living ruler who has lost his throne, but he is not even the only living member of the House of Braganza who has suffered the misfortune of dethronement. In the Isle of Wight there dwells a nun who was once Queen of Portugal. For six years her husband, King Miguel, strived hard to keep the Lusitanian crown from Donna Maria, the rightful possessor of it, but after a lot of bloodshed, he was sent to the right-about, and Donna Maria came by her own. She was the great grandmother of young King Manuel. Then there is the Duchess of Parma. She is a Braganza Princess who married another ill-fated European ruler. Her husband, who died two years ago, was the last sovereign ruler of an ancient royal house in Italy. What the last Duke of Parma and his wife lost in regal prestige, they made up in domestic felicity, for the Duchess presented the late Duke with no less than twelve children, all of whom survive, while the Duke's first wife had presented him with nine sons and daughters, eight of whom are still living. The Duchess of Parma is therefore the mother, or stepmother, of twenty-one children. Another Braganza Princess who has narrowly missed wearing a crown is the Comtesse D'Eu. Before her marriage to this Orleans Prince she was Her Royal Highness Princess Isabelle Christine Leopoldine, Augustine Michelle Gabrielle Raphaelle Gonzaga De Braganza, the second daughter of Pedro II., Emperor of Brazil. Had the Portuguese dynasty in Brazil not come to an end, the Comtesse D'Eu would have been an empress in her own right, as her two brothers both died in infancy. The House of Braganza has therefore suffered some terrible dynastic vicissitudes during the last half-century.

Among other living royalties who have worn crowns which are now in the possession of others are the ex-Empress Eugenie, the widow of Napoleon III., Emperor of the French. Her Majesty is still wonderfully active. She was a great beauty, but her vanity is said to have been the cause of the Franco-Prussian War, in which thousands of lives were lost. The ex-Empress lost her only son, the Prince Imperial, in the Zulu War. One of the most pathetic figures among the dispossessed monarchs is Charlotte, ex-Empress of Mexico. For many years she has been in a lunatic asylum. Her husband was the Archduke Maximilian of Austria, brother of the present Austrian Kaiser, and he responded to the invitation of the people of Mexico to become their ruler only to find himself drawn into a death-trap from which there was no dignified escape. He was eventually shot dead in Mexico, and his miserable widow, not long after, lost her reason. She is the unhappy sister of the late King of the Belgians.

The Grand Duchess of Tuscany is the last lady who will bear that historic title. The last ruling Grand Duke of Tuscany, her husband, lost his kingdom by royal decree of March 22, 1860, when his dominions were added to the province conquered by the King of Sardinia, and henceforth became part of the "United Italy" of Victor Emmanuele and Garibaldi.

Another lady who has lost a crown is the ex-Queen Natalie of Servia. She was the wife of King Milan, and mother of that unfortunate young King Alexander, whose assassination with his wife, Queen Draga, put an end to the Obrenovitch dynasty of Servia, and paved the way for King Peter's accession. Altogether, these dispossessed Queens are not to be envied.

Among the monarchs who have ceased to rule are the deposed Shah Mohammed Ali Mirza the son of Muzaffu-ed-Din, who used to be so well-known in London. Another Mohammedan monarch who has been replaced is Abdul Hamid, who, as the "Sick Man," was the bugbear of European politics for forty years. He is now said to be a lunatic, and is, at any rate, a prisoner. He is never likely to be ruler of Turkey again. Theebaw, ex-King of Burmah, who was dethroned by the British Government after the last Burmese campaign, still lives and thoroughly enjoys his rustication at Ratnagiri, a town on the West Indian Coast. He also is nominally a prisoner, but feels none of the restrictions implied by that term, but he will never be allowed to see his beloved Burmah again.

India, by the way, has more than one Maharaja who has been deprived of his "Gadi." One of them is Mahdo Singh, the ex-Maharaja of Panna. He took a dislike to his nephew, who was heir-presumptive of the State, so Mahdo Singh caused him to be poisoned. After a State inquiry, which lasted forty days, the British Government deposed the Maharaja, and hanged the man who perpetrated the foul deed.

A monarch who, in his day, has been much in the public eye, is the ex-Sultan of Morocco, who was defeated in war by Mulai Hafid, and removed from the Sultanate. The ex-ruler of Morocco was a go-ahead sort of chap, and filled large rooms in his palace with golden cameras, toy railways, cinematograph apparati, concertinas, pianos, and bicycles.

Prempeh, the ex-King of Ashantee, too, still lives, and is ready and willing on all occasions to talk of the "City of Blood" and the terrible human sacrifices which were his diversion in the days of his kingship. There are a few other dethroned rulers in various coast towns of the Dark Continent, but they are kept under strict supervision. The last monarch to be deposed before the fall of King Manuel was Yong-Hi, the Emperor of Korea, who years ago saw his mother butchered on her throne, and who will probably be a happier man as a pensioner of Japan than as an Asiatic sovereign. True it is that "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

THAT DEPENDED

A very small boy was trying to lead a big St. Bernard dog up the road. "Where are you going to take the dog, my little man?" inquired a passer-by. "I—I'm going to see where—where he wants to go first," was the breathless reply.

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independant for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

Calls Mylius' Trial a Legal Travesty

Paris, Feb. 4.—Stung by the criticism that he did not use some of his great wealth in the defence of Edward F. Mylius, who was convicted Wednesday of criminally libeling King George, Edward Halton James, publisher of the Liberator, to-day declared that no amount of money or legal counsel could have saved Mylius, who was his London agent.

"The whole trial was a monstrous travesty," James said. "The authorities were determined to send Mylius to prison, and they set the law at naught to accomplish this. From the demanding of bail of $100,000 to the last act in the trial, the procedure was marked by illegal tactics. The publication of the Liberator will go on just the same."

James is a man of apparently the highest artistic attainments. He lives in a richly furnished apartment in the Rue St. Dominick which is cared for by a small corps of servants, including three maids. Costly paintings adorn the walls of his apartment.

THE GUARANTY OIL COMPANY

WILL BE A GREAT OIL PRODUCER

Paying Big Dividends to Stockholders—Facts Concerning a Splendid Property, a Strong Company, Able Management, Perfected Plans and Prospects, Assuring the Fulfillment of Promises—The Guaranty Oil Company, Los Angeles.

Guaranty Oil Company--See Copy From the Mercantile and Financial Funds, Los Angeles, California: The impression generally prevails that there is a very large element of risk involved in the purchase of oil stocks for investment, and this is undoubtedly true to the extent that in the early development of great oil fields, the large profits frequently realized from originally small investments leads to the organization of many purely speculative enterprises, based upon the purchase, or more often, the lease, of so-called oil lands, the value of which is entirely problematical. Indeed, in the early stages of an oil "boom," such lands are often acquired simply to afford an excuse for selling stock to credulous investors on the strength of promises which the promoters of such enterprises never intend to fulfill, beyond the sufficient pretense of development to protect them from prosecution under the laws devised to safeguard unwary investors.

Generally, however, as the excitement and speculative fever incident to early developments in an oil field subsides, the real investors take the place of the speculators and strong companies under able management undertake the development of properties which are practically proven oil lands and the early investors in the stock of such companies participate profitably in the legitimate profits of oil production which are as is a matter of general knowledge larger than those obtainable from any other form of investment.

The speculative era in the history of the oil fields of California, the largest producing fields in the world, has become practically past history, and there is no excuse for an investor purchasing stock in a company operating in these fields, which does not invite the most searching investigation of its property, plans, prospects and management.

Viewed in this light, there is no company in California which offers a better guarantee of profitable returns to its stockholders than the Guaranty Oil Company, the fiscal agents of which are the Standard Securities Co., 431 H. W. Hellman Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

To begin with, the men behind the Guaranty Oil Company are prominent business men, capitalists, financiers, and experienced oil men whose names are all sufficient guaranty of the high character of any enterprise with which they are identified.

In confirmation of this statement it is only necessary to name the officers and directors of the company, the personnel being as follows: Geo. W. Carroll, president, oil operator and prominent banker; Judge Drew Pruitt, capitalist and successful oil man; M. A. Fleming, secretary and treasurer, president of the Texas Society; R. L. Cox, managing director, able and experienced oil operator; Frank R. Strong, director, capitalist and realty, of Strong & Dickinson; Dr. J. E. Cowles, director; well-known physician and conservative investor; I. P. Silliman, director, president Gl Cantro Fruit & Produce Co.; C. H. Burdick, superintendent of United Crude Oil Co.

Assuredly such a directorate is well calculated to inspire confidence in the ability, experience and integrity of the management of the Guaranty Oil Company.

The property of the company consists of 120 acres of land located in the southeast quarter of Sec. 31, Tr. 32 South, range 24 east, Kern county, California.

The company are the absolute owners of these lands, under patent signed by ex-President Roosevelt. They pay no royalties.

The tract is in the heart of the great Midway oil field; and every map shows it in the centre. It has flowing wells from 1200 to 40,000 barrels per day, on three sides of it, and fine pumping wells on the fourth side—which shallow wells are now being deepened to the flowing stratum. The company have these sales on their northeast boundary line: Holbrook & McGuire sold to J. H. Edmonds, 40 acres for $120,000; sold to J. C. Yancey, 20 acres for $70,000; and refused $5,000 per acre for the north half of the northwest quarter. The increase in the value of the land alone will pay handsomely within the next twelve months. U. S. Geological Report No. 406 places it in the very richest belt and pronounces every foot proven. Development will increase the value $15,000 per acre.

Full particulars supplied on application to R. J. Johnston, Agent for Peterborough district, or to the company, Citizens' National Bank Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Tillsonburg, Ontario," will be received until 4.00 P. M., on Tuesday, February 28, 1911, for the construction of a Public Building at the place mentioned.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at the office of Mr. H. J. Lamb, District Engineer, London, Ont., at the Post Office, Tillsonburg, Ontario, and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p. c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

ACCIDENT UNAVOIDABLE.

New York, Feb. 8.—"An unavoidable accident" was the verdict of the nine members of the coroner's jury which has been hearing evidence on the cause of the gas explosion in the New York Central Power house on December 19 last, by which 13 persons lost their lives. "The explosion was due to the negligence of the company or companies in charge of the yard," was the finding of the three other members of the jury.

The split verdict was handed in to Coroner Holtzhauser early to-day after six hours deliberation by the jury. The verdict as rendered served to exonerate Albert Seagroatt, the engineer of the train which ran off the end of a track and caused a break in a gas pipe, and he was released from custody.

Hospitals Are Full.

On account of the prevailing epidemic of grip, the hospitals just now are very busy, as are also the doctors of the city.

Snow Plough Busy.

All day yesterday the snow ploughs were busy as were also the snow-shovelling brigade. The storm was the worst of the season

Trains Mostly Late.

The trains arriving in Peterborough yesterday were mostly late. Heavy snow plough available is working overtime.

Astronomical Society.

Mr. J. R. Collins, of Toronto, addressed the Astronomical Society last night, in the physical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute. There was not a large attendance.

Case of Eggs Stolen.

No doubt it was some bad egg who broke into Messrs. W. Scott & Co's building in East City on Monday night and stole a case of eggs. They made their way into the office and ransacked the papers, no doubt looking for cash, and were disappointed.

Graphite in the North.

It is said that the large deposit of graphite in Haliburton County, is to be developed. For some years Peterborough men have been figuring on the possibilities of graphite. Some valuable graphite deposits being owned in this city. The trouble with graphite is, that it is next to impossible to get it pure—that is, free from rock and sand deposits.

A Good Change.

The Council intend having the sanitary condition of the city looked after by the police, instead of appointing a regular officer for that purpose. This is, we believe, a good move, and one that the ratepayers will appreciate, as it will no doubt mean effective service, with cleaner yards, &c. Chief Thompson is just the man to be depended upon to see that his men perform their duties in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

Miss Tennant Last Night.

Last night the Grand Opera House was filled to the doors, to witness Miss Barbara Tenant in her Shakespearian recital. Those who attended were well repaid for their time and trouble in going. It is seldom that our people have an opportunity of witnessing so vivid and realistic a representation of Shakespearian character as was portrayed last night by this talented lady. She was supported by her husband, Mr. Harold Wadeley, formerly of the Brinton Carpet Works, in this city.

A Delightful Evening.

A delightful evening was spent at St. Luke's on Monday evening, when the young people's society entertained the young people of St. John's and St. Luke's. An old-fashioned spelling match was one of the features of the evening, when St. John's defeated the All Saints' and afterwards met defeat by St. Luke's. The prizes were awarded to Miss Ada Brennan of St. Luke's and Miss L. Winterdrift of St. John's. To Miss Hume of St. Luke's and Miss Miles of St. John's were also given tokens of the audience's confidence that they would be more at home on smaller fields. Rev. Mr. Carpenter of St. Luke's presented the prizes. A splendid programme of music followed.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BAILIFF FROZEN TO DEATH ON ROAD.

Thomas McGuire of Bolton, a Man of Sixty, Fell Exhausted on Way Home.

Bolton, Ont. Feb. 7.—Mr. Thomas McGuire of Bolton, a single man, 60 years of age, was found on the high way this morning, apparently frozen, by a farmer, Wm. Hardwick, who was coming into town with milk, upon examination McGuire was found to be alive, but unconscious, and was immediately taken to the Queen's Hotel, and Dr. A. A. Jackson was summoned. McGuire expired shortly afterwards, without regaining consciousness.

It appeared that he had been walking home from Locktown, a place about ten miles from Bolton, where he had been acting as bailiff, and must have become exhausted with the snow and extreme cold. An inquest will be held

INJUNCTION AGAINST GRANT TO DELEGATION.

Fruit Men Will Have to Pay Their Own Way to Ottawa Friday.

St. Catharines, Feb. 6.—H. H. Collier, K.C., has served an injunction on the County Clerk and Treasurer, restraining them from paying a five hundred dollar grant to the fruit growers to aid in financing the delegation that will go to Ottawa on Friday to protest against reciprocity.

At a meeting here Saturday Messrs. W. H. Bunting, St. Catharines; E. D. Smith, Winona; D. Johnson, president of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association; and E. A. Adams, Leamington, were selected as spokesmen before the Government. In addition one or two vegetable men will be chosen.

Deputations selected to visit the fruit-growing districts of the States to get information were as follows: Messrs. Burgess and Palferman to Chautauqua; Lowrey and Fisher to Western New York; Bridgeman and Carpenter to Michigan.

E. A. Lancaster, M.P. for Lincoln, and Mr. Welland D. Woodruff, who will oppose him at the next election, are both going with the deputation.

Mr. R. H. Dewar, Fruitland, declared himself a Liberal in politics, but claimed to be opposed to the elimination of the duty in the interest of the fruit-grower people generally.

DIVORCE KILLS THE NATION'S DOMESTIC LIFE.

Cardinal Gibbons Speaks Strongly on the Question—It is Worse than Mormonism.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 6.—In his sermon delivered at the Cathedral yesterday, Cardinal Gibbons spoke strongly against the evils of divorce, saying in part:

"If Christianity is the highest type of civilization, and who can deny it, then is it not true that we are retrograding instead of advancing on certain lines?

"There is a social scourge more blighting and more destructive of family life than Mormonism. It is the fearfully increasing number of divorce mills throughout the United States. These mills, like the mills of the gods, are slowly but surely grinding to powder the domestic altars of the nation. Husband and wife are separated on the most flimsy pretexts, as if the different states of the Union were not sufficiently accommodating in this respect, one state has the unenviable distinction of granting a bill of divorce for the mere asking of it on the sole condition of a brief sojourn within her borders."

Mylius, The Republican, Appeals King's Case.

London, Feb. 6.—Edward F. Mylius who, on Feb. 1, was found guilty of criminal libel against King George and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment, has lodged an appeal against the judgment. An adverse decision is regarded as certain in view of the fact that he offered no defence.

Candidly, it looks as if the old story about King George's morganatic marriage must have been cooked up by an inferior cook.

PARENTS KILL THEIR TWO CHILDREN IN A SUICIDE PACT

WERE FACING STARVATION — FOUR BODIES FOUND ON BED IN APARTMENT HOUSE.

Children Lay Between the Parents—Husband Left a Brief Note Stating That Poverty Had Prompted Them to End It All.

New York, Feb. 8.—Rather than let their children starve to death because their father was penniless and out of employment, Frank Barnard, formerly a trainer for the 23rd Regiment in Brooklyn, entered into a suicide pact with his wife, Mamie, by which they killed their two little ones by gas and at the same time ended their own lives.

The four bodies were found to-day lying on a bed in the scantily furnished apartment which they had occupied on the third floor of 750 Fulton street, Brooklyn. The bodies of the children were between those of the parents. The husband left a brief note stating that poverty prompted him and his wife to enter into this pact.

Persons living in the Fulton street building smelled gas to-day. At the same time it was noted that nothing had been seen of the Barnards. The children, George, 4 years old, and Daniel 2, usually were heard playing about in the apartment. Getting no response to knocks, the neighbors summoned a policeman, and he discovered the tragedy.

SETS NEW STYLE OF WIFE BEATING

Young Married Man Snatches His Spouse's Slipper and Proceeds to Spank Her.

New York, Feb. 7.—A special to the World from Atlantic City says: Harry Wilson, a young married man sets a new style of wife beating last night when he took off his wife's slipper with which to spank her.

The two started a quarrel on the street, and Wilson, after vainly searching for something with which to hit his wife, grabbed her, snatched off her slipper and was beating her when her screams attracted help.

Police and citizens parted the couple and the wife protested when some of the rescuers started to punish the husband. He was locked up.

Kicked His Wife.

Montreal, Feb. 7.—William Gervais of this city is in the hands of the police, accused of striking and kicking his sixteen-year-old wife, thereby causing the death of her unborn child. His wife is not expected to live. Gervais is also accused of assaulting the police. He will be tried on Wednesday.

Whole Village Adoat.

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 7.—An entire fishing village of 253 men, which had been established on the ice outside of Bjorko Sound, was carried out to sea in a gale on Friday night. The disaster was not discovered until morning, when the village was already out of sight. Boats have been sent to the rescue, but have not yet returned.

THREATENED WITH INVASION OF JAPS

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 8.—Advices were brought by the steamer Zealandia that much excitement was occasioned in Australia and New Zealand by the report that arrangements had been made by the French Nickle Mining Companies in New Caledonia, to bring 5,000 Japanese to the South Pacific Islands.

—Mr. Fisher, Premier of Australia, in an interview, said the arrival of thousands of Japanese at Noumea was a matter of grave importance to Australia, owing to the danger of New Caledonia being made an intermediate settling ground for hordes of Japanese with Australia as the final destination.

Noumea correspondents state that the arrival of the first ship load of Japanese is causing disturbances. The bringing of the Japanese was arranged in France.

Took Prisoner to See His Dying Mother

Cobourg, Feb. 8.—Matthews, the man who is in the county jail awaiting trial on the charge of murdering a woman in a Colborne Hotel, was allowed his liberty for a short time to-day to visit his mother, who is dying. The woman was asking to see her son, and the circumstances were reported to the authorities at Toronto. This afternoon Sheriff Proctor received instructions to appoint two special constables to accompany Matthews to his home, so as to satisfy the dying woman's wish.

TO MEET AT SMITH'S FALLS.

Smith's Falls, Feb. 8.—The Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario will hold its annual meeting in Smith's Falls this year on March 15, 16 and 17. Preparations are being made here to entertain a large number of delegates.

CONVENT BURNED, CHILDREN SAVED

Brothers Averted Panic—Two Firemen Badly Injured by Falling of Wall—A Fierce Blaze.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 8.—The immense five-storeys St. Ann's convent and school in the north end of the city, which was totally destroyed by fire which broke out shortly before noon to-day.

So swift was the rush of the flames that by noon the whole building was a roaring furnace and the firemen were powerless to save any part of it.

There were two hundred children in the building when the fire broke out and a panic was narrowly avoided.

The brothers in charge succeeded in getting all the children safely away.

Two firemen were badly injured by a falling wall.

Tong War May Result.

Ottawa, Feb. 7.—The liquor officers made a big seize of Oriental liquor here last Saturday night. As the Chinese are banded together by means of secret societies a "Tong," or race war, is feared as one gang betrayed the other. Special resentment is felt concerning the injury received by the loss of Dum Quom, a member of the Chinese Imperial Parliament.

MURRAY TO KEEP N. S. PREMIERSHIP

LEADER OF LIBERAL GOVERNMENT HAS BEEN PERSUADED TO STAY IN OFFICE.

May Appeal to Province—General Election is Likely to be Held in May—A Reciprocity Test.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 7.—Following a lengthy interview which he had here with Hon. Mr. Fielding, it is learned that Hon. Geo. Murray has decided to reconsider his decision to retire from the Premiership of Nova Scotia. It is stated that he will stay in the arena, and may appeal to the people in May.

Premier Murray was to have been succeeded by Hon. A. K. MacLean, Attorney-General of Nova Scotia, and formerly M.P. for the County of Lunenburg. It is understood that a great deal of pressure was brought to bear, both in Halifax and Ottawa, to persuade Premier Murray to retain the leadership. Hon. Mr. Fielding asked for a personal interview, and it was for that reason that Mr. Murray came to Montreal. He was accompanied by a number of Nova Scotia politicians, including H. J. Logan. The latter, it is understood, was slated for the vacant Senatorship for the Province, but declared his willingness to give the appointment over to Mr. Murray, provided the latter wished to retire from the provincial arena. Persuaded by Mr. Fielding to remain in office, Mr. Murray, it is understood, will keep the reins of Government and the Senatorship will probably go to Hance Logan. The general election will serve the purpose of testing the feeling of the Maritime Province on the question of reciprocity.

Royal Commission To Deal with Rats

Lord Mayor of London Presided at Meeting to Discuss Their Extermination.

London, Feb. 7.—The Lord Mayor presided yesterday over an influential meeting, which had been called to discuss the question of the extermination of rats in this country. There was perfect unanimity among the large company present as to the fact that it was one of the pressing necessities of the day that rats should be exterminated if possible, but the methods by which this could be accomplished were acknowledged to be difficult and costly.

The upshot of the meeting was that great pressure will be brought to bear on the Government to induce the appointment of a Royal Commission to deal with the subject.

Gas Exploded, 19 Injured.

New York, Feb. 7.—Nineteen men were injured, five fatally, by the explosion of a barrel of gasoline at Jamaica, Long Island, this morning. The gasoline was on a work car in the Long Island Railroad yards, and the men were laborers who were engaged in clearing snow from the tracks. Just what caused the explosion could not be learned.

Both lectures will be illustrated by limelight views, and should be intensely interesting.

Invasion of Ontario by Farmers from Illinois

Toronto, Feb. 8.—That steps are being taken to promote an extended American immigration into south-western Ontario was the statement made by the Mayor of Chatham, when speaking for a deputation that waited upon Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, this morning. A syndicate of United States capitalists he said, was procuring options on properties. It was ready to spend a million dollars, and intended to run free excursions of farmers from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and other corn States to induce people from those sections to settle in Ontario. The reason of it is that the good corn lands in that section are much cheaper than corn lands on the other side of the line.

The deputation came to ask for the appointment of a representative of the agricultural department in Chatham. It pointed out the good work being done in West Kent and Essex by A. McKenney, the present representative, and asked that some one be appointed for the Chatham district to act under Mr. McKenney. The work of the representative, the speakers in the deputation said, had increased the value of farm lands in that district from five to thirty-five dollars an acre.

From all parts of Western Ontario demands are coming in for special representatives. A similar deputation from Markdale waited on the Minister this afternoon. Another is coming from Meaford to-morrow. A deputation from Owen Sound to the Minister of Education to-day asked for an agricultural instructor for the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute. If he is appointed he will also act as a representative of the agricultural department. Similar requests have come in in large numbers from Middlesex, Essex, and North York.

RUSSIA'S ARMY TO DRIVE BACK PLAGUE

WILL PROTECT FRONTIERS FROM ITS INVASION FROM MANCHURIA AND CHINA.

Important Conferences Held to Consider Problem of Moving Soldiers Westward—Malady Has Broken Out in Inner City of Pekin.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—The vast army of Russia will be mobilized if necessary, to protect her frontiers from the invasion of the bubonic plague from Manchuria and China. Conferences of the Czar, Premier Stoypin and the Minister of War were held to-day to discuss the object of moving soldiers to the westward and southern frontiers, following a despatch relating to the seriousness and spread of the scourge.

Fresh alarm over the spread of the plague in the East was caused here to-day by the receipt of despatches from Pekin stating that it had broken out in the inner city, and that a Buddhist priest had died of the disease.

Although the first despatches declared that only one priest had perished, later advices stated that the situation was more serious, and that at least six persons were inoculated with the plague germs. The Chinese Government has established a censorship over plague news following the fresh and most dangerous outbreaks.

EXPECT DEVELOPMENTS IN FARMERS' BANK CASE.

Something Sensational is Hinted at—Provisional Directors in Police Court

It is learned that some further sensational developments will come to light to-morrow in connection with the wrecking of the Farmers' Bank.

The four provisional directors, facing two charges of conspiracy, will appear in the Police Court for their final hearing in the investigation before Magistrate Denison.

ASK CANADA NOT TO RATIFY IT

UNIONISTS DESIRE TO REQUEST DELAY IN CONFIRMING THE TARIFF AGREEMENT.

Was Britain Consulted?—Amendments to Address and Many Questions on Reciprocity.

London, Feb. 7.—The Canada-United States reciprocity agreement occupies a commanding place in the minds of the members of the new House of Commons. This is made plain not only in Mr. Balfour's demand yesterday that the Government grant time for an exhaustive debate on the matter and for an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, on the subject, but by innumerable interpellations to be made to-morrow.

Among these will be a request that Colonial Secretary Harcourt ask the Canadian Government to postpone the ratification of the agreement until the Imperial Conference has been held.

The members are anxious to know whether the British Cabinet was consulted in the negotiations between Washington and Ottawa, and if the United Kingdom will be able, under the agreement, to send its products to the United States at the same tariff rates enjoyed by Canada.

THE AMENDMENTS.

Express Unionists' Regret That Nothing is Done to Consolidate Empire.

London, Feb. 7.—Nearly seven pages of amendments to the address appear in to-day's Parliamentary papers. Norton Griffith, Stately Hill, Viscount Lewisham, Worthington Evans protest against the inadequate consolidation of the different portions of the Empire, and the failure of the Ministers to recognize the nature and gravity of the situation, and the urgency of some steps towards Imperial unity, and regret that there is no mention in the speech of any proposals enabling the overseas Dominions to participate more actively in the general management of the Empire in matters of legislation, administration and defence.

20'000 ARE DEAD FROM PLAGUE

Chinese Government Censoring Despatches—Sweep of Death in Manchuria and China.

London, Feb. 7.—News agency dispatches received from Pekin to-day say that there have been 7,000 deaths from the plague in Manchuria and China. It was learned at the foreign office however, that the code dispatches have been received giving the number of deaths as more than 30,000. This indicates that the Chinese government in censoring press dispatches.

New York, Feb. 7.—600 men, women and children, living in the Williamburg district of Brooklyn, fled from their homes in scant attire today during a fire in the six-storey tenement at 104 Hopkins street. Louis Rapport and his wife, who were asleep on the first floor, narrowly escaped being burned to death.

TOLD OTHERS OF FIENDISH WORK

RUSSIAN DOCTOR WHO MURDERED ON WHOLESALE SCALE BOASTED OF HIS JOBS.

Had Visions of Wealth—He Had Only to Expedite Certain Patients to Get Big Rewards.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—Three witnesses testified to-day that Dr. Pantchenko, accused of poisoning Count Vassili Bouturlin, has told them of his hopes of sudden wealth. A fellow-passenger with the doctor on a trip to Vilna swore that he heard a conversation in French between Pantchenko and Count Patrick O'Brien de Lassy, at a hotel in Vilna, and saw money pass between them. The former told the witness that he was soon to receive $5,000.

Another man who has gone security for some of the defendant's bills, said that Pantchenko told him he was soon to become rich and only needed to "expedite" a certain patient.

A woman witness testified that he told her of the proposed elimination of one or two heirs of a certain millionaire, adding that the affair would bring him several hundred thousand roubles.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1911.

INQUEST OF RURAL SCHOOLS.

Those who are seeking to have the mid-summer vacation period as long in rural districts as in town and cities are pressing a point which might well be conceded to them. There seems little gratification for the custom which has prevailed so long of having country schools reopen earlier after the summer holidays than the public schools in the centres of population. It may have originated in the idea of the country school trustee that boys and girls have but a short time to attend school and that it is discreet to make them put in as many days as possible each year they attend. And this opinion is not without logic. The average boy and girl in the country do not start to school as young as children in the cities who only have a few blocks at most to go and have to face none of the bad roads, deep snow and long journeys that confronts the country pupil. Further, children when they reach the age of fourteen or fifteen are many times obliged to stay at home to help on the farm to "work out" to aid themselves and parents. Not favored with the advantages of a high school or collegiate close at hand, they stop on reaching the fourth or fifth book. Hence the desire of parents is that their boys and girls attend school as many days as possible between the ages of six and fourteen.

On the other hand it is argued by teachers and others who are familiar with the conditions that the hot summer days of August are not conducive to study, that the rural pupil should be out in the open air until September 1st, building up his physical side, instead of being in stuffy school rooms pouring over books on which he finds it hard to fasten his mind. The physical phase of boyhood and girlhood should always be duly considered. Perhaps one explanation why country-bred boys succeed so well after they grow to manhood and go to cities is that they have strong, well developed bodies and brains that are vigorous, clear and not overtaxed with study. They who contend for a longer summer holiday for the rural schools have much good reason on their side.

THE PERISHABILITY OF RICHES.

One of the facilities which the provisions of the Canadian Government Annuities Act affords, is that given to old people of investing their capital with absolute security and safety, and with a much greater return than any other form of investment will give them. A woman of 80 years of age who is living in one of the small villages in Ontario, and who has outlived all her near relatives, has a deposit in the Savings Bank of $1,500, which is all that remains of a very considerable fortune left her by her husband, who predeceased her nearly fifty years ago. This amount is earning her an income of $45 a year, which, needless to say, is not sufficient to provide her with the necessaries of life, and the poor house would ultimately have been her only destiny, as in a little less than six years she would have spent the remainder of her capital, as her living expenses are over $300 a year. One day the little booklet "Comfort and Happiness" found its way into this lady's hands. She perused it carefully and considered its statements thoughtfully, and with the result that she is advised to transfer her $1,500 to the Government. She will then receive an income of $288 every year instead of $45, and the probability is that her life will be very much extended. Certainly her happiness and comfort while she lives will be increased, as the difference of $243 a year in her income will mean to her all the difference between poverty and affluence. She may live to be 100—her paternal grandfather did.

Particulars concerning this provident system of investment may be had from your Postmaster, or from the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa to whom letters may be addressed postage free.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

march by SIR JOHN LAWRENCE, Hewett and Montgomery, while the generosity of Bartle Frere in sending from Scinde regiments he could ill spare should be mentioned in the same breath.

Sammarez's "giant of a fellow" was there, and Archdale Wilson, the commander-in-chief, and Neville Chamberlain, and Baird-Smith, and Harvey Greathed. Inspired by the presence of such men Malcolm entered upon a full account of occurrences at Lucknow, Cawnpore and elsewhere during the preceding month. His hearers were aware of Henry Lawrence's death and the beginning of the siege of Lucknow. They had heard of Maiwand's Ghat, the Well, and Havelock's advance, but they were dependent on native rumor and an occasional spy for their information, and Frank's calm narrative was the first complete and true history that had been given them.

He was seldom interrupted. Occasionally when he was tempted to skur over some of the dangers he had overcome personally, a question from one or other of the five would force him to be more explicit.

Naturally, he spoke freely of the magnificent exploits of Havelock's colonna and he saw Nicholson riding off each engagement, each tremendous march, each fine display of strategic genius on the part of the general, with an approving nod and shake of his great beard.

"You have done well, young man," said General Wilson when Frank's long recital came to an end. "What rank did you hold on General Havelock's staff?"

"That of major, sir."

"You are confirmed in the same rank here. I have no doubt your services will be further recognized at the close of the campaign."

"If Havelock had the second thousand men he asked for he would now be marching here," growled Nicholson.

No one spoke for a little while. The under meaning of the giant's words was plain. Havelock had moved while they stood still. The criticism was a trifle subject, perhaps, but men with Napoleonic ideas are impatient of the limitations that afflict their less powerful brethren. If India were governed exclusively by Nicholsons, Lawrences, Havelocks, Hodsons, and Neills there would never have been a mutiny. It was Britain's rare good fortune that they existed at all and came to the front when the fiery breath of war had scorched and shriveled the nonentities who held power and place at the outbreak of hostilities.

Then some one passed a remark on Frank's appearance. He was bareheaded. The fair hair and blue eyes that had perplexed Chumru looked strangely out of keeping with his brown skin.

"How in the world did you manage to escape detection during your ride north?" he was asked.

He explained Chumru's device, and they laughed. Like Havelock, Baird-Smith thought the Mohammedan would make a good soldier.

"With all his pluck, sir, he is absolutely afraid of using a pistol," said Frank. "He was offered the highest rank as a native officer, but he refused it."

"There, by god, we must make him a sowindar. Tell him I said so and that we all agree on that point."

When Frank gave the message to Chumru it was received with a demoniac grin.

"By the Holy Kaaba," came the gleeful cry, "I told the Moulvie of Fyzabad that I was in the way of earning a jaghir, and behold, it is promised to me!"

Next day Malcolm, somewhat lighter in tint after a hot bath, made himself acquainted with the camp. Seldom has war brought together such a motley assemblage of races as gathered on the Ridge during the siege of Delhi. The far-off isles of the sea were represented by men from every shire, and Britain's mixed heritage in the East met a bewildering variety of types. Small, compactly built, Ghoorkhas bobbobbed with stalwart Highlanders; lively Irishmen made friends of gaunt, saturnine Pathans; bearded Sikhs extended grave courtesies to port-mered Cockneys; "gallant little Welsh" might be seen leading the needs of wounded Mohammedans from the Punjab. The language bar proved no obstacle to the men of the rank and file. A British private would sit and smoke in solemn and friendly silence with a hook-nosed Afghan, and the two would rise cheerfully after an hour passed in that fashion with nothing in common between them save the memory of some deadly thrust averted when they fought one day in the hollow below Hindu Rao's house, or a draught of water tendered when one or other lay gasping and almost done to death in a struggle for the village of Subzee Mundee.

The British soldier, who has fought and bled in so many lands, showed his remarkable adaptability to circumstances by the way in which he made himself at home on the reverse slope of the Ridge. A compact town had sprung up there with its orderly lines of huts and tents, its long rows of picketed horses, commissarial bullocks and elephants, its churches, hospitals, playgrounds, race-course and cemetery.

Malcolm took in the general scheme of things while he walked along the Ridge towards the most advanced picket at Hindu Rao's House. On the left front lay Delhi, beautiful as a dream in the brilliant sunshine. The intervening valley was scarred and riven with water-courses, strewn with rocks, covered with ruined mosques, temples, tombs, and houses, and smothered in an overgrowth of trees, shrubs and long grasses. Roads were few, but tortuous paths ran everywhere, and it was easy to see how the rebels could steal out unobserved during the night and creep close up to the pickets before they revealed their whereabouts by a burst of musketry. Happily they never learnt to reserve their fire. Every man would blaze away at the first alarm, and then, of course, in those days of muzzle-loaders, the more resolute British troops could get to close quarters without serious loss. Still the men who held the Ridge had many casualties, and until Nicholson came the rebel artillery was infinitely more powerful than the British. Behind his movable column, however, marched a strong siege train. When

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 2½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an option of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

AFTER BIG PLUM FOR ONTARIO BANK

LIQUIDATOR WANTS TO SECURE PROPERTY THAT CHARLES McGILL CLAIMED.

An Unusual Legal Mix-Up Presents Itself in the Town of Bowmanville.

The bequest made to the town of Bowmanville in Ontario by the late Jas. H. McGill of Toronto, may not reach that town.... It has got into the hands of the lawyers, and, although it seems at this date very problematical where the plum will fall, one thing is certain, that a large share of it will be consumed by the lawyers.

It will be remembered that the late James H. McGill bequeathed to his wife during her lifetime the McGill Building, Toronto. Under the will, the property upon the death of the widow, which occurred shortly afterwards, was to go to the town of Bowmanville, in which Mr McGill had spent his early years. This disposition of the property was made, it is said, because of the feeling which was aroused in the late Jas. H. McGill's mond by the involvement of his brother, Charles McGill, in the failure of the Ontario Bank, Toronto, but when the town authorities of Bowmanville looked into the matter, they discovered that their municipality had no power to receive bequests. This necessitated their application to the Legislature of Ontario for such power, which was given to them in special legislation.

RELATIVES ASSERT RIGHTS.

Meanwhile Charles McGill and his brother John of Toronto, asserted their right to the property as against Bowmanville, and it looks at present as though the courts here are increasing the legal tangle.

An attachment for $191,045, said to be due the Royal Trust Company of Canada on a judgment secured in Canada against Chas. McGill, late general manager of the Ontario Bank was placed on the property on Monday, Jan. 30. The judgment was procured by the Royal Trust Company, in its capacity as liquidator of the Ontario Bank. Charles McGill, it appears, held 2,008 shares of the bank stock, on which he was found to be liable, under the Canadian law to pay, 99 per cent. of the par value $199,700, which, with the law costs, amount to the sum in the attachment. Charles McGill, however, in 1909 transferred his interest in the McGill building to his daughter, Isabel M. McGill, and recently she and her uncle John McGill, entered suit in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to set aside the devise of the McGill building to the town of Bowmanville. Attorneys Herbert and Micon and A. H. Ferguson, who represent the Royal Trust Co., claim that the transfer to the daughter is invalid under the law, which forbids an alien to purchase real estate in the District of Columbia. Miss McGill being a citizen of Canada. The attachment is to hold against the half-interest of Chas. McGill in the event of the suit to set aside the town of Bowmanville being successful.

HOME FROM WASHINGTON.

Messrs. M. S. L. Richey, the local manager of the Royal Trust Company, and G. B. Strathy, K.C., have returned from Washington, where they succeeded in tying up the property of the late James H. McGill, pending the decision of the American courts as to whether the share claimed by Chas. McGill, shall pass to the Royal Trust Company, liquidators for the ruined Ontario Bank. If their mission proves successful, the bank's shareholders will be relieved to the extent of half of the bequest which was to have gone to the town of Bowmanville.

The bequest of the $160,000 property in Washington to the town of Bowmanville was disqualified by the fact that the intended beneficiary was a foreign corporation. This fact necessitated the disposal of the property in the form of an intestacy, and as Charles McGill and John McGill were the heirs, it appeared natural that their brother's valuable buildings in the American capital should descend to them in equal parts. Then in 1900, Charles McGill transferred his share to his daughter, Isabel McGill of Toronto.

ALLEGED FRAUD.

It was against this latter transaction that the liquidators of the Ontario Bank directed their efforts. Not only was Miss McGill an alien, they argued, but the fact that Charles McGill transferred property to her name at a time when he was a heavy debtor to the bank's liquidators and shareholders constituted an act of fraud.

As matters stand the property is now tied up, or "attached", and it rests with the American courts to determine whether or not the Royal Trust Company—in other words, the shareholders of the bank—is to acquire the estate, devised originally to the widow of the late James H. McGill, then to the town of Bowmanville, later to Charles McGill, and and finally transferred by him to his daughter. The case is an unusual one, and its ultimate disposition is being closely watched.

A LONDON PAPER RAPS THE TARIFF

THE PALL MALL GAZETTE SAYS CANADA CAN BID FAREWELL TO HER GREATNESS.

If Reciprocity Carries—It is Said That Only the Premiers Will Get Invitations to Coronation.

London, Feb. 6.—The Pall Mall Gazette says it is highly significant that in Winnipeg, in many ways the intellectual capital of the Dominion, both parties are viewing the proposed tariff agreement with rising apprehension. Canada must bid a long "farewell to all her greatness," says the article, "and relapse into a state of inprogressive provincialism and become the handmaid of American trusts and be the contributor of the fifty-first star of the flag which will rule the continent.

DONALD McMASTER'S VIEW.

London, Feb. 6.—Donald McMaster, M.P., has returned from a visit to Canada, and in an interview he said he has hopes that the tariff agreement will not pass. As a result of sending produce laterally over the Canadian boundary, certain bad effects will follow for railway securities and other British capital. For these valuable concessions Canada will receive nothing, but the certainty of breaking down the tariff barriers of contiguous countries. It will inevitably help American Imperialism, a most tempting prize from Canada, he said.

London, Feb. 6.—The Canadian Associated Press has high authorities for stating that the only persons in the Dominion who will receive official invitations to the coronation will be the Premier of the Dominion and the Premiers of the Provinces.

A BRITISH BOYCOTT AGAINST LIBERATOR

Edward H. James, of Paris, Who Published Libel on King George, Must Hunt Up a New Printer.

Paris, Feb. 7.—A threatened British boycott has made it necessary for Edward H. James to find another printer for The Liberator.

The printing firm that have been doing the work notified him to-day that they had been informed by a deputation from the British Chamber of Commerce here that if they continued the publication of the paper that had libelled King George, they would cause the establishment to lose other and more important business.

As certain legal formalities must be complied with before a new printer can undertake the work, the next issue of The Liberator probably will be delayed a week.

Settlement of Big Lawsuit Arranged

A lawsuit in which Mr. O. E. Fleming, K.C., Mr. James A. Straitt, of Windsor and Mr. R. The defendants are the McAlpins of New York, formerly millionaire tobacco manufacturers, and the amount claimed by the plaintiffs exceeded $150,000.

WARSAW.

The carnival last Wednesday was a great success in spite of the weather. The ice was perfect and a large number turned out. The costumes were varied as well as brilliant so that the judges were almost at a loss to decide on the best of each class. Not only Warsawites turned out, but loads came from Lakefield and Norwood to see the sport. A high wind blew most of the time, but in spite of the snow and cold the crowd on the ice was very gratifying to the managing committee.

EASY CHANGE.

When Coffee is Doing Harm.

A lady writes from the land of cotton of the results of a four years' use of the food beverage—hot Postum.

"Ever since I can remember we had used coffee three times a day. It had a more or less injurious effect upon us all, and I myself suffered almost death from indigestion and nervousness caused by it.

"I know it was that, because when I would leave it off for a few days I would feel better. But it was hard to give it up, even though I realized how harmful it was to me.

"At last I found a perfectly easy way to make the change. Four years ago I abandoned the coffee habit and began to drink Postum, and I also induced the rest of the family to do the same. Even the children are allowed to drink it freely as they do coffee. And it has done us all great good.

"I no longer suffer from indigestion, and my nerves are in admirable shape since I began to use Postum. We never use the old coffee any more.

"We appreciate Postum as a delightful and healthful beverage, which not only invigorates but supplies the food of nourishment as well." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek.

A Bill to Abolish Church Exemptions

The churches should not be free from tax exemption is the opinion of C. R. McKeown, the M.P.P. from Dufferin, and a bill to that effect will be brought in by him during this session of the local Legislature. This refers to all land covered by and immediately surrounding churches. Mr. McKeown would not have graveyards taxed, but other church property, should, in his opinion, pay its share of the city's burden.

Farmer Evidently Killed for His Money.

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 6.—In a half clinging posture, a deep gash across the forehead, where he had evidently been struck by a blunt instrument, the body of Dolphus Drouillard, a farmer living near River Canars who disappeared under suspicious circumstances on the night of December 5, last, was found by a couple of fishermen yesterday floating against a pile near the Government fish hatchery in the Detroit River.

The pockets were turned inside out and Drouillard's gold watch was gone. Coroner Labelle, who was called, had the body removed to a morgue, in Sandwich and will hold an inquest next Friday night.

When last seen Drouillard was intoxicated. He was known to have had $100 in bills in his pockets.

Friction at Kingston.

Kingston, Feb. 7.—Mayor Graham has had a clash with the City Engineer and the Board of Works. His Worship ordered the street foreman to send out a scraper to clean Princess street. When the engineer arrived on the scene there was a rumpus, and the scraper was ordered back. The chairman of the Board of Works, Ald. T. J. Rigney, has written Mayor Graham a letter politely requesting him to mind his own business.

FIRE BUG CONFESSES.

Admits Charges of Incendiarism and Will be Sentenced Next Week.

L'Original, Ont., Feb. 7.—As a result of investigations which have been carried on since Friday night last by Inspector H. Reburn, of the Attorney-General's Department, Toronto, and which has been instituted in connection with recent incendiary fires in this village, the latest occurring on the night of January 4th, when an unsuccessful attempt was made to destroy the store and out buildings of Mr. B. R. Poulin, general merchant and reeve of L'Original, Edouard Beaulieu, a resident of the village, is now confined in the county jail.

Evidence was so strong against the prisoner that after having been closeted with Inspector Reburn in the latter's rooms at the Ottawa Hotel admitted his guilt and was brought before Magistrate Gauthier, who remanded him to jail for one week, when he will be arranged before the county judge. Great relief is felt among the residents here, now that the mystery has been cleared up, this being the fourth fire of incendiary origin which has occurred in the village within a period of two years.

COCKROACHES IN THE PORRIDGE

Students of Presbyterian College Threaten to Quit in Body Owing to Poor Fare.

Montreal, Feb. 7.—Milk thoroughly watered, meat unfit to eat, cockroaches in the porridge, toast of stale bread made from "shorts," are a few of the complaints which the students of the Presbyterian College advance for their threat to quit in a body unless some change is made. Already they have appealed to the faculty and a strike was averted only because about 20 students refused to join with the others. Riots have occurred on several occasions. Mr. Kerley, the contractor, has charge of the boarding arrangements, getting $3.75 a week from the students, and says he is losing a hundred dollars a year. The students want the system changed.

RELIEF FOR FIREMEN'S WIDOWS.

$204,000 Collected in Chicago to Assist the Families of Dead Firemen.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Two hundred and four thousand dollars has been collected by the Relief Committee for the widows and orphans of the firemen who lost their lives in the stock yards fire last December. The committee will meet to-day to discuss a plan for the distribution of the money. There are nineteen widows and thirty-three orphans of firemen, besides the relatives of the three victims who were not firemen.

ARNOLD THINKS DAUGHTER IS DEAD.

Even If Found, She Can Never Return to Her Home He Declares.

New York, Feb. 8.—Mr. Francis K. Arnold said this morning that even if his daughter Dorothy, missing since December 12, is found at last, it will be impossible for her to return to her home.

His daughter has come in for too much notoriety to take up again her life in New York City, Mr. Arnold explained.

"But I do not think she will ever be found," said Mr. Arnold, who shows more each day the strain of the search for the missing girl, "I believe my daughter is dead."

No Drinking Man Need Despair

MANY SUCCESSFUL CURES IN TORONTO

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the washtub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do to-day!

But this home, which was made a hell on earth through strong drink — as every drunkard's is — may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as the result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down; down, through the curse of drink; then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES, or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man physically and mentally in THREE DAYS' TREATMENT.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

VOL XXXIV NO. 3 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, FRIDAY FEBRUARY 10, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

"WATER FOR ME!" SAID ALD. WM. BULLER LAST NIGHT

"I'm Going to Have Oil on My St." Replied Ald. Brown

THE BOARD OF WORKS IN BUSY BUSINESS SESSION LAST NIGHT

The City Board of Works met last night, when there were present Mayor Morrow, Chairman Ald. Metheral, Aldermen Graham, Duncan, Brown, Buller and Anderson.

Superintending Engineer Chipman reported progress on the construction of the pumping station for the South City sewerage system. Many difficulties have been overcome, and there is no doubt but that this work will be satisfactorily completed. The bottom of the structure is now ready for the installation of machinery. Considering the electric power situation here Mr. Chipman advised the installation of two small pumping units to run continuously, rather than a larger apparatus that runs intermittently. There would have to be two units anyway—one electric, and an auxiliary gasoline machine. He favored the compressed air system, by which there is no probability of a stoppage of sewage occuring, and he named six municipalities using such apparatus that have had no trouble whatever since they installed them some few years ago.

Mr. Chipman had offers for installing the machines, ranging from $1,092 to $1,712 for an air compressor motor, and from $975 to $1,350 for a gasoline machine. The Lancashire, (Eng.) Dynamo and Motor Co. were the lowest tenders for the motor, at $1,092, whilst the Canada Foundry Co., (C.G.E.) were the next lowest, at $1,246, a difference of $154 in favor of the English firm. The Lancashire Dynamo and Motor Co. do not manufacture gasoline apparatus, the lowest tenderer for which was the Canada Foundry Co., at $975.

The committee favored purchasing Canadian machined so that the repairs would be readily accessable if required. Mr. Chipman personally preferred the Vandeleer & Nichols Co's motor at $1,557 for technical reasons not understood by the Committee. The Board would not decide on the question, not being acquainted with the merits or demerits of such apparatus, and, Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Brown,—That this matter be left in the hands of the chairman, the Mayor, Mr. Chipman and the City Engineer.—Carried.

Mr. Chipman said that ejectors will also be required. The machinery will be automatic and will only require attention two or three times a day. The city will also need to supply iron eye beams on which to rest the machinery; these are not specified in the builders' contract.

Ald. Buller enquired why a storage battery could not be installed in place of an auxiliary gasoline engine. Such a battery seems to work in other cases elsewhere.

Mr. Chipman thought this might be looked into; but he was afraid the storage system would be far more expensive than the upkeep of a auxiliary gasoline engine.

Regarding the closing of George street south, at the new pumping station, the committee decided to leave such matters to the discretion of the City Engineer, whose duty it is to safeguard the city against being mulcted for damages for want of adequate protection.

SHERBROOKE ST. GULLEY.

The question of doing something this year in regard to filling in and drain-piping the gulley on the south side of this street, west of Park, again came up. Ald. Methera read the chairman's report of 1910 in this connection, in which he estimated the cost of such work at $660 for the whole street, including drain pipes and catch basins.

Ald. Brown did not see why economy could not be used by filling in with ashes carted from residences and elsewhere at spring cleaning up time.

This proposition did not meet with favor. The engineer intends to use the material gained by cutting down the road for filling in purposes. Besides a man would have to be on the spotto see that carters lived up to their contract.

Ald. Buller—"All carters are honest."

Ald. Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan,—That $130 be appropriated for this work, which will allow of one-half being done this year.—Carried.

Incidentally it might be mentioned that this long-vexed question was overlooked by the Board when estimating what amount of appropriations they would need for the year's demands.

OIL! OIL!! OIL!!!

The question of sprinkling oil on the dust-troubled streets was here raised by Ald. Buller, who wanted to know if this matter had been yet acted upon by the Board.

Chairman Metheral—"Not yet."

Ald. Buller—"I'm going to have water on my street."

Ald. Brown—"I'm going to have oil."

Ald. Buller—"Well, you can have it; but water for me."

This matter was left in abeyance.

MUST CEASE MAKING A SEWER OF PARK ST. DRAIN.

The Engineer reported on property draining into Park street drain, and other dwellings adjacent to sewers draining into them was backyards. There is no sewer on St. Joseph street. The owner of the four-house terrace there would be only too glad of sewer connection, the house at each end has connection, and consequently will not sign the necessary petition.

Ald. Buller—"Anyone facing sewers should be forced to connect with the same."

The Board will probably give notice of its intention to construct a sewer on St. Joseph street.

Ald. Brown moved, seconded by Ald. Buller,—That entrances draining into Park street be notified by the City Engineer to disconnect and connect with sewers where there are sewers.—Carried.

The Board is in the humor to force sewer connection by property facing sewers if such can be legally done.

STREETS NOT DEFINED.

Chairman Metheral read an advice from the City Solicitor that Rink and Crescent streets are not shown on the original plan of Peterborough drawn on August 6th, 1864, at that time the town did not extend south of Townsend street. There is a piece of land at Rink and Crescent streets—properly city property—but which is being used by the McDonald people who will in time acquire its ownership by right of possession unless the city acts to protect its interests.

The Mayor—"All we want is an acknowledgement from the McDonald estate, in the way of a nominal rent of say $1 a year, that this land is city property.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan,—That the Solicitor take the necessary steps to protect the city's interests in this connection.—Carried.

Chairman Metheral reported that, in his estimation, there is no danger of a flood next spring on Bethune street, as complained of by Mr. Head

Chaffman Metheral reported that the Navigation Company's tool house on Mark street adjacent to the new wharf, could be removed readily, this time of the year, a little eastward on to what he thinks is the company's own property. They should be notified to take this course.

The Clerk was instructed to write the company to this effect.

HOLIDAYS FOR THE ENGINEER.

Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Anderson,—That Engineer Hay be allowed two weeks holidays by arrangement with the chairman.—Carried.

The Italian saw this, and withdrew. When the marines got on the street, one of the crowd struck Hardie and escaped.

Religion in the Schools Stop Sectarian Teaching

DEPUTATION COMPLAINING TO HON. R. A. PYNE.

Of State of Public School Affairs in Section 8, Otonabee—Also Tiny Township.

Toronto, Feb. 9.—The whole question of religious instruction in the Public Schools was raised by a deputation that called on Hon. R. A. Pyne, Minister of Education, to-day, to protest against the action of a teacher in the Public school in section No. 8, of Otonabee township, in teaching and permitting the teaching of Roman Catholic catechism and prayers to the children, many of whom were Protestants.

J. H. Burnham and James Thompson, of Peterborough, representing the Protestant ratepayers of No. 8 Otonabee, with T. B. Collins, of Millbrook, and William Banks, sr., of Toronto, representing the Legislation Committee of the Provincial Grand Lodges of Ontario East and Ontario West, composed the deputation which interviewed the case.

They called the Minister's attention to the condition of things that prevailed in the Otonabee Township Public school, and requested that religious teaching in schools be stopped. Just what they want by this is not apparent, for it was agreed that the reading of the Lord's Prayer and a portion of the Scripture was desirable. In the case of the Otonabee school the parish priest was a frequent visitor, and they claimed that his addresses gave an air and flavor of Roman Catholicism to the whole school.

Dr. Pyne promised to investigate the case or any other case where he had been shown that the school regulations had been violated by teachers giving or permitting the giving of certain instructions.

ALSO IN TINY TOWNSHIP.

In connection with the charges that similar irregularities were occurring in Tiny Township, the Minister said the case was under investigation. The public school inspector under whose jurisdiction the school is, had been summoned to Toronto to give an explanation.

MR. STRATTON AND THE FARMERS' BANK.

In the evening papers appears a news item of which more or less display is made according as animous is a factor in the situation, to the effect that Hon. J. R. Stratton has been served with a summons, making charges in connection with the obtaining of the Charter of the Farmers' Bank and with the advance of money on the security of notes through the Trusts & Guarantee Company of which he is president.

The Times is informed that the charges are not personal, as against Mr. Stratton as President of the Trusts & Guarantee Company and that any [illegible] responsibility comes to him [illegible] upon the accident of his being at the head of the Company.

The Times is pleased to be further informed, on good authority, that when the matter comes to investigation, as it will do on Friday, February 17th, it can and will be explained so as to relieve Mr. Stratton from the charges made, to the satisfaction, not only of his friends, but even of those who make his prominence in financial and public affairs a conspicuous object of not always friendly attention.

POLICE AFTER DARING BODY SNATCHERS

THE PLAGUE IN PEKIN.

Pekin, Feb. 9.—Several cases of bubonic plague have been discovered in the Northern district army barracks of the outer city. There are over 2,000 soldiers in the Cantonments and a sweep of the disease would bring death in appalling numbers. The plague germs are said to have been brought in by soldiers who were doing duty in Tien Tsin.

METAL CASKET WAS VERY HEAVY

FOUR MEN WOULD HAVE BEEN REQUIRED TO GET IT AWAY.

Pried Open the Lids—Tore Away the Shrouds in Order to Get Good Look at Faces of the Dead.

Erie, Pa., Feb. 9.—That the ghouls who broke into the magnificent marble and granite mausoleum of the Scott family in Erie cemetery and stole the body of Mrs. Anna M. McCullom, sister-in-law of the late Wm. L. Scott, will demand ransom for its return, was the theory upon which the police and detectives bent every energy to-day.

POLICE TAKE UP CASE.

Private detectives were rushed into Erie to-day following the discovery of the work of the ghouls and the entire city and county authorities are engaged in a search not only for the vandals but for the body as well.

Three coffins had been drawn from their crypts, the heavy bronze doors being broken open with chisels, and the lids pried off by the vandals in their search for the coffin containing the body of Mrs. McCullom.

The robbers had practically wrecked the interior of the magnificent edifice and had worked unmindful of the sanctity of the dead, tearing off parts of the shroud of one body in order to get a better look at the face.

IT WAS HEAVY WORK.

The police declared to-day that at least four strong, ablebodied men, were implicated as it would require that many to carry the heavy, copper sheathed coffin containing the woman.

The Scott mausoleum is one of the show places of the cemetery and only absence of visitors during the bad weather kept the crime from being discovered sooner. The authorities say that it may have been committed a month ago.

When daylight broke ropes were stretched around the mausoleum to hold in check hundreds of curious sightseers.

Just when the vault was broken into has not been determined, as no person paid strict attention to it. Statements of the family that it was intact three or four days ago are the only way the detectives working on the case have of fixing the time.

THE COFFINS DRAWN FROM THE CRYPTS AND THE BRONZE DOORS WERE FORCED OPEN.

Quarter of a Century Since Such Excitement Prevailed—Believe Body is Held for Ransom.

Erie, Pa., Feb. 9.—Body snatching that may equal the daring ghouls who stirred the country more than a quarter of a century ago, when the body of A. T. Stewart, New York's pioneer merchant, was stolen, has stirred this section of Pennsylvania in indignation at its daring as nothing has since the sensational kidnapping which occurred in this vicinity a few years ago.

The mausoleum of one of the most prominent families of this section of the State was desecrated sometime between Monday and yesterday afternoon. A body is missing from the vault of the family of the late Congressman William L. Scott. The police of the neighboring cities and communities within 400 miles have been notified of the crime.

The discovery was made by two women walking through the Erie Cemetery. The family was immediately notified, and a watch was placed in the cemetery at midnight after all assurances were made that the missing body was not in the vicinity.

Details of Erie police kept watch at the tomb during the night to greet the body snatchers should they return. The only disturbance they met was from newspaper men early this morning, who were ordered from the cemetery at the point of revolvers.

While the police have been informed of the grave robbing no name is attached to the missing body by them. The first information to the public came from the family, but again no name is given. It is known however, that the body taken by the ghouls is that of Mrs. McCollum, a sister-in-law of the late Mr. Scott. The police believe the body is being held for ransom, and that the vandals also intended to carry away the bodies of the millionaire and his wife.

Investigation showed that the casket containing the body of Mrs. McCollum had been carried away. The caskets are sealed in a wall and a chisel had been used in breaking the seals, before the metallic box could be carried away. This casket was the first on the lower tier at the north side of the mausoleum, and directly opposite it on the second tier is the caskets containing the bodies of Mrs. Scott and the millionaire, who built the mausoleum.

The seal here was also broken and the tomb was examined it was found that this casket was half-way out, and to all appearances was ready to be carried away. The remains of the millionaire were lying next to those of his wife, but his casket was not disturbed. A number of palms stored in the mausoleum had been broken down and two other caskets were broken into, but no attempt was made to carry either of them away.

Obstinate Open Sores Are Healed by Zam-Buk.

For sores which defy all ordinary remedies, Zam-Buk should be tried. Old wounds, varicose ulcers, cold cracks, blood-poisoning and chronic skin diseases cannot resist the healing influence of this great herbal balm.

Miss Alma Bourque, of Notre Dame Kent Co., N.B., gives the following account of what Zam-Buk did for her after various other ointments and salves had failed. She writes:

"For months I suffered with a running sore on my leg. I tried several ointments and salves, but none of them could bring about a cure. The sore would just heal over, and then break out again. I read in a newspaper, one day, of the good Zam-Buk had done, and so I determined to try it and see what this balm would do for me. I also purchased some Zam-Buk Soap.

"I washed the sore night and morning with the soap, and then applied the balm. I continued with this treatment and after using Zam-Buk for a few weeks the sore was completely healed. I have recommended Zam-Buk to one or two of my friends for sores, and in their cases it has been equally effective."

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c box or may be had post free from Zam-Buk Co., for price. It is a sure cure for piles, inflamed places, cuts, burns, scalds, chapped hands, ulcers, eczema, scalp sores, and all similar diseases and injuries. Refuse harmful imitations.

Chased Japanese Off Ranch.

Delta, Colo., Feb. 8.—Opposition to the employment of Japanese labor in the orchards of Western Colorado came to a head Monday night, when night riders visited the camp of the Japanese employed in setting out fruit trees at a ranch near here, and drove them off, warning them not to return on pain of death. The Japanese left the ranch.

How to cure a cold is a question in which many are interested just now. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has won its great reputation and immense sale by its remarkable cure of colds. It can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

Mr. Justice Lafontaine Thinks That it Ought to be Prohibited.

Montreal, Feb. 7.—Mr. Justice Lafontaine, in his capacity as Commissioner of the Catholic School Board of Montreal, appeared before the Royal Commission on Industrial Training, at their closing session at the Monument National, Saturday night. The principal point discussed by Mr. Lafontaine was child labor, which he thought ought to be prohibited not only infactories, but generally, so as to cover shops and offices.

THE MORNING TIMES

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1911.

CONSERVATION OF HUMAN LIFE.

One must yield to the temptation to muse upon the inconsistencies of human nature. The conservation of natural resources is an important subject. The more they are conserved the better for the country; but it is rather a strange thing that when the Minister of Labor, Hon. Mackenzie King, introduces a bill to do away with the evils resulting from the manufacture of matches with white phosphorous, although it is a matter of the conservation of human life, he is met with the objection that it is an invasion, first, of personal rights, and, second, of provincial rights. These are not to be ignored, but the rights of the man or woman who does the work to protection of life would appear to be paramount.

In introducing the bill, Mr. King pointed out that it was not intended to embarrass any industry, but was only for the purpose of staving off a noxious disease, necrosis or "phossy jaw," which is caused by the phosphorus attacking a person through the teeth. The poisonous fumes of the phosphorus, by slow degrees, crumble the teeth away until gradually the rest of the jaw is affected, and in the end the whole jaw is crumbled to pieces. The minister informed the House that the first action of the disease was to cause sore jaws, and that people with decayed teeth were predisposed to the malady. The teeth then began to fall out and the jaw to crumble. Gradually also the door was opened to other noxious diseases, until in the end the patient very often died as an effect of the fumes of the white sulphur on his or her system. The French Government had had the first experience of the disease and two Frenchmen had found a substitute for the phosphorus which was called sesque sulphide, and could be used in the manufacture of matches as well, if not better, than the phosphorous, without in the least endangering the lives of the persons actively engaged in the work of manufacture. Germany, France, Holland and several of the other larger countries of Europe, and, finally, Britain herself, had, through the International Labor Convention, agreed to do away with the use of phosphorus and had prohibited the importation and sale of matches manufactured from white phosphorus. "Many of the British possessions have taken the same action in the matter as the mother country," averred Mr. King, "and Canada has lately been notified by the British Government and, through Earl Grey, invited to become a member of the compact."

BANK INSPECTION.

The action of the Traders Bank at Toronto, taking the initiative for an efficient independent audit is a step that will strengthen the institution in the eyes of the public, and no doubt other banks will follow. The revelations which have been made in connection with the Farmers' Bank have given rise to the opinion that a more thorough and efficient inspection than now provided for by the Bank Act should be conducted. At the same time, as the directors stated, an audit which was not carefully and reliably done would have a tendency to injure the credit of a bank, especially when it carried Government sanction. A bank, of all financial institutions, should have the complete confidence of the public and its books should bear the closest scrutiny when responsible Government officials are selected for inspection purposes. The failure of two banks in Canada and of several loan companies have to a degree unsettled the average mind. A bank which declares its willingness to have its books subjected to an independent audit is doing much to encourage depositors.

Young Mr. and Mrs. McLean of Washington are making a good deal of noise about the Hope diamond which has recently come into their possession. It is not likely that they will mention it with much emphasis when the tax assessor calls.

that arrived [illegible] gunners could make their presence felt. Thus ran [illegible] one of the enemy's guns had been dismounted.

Frank had ocular proof of their strength in this arm before he reached Hindu Rao's house. The Guides, picturesque in their loose, gray-colored shirts and big turbans, sent one of their cavalry squadrons over the Ridge on some errand. They moved at a sharp canter, but the Delhi gunners had got the range and were ready, and half a dozen eighteen-pound balls crashed into the trees and rocks almost in the exact line of advance. A couple of guns on the British right took up the challenge, and the duel went on long after the Guides were swallowed up in the green depths of the valley.

At last Malcolm stood in the shelter-trench of the picket and gazed at the city which was the hub of the Mutiny. Beyond the high, red-brick walls he saw the graceful dome and minarets of the Jumma Muajid, while to the left towered the frowning battlements of the King's palace. To the left again, and nearer, was the small dome of St. James's Church with its lead roof riddled then, as it remains to this day, with the bullets fired by the rebels in the effort to dislodge the ball and cross which surmounted it. For the rest his eyes wandered over a noble array of mosques and temples, flat-roofed houses of nobles of the court and residences of the wealthy merchants who dwelt in the imperial city.

The far-flung panorama behind the walls had a curiously peaceful aspect. Even the puffs of white smoke from the guns, curling upwards like tiny clouds in the lazy air, had no tremors until a heavy shot hurtled overhead or struck a resounding blow at the already ruined walls of the big house near the post.

The 61st were on picket that day, and one of the men, speaking with a strong Gloucestershire accent, said to Malcolm:

"Well, sur, they say we'll be a-lootin' there soon."

"I hope so," was the reply, but the phrase set him a-thinking.

Within that shining palace most probably was a woman to whom he owed his life. In another palace, many a hundred miles away, was another woman for whom he would willingly risk that life if only he could save her from the fate that the private of the 61st was gloating over in anticipation.

What a mad jumble of opposites was this useless and horrible war! At any rate why could not women be kept out of it and let men adjust their quarrel with the stern arbitrament of sword and gun!

Then he recalled Chumru's words anent the Princess Roshinara, and the fancy seized him that if he were destined to enter Delhi with the besiegers he would surely strive to repay the service she had rendered Winifred and Mayne and himself at Bithoor.

That is the way man proposes and that is why the gods smile when they dispose of man's affairs.

CHAPTER XV.

At the King's Court

Without guns to breach the walls, even the heroic Nicholson was powerless against a strongly fortified city.

The siege train was toiling slowly across the Punjab, but the setting in of the monsoon rendered the transit of heavy cannon a laborious task.

On the 24th of August an officer rode in from the town of Baghput, twenty-five miles to the north, to report that the train was parked there for the night.

"What sort of escort accompanies it?" asked Nicholson, when the news reached him.

"Almost exclusively natives and few in number at that," he was told.

An hour later a native spy from Delhi came to the camp.

"The mutineers are mustering for a big march," he said. "They are providing guns, litters, and commissariat camels, and the story goes that they mean to fight the Feringhis at Bahadurgarh."

The place named was a large village, ten miles northwest of the ridge, and Nicholson guessed instantly that the sepoys had planned the daring coup of cutting off the siege train. With him, to hear was to act. He formed a column of two thousand men and a battery of field artillery and left the camp at dawn on the 25th. If a forced march could accomplish it, he meant not only to frustrate the enemy's design but to inflict a serious defeat on them.

Malcolm went with him and never had he taken part in a harder day's work. The road was a bullock track, a swamp of mud amid the larger swamp of the ploughed land and jungle. Horses and men floundered through it as best they might. The guns often sank almost to the trunnions; many a time the infantry had to help elephants and bullocks to haul them out.

In seven hours the column only marched nine miles, and then came the disheartening news that the spy's information was wrong. The rebels had, indeed, sent out a strong force, but they were at Nujufgarh, miles away to the right.

Officers and men ate a slight meal, growled a bit, and swung off in the new direction. At four o'clock in the afternoon they found the sepoy army drawn up behind a canal, with its right protected by another canal, and the centre and left posted in fortified villages. Evidently, too, a stout serai, or inn, a square building surrounding a quadrangle set apart for the lodgment of camels and merchandise was regarded as a stronghold. Here were placed six guns and the walls were loopholed for musketry.

In a word, had the mutineers been equal in courage and morale to the British troops, the resultant attack must have ended in disastrous failure.

But Nicholson was a leader who took the measure of his adversaries. Above all, he did not shirk a battle because it was risky.

The 61st made a flank march, forded the branch canal under fire and were ordered to lie down. Nicholson rode up to them, a commanding figure on a seventeen-hands English hunter.

"Now, 61st," he said, "I want you to take that serai and the guns. You all know what Sir Colin Campbell told you at Chillianwallah, and you have heard that he said the same thing at the battle of the Alma. 'Hold your fire until you see the whites of their eyes,' he [illegible] ers, we

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an option of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

GOLD BELT ACROSS DOMINION! DOMINION GOLD MINES, LIMITED

It is becoming more evident continually that that part of the Dominion covered by the granites and schists of the Laurentian formation is heavily mineralized, wherever there are unions with the Huronian rock or where quartz or other veins are interposed. St. Francis Beauce, Porcupine Cobalt, Bruce, Ont., and Sturgeon Lake are proof spots of this theory, corresponding to the test probings of diamond drills in a mining claim.

This last locality has received but slight attention as yet in the newspapers, though a good deal of successful development has been done on the spot. The lake itself is connected at its south end with Port William by a branch of the Grand Trunk and runs an irregular, greatly indented course, amid capes and islands over 40 miles to the north, where it is only eight miles away from the Transcontinental line of the same railway. Gold is found over a wide stretch of the country about the upper end, and several opening have been made with excellent prospects in nearly every case. The Dominion Gold Mines, Limited, control six claims, covering 220 acres of land generally heavily timbered. That locality gives the lie direct to any but the most extravagant theories regarding the extent of the pulpwood reserves of that Dominion, being covered with spruce of good size and quality. At the present it looks as though the fate of all the timber within the sight is to fill the stokehole of power-producing boilers. There is enough of it in sight to drive drills and mills for many a decade of years.

EXPERT OPINION.

During the week Mr. Beidelman, a mining engineer and prospector of very wide experience, extending from James Bay to Mexico, from British Columbia through all the mining states of the West, told The Standard something of what he had himself seen in the Sturgeon Lake, or Thunder Bay district.

"In all my experience, I have never seen more gold showing at the surface," he said. "The geological stratum is perpendicular, as a rule, and the vertical fissures, which are numerous, are all heavily mineralized, the ore being generally copper pyrites bearing gold. The Keewatin runs in veins, from a foot and a half up to some feet in width. Where the Dominion Gold Mines, Limited, are working, for instance, they have two parallel veins of good ore, only a few feet apart, and the rock between the two veins is full enough of mineral to make it a good low-grade proposition. It is to get out this matter and mill it that the company is offering 200,000 shares for sale at a very low figure in Montreal. A mill will have to be built, and the material reduced to a condition of readiness for refining, though I believe the cyanide process could be applied right on the spot."

From the general excellence of the assays made by the Dominion Government analyst, Dr. J. T. Donald, and Mr. W. W. Bennet, assayer to the U. S. Steel Corporation, which shows results ranging from never below $17 up to $424 a ton in gold, it will be seen that there is no doubting the presence of the precious metal in paying quantities. The specimens dealt with were not hand-selected chips, of which the Standard has seen many from that section of much greater richness, but good-sized blocks, representative of the whole texture of the veins.

It is clear that Canada is to have her reputation established as a land of gold by a widely-dispersed series of gold camps. It is many years—60 at least—since Nova Scotia astonished the world by stories of gold discoveries. Northern Quebec is still to have her possibilities developed. The Peace River and Rocky Mountain section s have shown mineral for many years, and so the band of gold which weds the East and West is probably about to be proved to be a reality. Ontario is having a wonderful development, and the new camp at Sturgeon Lake will add greatly to her wealth. Only the future can make it clear, whether the banner agricultural province is to maintain the position she at present promises to fill, of being also in mineral production.

THINKS CANADA IS PREMATURE

JOS. CHAMBERLAIN DISAPPOINTED AT THE REACHING OF RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT WITH U.S.

Ready to Make an Offer—British Tariff Commission Almost Prepared to Submit Preference Plan.

London, Feb. 8.—Joe Chamberlain has written the following letter to the chairman and members of the Tariff Commission:

"Gentlemen,—I learn the Tariff Commission will meet on Thursday for further consideration of the report on the preference which they have drawn up in response to a request made by me in a letter of November 5th. When this is completed we shall have provided all that is requisite for working out a scheme of preference for our dominions across the seas. I am more than ever convinced that without the preference we cannot hope to maintain and develop the unity of the Empire. Since the Tariff Commission first undertook its work, however, we have had to take account of new arrangements with foreign countries, and now have to consider the proposed reciprocity agreement with the United States. Without pressing an offer of advice to the people of Canada about their own affairs, I cannot help feeling that they are rather premature. I wish they might at least have waited till the meeting of the Imperial Conference, when an opportunity for discussing the principle of such Imperial importance with the representatives of the other self-governing dominions would have presented itself.

"It should not be lost sight of that the ratification of this agreement would mean a radical change in the policy of Canada, which hitherto has been an independent nation."

Austen Chamberlain arguing for the Opposition amendments in the Commons to-day, said that the reciprocity agreement removed Canada from the Imperial orbit, and drew her into the vortex of continental politics and the interests of the United States.

One immediate result would be that food in England would cost more. Was the Government, he asked taking steps to secure the British manufacturers the same right of entry to the markets of the United States, which the Canadian Ministers were securing for Canadian goods?

The former Chancellor added that the agreement would have far-reaching effects, not only upon the Dominion, but upon the whole Empire and particularly on the relations which had prevailed up to the present time between Canada and the United Kingdom.

HID IN STRAW MOW AND WAS BADLY FROZEN.

Barnado Boy Buried Himself for Three Days, Following Reprimand.

Shelburne, Feb. 8.—A boy from Dr. Barnado's Home, Peter street, Toronto, had a trying experience from Thursday until Sunday last, during which time he lay buried in the straw mow in Thomas Curphy's barn, a Melancthon farmer, just west of here. The boy had been in the employ of Mr. Curphy for about one month, and, upon being reprimanded for ill-using the horses, he hid himself in the straw mow. Mr. Curphy and family made diligent search for the lad without avail, but on Sunday morning the boy managed to creep out of his rigid quarters, where he had been buried down some five feet in the straw. His feet and hands were terribly frozen, and he was carried to the house, where he was partially thawed out. The home was communicated with and a medical inspector arrived on the first train, and after treating the frozen lad, returned with him on the evening Train to Toronto. The boy claims to be 17 years of age, although very small in size and apparently poorly informed for that age.

While in the district the inspector visited another home boy living with Mr. Smith, four miles west of here, who is very ill with appendicitis, and it is feared an operation will have to be performed.

A Heavy Fine.

The fine of $20 recently imposed on Patrick Hogan, proprietor of the Albion Hotel, East City, has been increased to $100 by Magistrate Rumble, the latter amount being the maximum fine. Laid at Rest.

The remains of the late James Grady, whose demise was announced in a former issue, were laid to rest yesterday morning.

Among the many floral designs was one of a beautiful cross by P.C.I. pupils. The pall bearers were Frank and Willie Grady, Frank and Leo Cassidy, cousins of the deceased, Cecil Wolfe and James Milroy, two P.C.I. students. Rev. Father McCauley sang requiem high mass and Rev. Father O'Brien officiated at the grave.

Bishop O'Connor to Appoint.

Catholic Register: Rt. Rev. Richard A. O'Connor, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough, is the senior Bishop of the Kingston Province and now that the Kingston Metropolitan See is vacant, it is his function to make all the provisions for its being filled. It is said that none of the Bishops in the Province will consent to a promotion to the Archiepiscopal seat; Bishop O'Connor would not go fourteen years ago, and he has stronger objections to the change to-day. Therefore, it is more than probable that some prominent cleric will be promoted from the priestly ranks and elevated to the Metropolitancy of the Province.

Organization Meeting.

The Y.M.C.A. have for some time conducted a Normal Class for Sunday school teachers, with its members confined to young men. There have been numerous inquiries for a similar class for the ladies, but it was a question in the minds of the officers, whether such a move would be acceptable to the Sabbath School Association. At the last meeting of the executive of the latter association the question was brought up and it was unanimously decided that such a class would be acceptable and the general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. was appointed to conduct a Teacher Training class for the Sabbath School Association of this city. The organization meeting of this class will be held in the parlors of the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon at 4 o'clock. It is hoped that every teacher in the city who can attend this first meeting, will do so.

THE RADIAL RAILWAY.

New Cars Likely to be Purchased This Year.

The summer trade, it is expected, will this year be greater than ever, as is natural, with the rapidly increasing population. Peterborough has no reason to be ashamed of her street railway.

Make Butter Part of Time.

Lakefield, Feb. 8.—At a meeting of the farmers of this district called for the purpose of considering the advisability of making butter or cheese the coming season, it was unanimously decided to manufacture butter three days in the week, commencing in April. The manufacture of cheese will commence about the first of May.

FEAR PLAGUE WILL SPREAD TO EUROPE.

London Papers Join in Pleas for More Stringent Precautions.

London, Feb. 8.—Owing to the alarming reports concerning the spread of the plague in China, the London papers to-day join in a plea for more stringent precautions throughout Europe.

Pekin, Feb. 9.—The Russian legation has received advices that forty-nine deaths as a result of the plague occurred at Tsitsikar on Sunday. Previous reports from there indicated that the situation had improved, but this shows a sudden recrudescence.

Reports received from other railway points in northern Manchuria indicates that the plague is rapidly spreading along the Russian lines.

Confidential reports received in medical circles here reveal the fact that conditions at Tien Tsin are becoming worse with alarming rapidity, there having been fifteen deaths in the last five days.

The utter absence of any intelligent inspection and the inadequate medical organization makes each succeeding case a new focus, since there is no isolation to prevent contact and the medical force is weakened.

The leading physicians have gone to Manchuria and the chief reliance is placed upon the young medical students of Tien Tsin.

The plague is now menacing Peking the capital. There were two deaths here yesterday. Both the plague victims were recent Tien Tsin arrivals. There is no quarantine here and no inspection of incoming passengers.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Listowel, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m., on Monday, February 27, 1911, for the erection of a Public Building at Listowel, Ont.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amount necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

It is expected that fifty thousand persons will gather to witness the fireworks and take part in the merry-making at the costliest christening that has ever taken place in England.

CHARGED WITH MURDERING CHILD

YOUNG WOMAN, WHO WAS IN TORONTO THREE WEEKS AGO, IS ACCUSED OF INFANTICIDE.

...by Frozen to Death—Handkerchief In Its Mouth Stifled Its Cries—Case to Come Up Monday.

Collingwood, Feb. 10.—This town has startled to-day by the arrest of Pearl Smith, a young girl of 20 or ... years, on the charge of murdering her babe.

Pearl was employed in Owen Sound ... some time and was arrested there as a vagrant. Later she went to the Salvation Army Maternity Home and returned to Collingwood three months ago, bringing her babe with her. A few days since, a child said to be hers, was found in the ice among some willow trees, where it had evidently been left to freeze to death. A handkerchief in its mouth had actually stifled its cries.

The accused girl is the daughter of Jarvis Smith, a meat packer in the west end of the town. It is said that when in Toronto she went by the name of Anderson or Johnson. She came up for a preliminary hearing to-day, and the case was adjourned till Monday.

WILD MAN CAPTURED

He Lived in Crevice in Rock and Subsisted on Raw Food.

Fort William, Feb. 9.—John Beck, aged about 40, who has been living as a wild man since the winter of 1907, has been caught and taken to Kenora, where he will be put in an institution for the violently insane.

His refuge, a crevice in the rock, about twenty miles from the nearest dwelling about Vermilion Bay, was known to construction men on the G. T. P. They were afraid of him. He was fleet of foot and as wary as a fox, never allowing a human being to approach him.

He has been wild since he lost part of his hands while dynamiting for fish. When found he was clothed in rudely made coat and trousers of skins. In his crevice were found a pile of dried leaves, two or three dried skins and a pile of stones.

He lived on raw fish, rabbits and fowl, which he snared or killed with stones or clubs.

TORONTO WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH

MRS. ANDREWS OF 162 SHERIDAN AVENUE DROPPED A LAMP IN HER HOME.

Where She Lived Alone—When the Neighbors Saw the Flames It was Too Late to Save Her.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—At her home, 162 Sheridan avenue, Mrs. Matilda Andrews, sixty-five years of age was burned to death last night about 7 o'clock.

Since the death of her husband in December Mrs. Andrews has lived alone in the old house, a landmark of the neighbourhood, and it is presumed that she fell while carrying a lamp.

Shortly before 7 o'clock, Andrew Anderson, who lives at 167 Sheridan avenue, noticed smoke and flames belching forth from the house. He secured an entrance to the building and passing through the front hall attempted to go into the dining room, but was driven back by the flames.

The attention of Mr. John E. Flowers, a neighbor of Mrs. Andrews, had in the meantime been attracted by the smoke and fire, and he turned in an alarm. When Lieutenants Hamilton and Coulter arrived they forced an entry and found the body of the woman lying on its face in the dining room. The wearing apparel had been burnt to a crisp and the body was charred.

The firemen removed the body to a front room and it was later under the orders of Chief Coroner Johnson sent to the morgue, where an inquest will be held to-day.

Mrs. Andrews leaves a son, W. Varey 59 Rupert street, and a daughter, who is married, living in Cooksville. Wm. Andrews of Greenwood-avenue is a stepson.

HAS NATIONALIST LEADER RESIGNED?

IT IS SAID IN MONTREAL THAT BOURASSA HAS QUIT PROVINCIAL POLITICS.

Hopes to Hold Balance Some Day Between the Two Parties at Ottawa, According to Despatch.

Montreal, Feb. 10.—A despatch received here to-day states that the Nationalist Leader, Henri Bourassa, has handed in his resignation to Speaker Pelletier, of Quebec Legislature. Color is given to the story by the fact that Bourassa has been in the House only twice during the past month, and on both occasions was only a casual visitor, taking no part whatever in the debate.

It is equally noticeable that daily editorials from his pen touch solely upon issues of national scope, which are removed from the arena of Provincial politics.

It is common talk in political circles here that Bourassa has aspirations to return to the Ottawa House thinking that as a leader of the Nationalist party, he might some day hold the balance of power between the Conservative and Liberal bodies.

Mr. Omer Geroux, chief editor of Le Devoir, and Mr. Bourassa's right hand man in Montreal, refused absolutely to discuss the policy of the Nationalist party in regard to reciprocity in the absence of his chief. He could not state whether the Quebec Nationalist movement would be against reciprocity or not. "You will have to ask Mr. Bourassa about that. I cannot say anything as to the policy of the party," he said.

Says Radium Will Supersede Coal

Professor Bachereri of Bonn University, Makes An Interesting Prediction.

New York, February 11.—Scientists will soon make the problem of the conservation of the world's coal a dead issue, according to Dr. A. H. Bucherer, Professor of Physics, in the University of Bonn, Germany, who is in this country for a series of lectures before scientific bodies. Radium, Dr. Bucherer believes, will supersede coal as the source of the world's energy and heat.

A CARLOAD OF LIQUOR SEIZED

THE PROVINCIAL POLICE GET 150 CASES OF WHISKEY AND A LOT OF BEER.

Destined for Blind Pigs—The License Department Will Try to Find Who Shipped the Stuff.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—The biggest single seizure of liquor ever made in Northern Ontario was made by the Provincial Police near Cochrane this morning. It consisted of a carload of the forbidden goods, 150 cases of whiskey and the rest beer. The shipment was obviously intended for distribution among the blind piggers in the district. The constables had a tip that a large shipment was coming and to get it they had to lie in the woods for two nights with the temperature at about forty below zero.

Word of the seizure was sent to the Provincial secretary this morning, and he immediately conferred with his deputy, S. A. Armstrong. Eudo Saunders, Chief License Officer, and Joseph Rogers, Superintendent of Provincial Police. The Department is putting up a strong fight against the importation of liquor into the prohibited districts and every possible device has been adopted to evade the police. Liquor has been shipped in as gasoline and every other commodity. The idea of sending in a whole carload, which would be sealed, is a new idea. Only the bare report of the seizure has been sent to headquarters and it is not known where the car was shipped from. Sealed cars like that cannot be examined by the T. and N. O. officials, and it is now the work of the license department to find out who the shippers were.

Insure Fall Fairs Against the Weather

Devote Part of the Annual Grant From the Legislature for That Purpose, Says Ontario Association.

Toronto, Feb. 10.—A resolution to ask the Legislature to devote part of the annual grant to fall fairs to a system of insurance against loss in rainy weather was the chief business transacted at the meeting of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions yesterday afternoon and evening. A proposal to this effect was adopted. Several hundred delegates were present, the biggest court room in the City Hall being packed to overflowing.

This body meets each year to elect officers and discuss matters of common interest. Mr. H. J. Gould, of Uxbridge, presided, and Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of societies for the Department of Agriculture, is secretary.

Hon. J. S. Duff was in the chair for a short time last night. The session will conclude to-day.

Mr. H. J. Gould, the president, in his address, expressed himself as strongly opposed to the feature which is known as the Midway. To his mind it was neither useful nor ornamental and in some cases actually immoral.

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, the superintendent and secretary, in his report, remarked that exhibitions formed a great clearing house for all the agricultural associations of the Province. He hoped the time would come when judges would have to pass an examination and receive a diploma.

A heated discussion on the subject of allowing gambling devices on exhibition grounds came up. Several speakers declared that the department had been known to license gambling concessions with a view to removing responsibility from the Fair Directors. It was maintained, on the other hand, that directors could not be held responsible for men who entered the grounds and displayed gambling devices without their knowledge or consent.

SIXTY YEARS AGO

INTERESTING TALK BY COL. NEIL MACNAUGHTON.

Dealing With the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham Those Counties were Organized in 850.

Lieut.-Col. Neil F. MacNaughton, County Clerk and Treasurer of Northumberland and Durham, gave an address of a highly interesting nature to the members of the Counties' Council at the recent sitting at Cobourg. Col. MacNaughton reviewed in a very able manner the municipal history of the two counties and also touched upon the early history of the Newcastle district. He pointed out that the Council of the District of Newcastle first met on Tuesday, Feb. 8, 1842, and consisted of eighteen members, Mr. Walter Boswell being the first Warden and was appointed under Royal Warrant. Morgan Jellett was appointed District Clerk Feb. 9, 1842, and continued in office until the termination of this Council on Jan. 10, 1850.

The Municipal Council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham was formed on Jan. 26th, 1850, when Mr. Morgan Jellett was appointed County Clerk which office was held until his death in 1863. Mr. E. A. MacNachtan was appointed County Clerk on June 24, 1863, and held office until his death on July 22, 1891. The offices of Clerk and Treasurer were united in 1877. Mr. Neil F. MacNaughton was appointed County Clerk and Treasurer on July 30, 1891, and has been continuously in these offices since.

The old Newcastle district comprised the four counties—Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland and Durham. In 1810 the records state that the population of the district was only 2,316 souls—it is now considerably over 100,000! Assessed value of property in 1816 was $175,000. These two counties are now assessed for over $26,500,250.

In 1810 there were no roads, settlers passing from one clearing to another by a path along the lake shore. In 1837 it was claimed that these two counties had the greatest number of gravel roads of any counties in the then province of Upper Canada. Instead of the canoes or batteaux of 1810 we have transportation by steamers, railways and soon expect trolley lines.

In 1810 Darlington and Clarke had together 181 of a population of whom only 28 were assessed. In 1825 Darlington was 475, and Clarke 307. In 1830 Darlington 786, Clarke 577. In 1835 Darlington's population was 1,865, Clarke's 1035 Cavan's 2575, Hope's 2739, Manvers' 154. In 1851 the population had increased greatly. Darlington 8,005, Clarke 6199, Hope 5299, Hamilton 5006, Haldimand 4834, Cramahe 2893, Brighton 3725, Murray 3725, Cartwright 1756, Manvers 2,568, Cavan South Monaghan 1051, Alnwick 836, Percy 2600, Seymour 2781, Cobourg 3871, Port Hope 2,476. Bowmanville's population is not given but 460 persons were assessed.

ANOTHER ARREST IN OXFORD CASE

JAMES VANCE OF TAVISTOCK TAKEN TO WOODSTOCK YESTERDAY.

Bailed by M. T. Buchanan—Ex-Warden Under Arrest Put Up Security for a Fellow Prisoner.

Woodstock, Ont., Feb. 10.—The charge upon which M. T. Buchanan was arrested yesterday is understood to be perjury in connection with the recent investigation. There are about four other charges. McCarty is charged with receiving graft in connection with the buying of tools for road building. John Youngs is charged with offering bribes in connection with the securing of the Oxford jailorship.

This morning it is rumored that several other warrants are out, but it is impossible to get any particulars. Arrests may follow before night.

The preliminary trial has been set for February 17th.

All men arrested are well known throughout the whole country. John Youngs is a well-to-do farmer, residing in the northern part of the county. Mr. McCarty is a general merchant of Thamesford, and is an ex-reeve of the township of East Nissouri. M. T. Buchanan has been a resident of Ingersoll and warden of the county. The three men are well-off. McCarty and Buchanan being possessors of fine homes, while John Youngs owns and resides on one of Oxford county's best farms. His arrest took place while he was attending a meeting of the Oxford Weather Insurance Co., in this city yesterday.

It is understood that Buchanan went Youngs' bail, and McCarty's father his bail. The arrests came as a big surprise to even those supposed to be on the inside.

James Vance of Tavistock, was arrested this morning and brought to this city. He is charged with paying $50 to a councillor to secure a contract for a bridge. This makes the fourth arrest as a result of the investigation. Vance is now arranging bail.

San Diego Cal., Feb. 9.—Borne on a litter at the head of his troops, Governor Vega of Lower California, commander of the Mexican Federals in that territory, is to-day in pursuit of the remnant of Captain Gonzale's rebel army, which he defeated yesterday with a loss of 15 killed and 40 wounded. The battle was fought near Campo and word of it wired here.

Want the Ontario Schools' Act Amended

DEPUTATION OF PROTESTANTS ASKED SIR JAMES TO MAKE RADICAL CHANGE IN THE PRESENT SYSTEM.

...or the purpose of asking that religious teaching of all sorts be removed from Public schools, a deputation of Protestants interviewed Sir James Whitney and Hon. Dr. Pyne at Toronto on Thursday. The deputation consisted of Messrs. James Thompson, Chris Hatherley, Henry Crane, Richard Thompson, Mark Manly and John Teapie, representing the Protestant ratepayers of P.S.S. No. 8, Otonabee. Mr. J. H. Burnham appeared with them as spokesman. The deputation was joined by two members of the Legislative Committee of the Grand Lodge of Orangemen. The deputation was received by Hon. Dr. Pyne, with Hon. being Inspector Seath and Deputy Minister Colquohoun. Mr. Burnham said that the teaching of religious dogma usually described as "religion," upon the premises of a state supported school, led to much apprehension and actual undesired results. It was this that the deputation wanted remedied. The statute permits the teaching of catechism, etc., after school hours, but it also permits something vastly more important, viz: clergymen to go into a school at any time and say to the scholars whatever they deem expedient, the natural wording of the statute being to give such advice to the teachers and pupils and any other present as they deem expedient." It is manifest that this immense power opens the door to a great deal of "influence" that in some schools would be inimical to Protestants and in others to Catholics. All the heartburning and ill-feeling arising from the religious influence slowly, but surely created over the little children could be obviated by restricting all reference to religion to a simple invocation, or if necessary less still. There was still another section of the statute that bore directly upon the matter. The duties of a teacher are described to be amongst other things, "to inculcate by precept and example respect for religion and the principles of Christian morality." This did not appear to mean much, but it could be made, and in some instances was made, to mean a very great deal. Experience had actually shown that Protestant children, when in a small minority, were so under the religious influence dominating a school that they actually became estranged from their parents, and, as children will, whether through fear or preference, clung to the religious sentiments and customs that in all cases, where especially the Catholic religion is looked closely after, pervade and rule the influence that makes or unmakes the child in its religious future.

Mr. James Thompson also spoke and said that they always got along well with their Catholic neighbors, and had no fault to find with the teacher, Miss O'Connor, but they wished undesired religious influences to be kept away from their children, and thought that in a purely non-sectarian public school it was not too much to ask. The deputation was well satisfied with its reception. Mr. Burnham also called attention to the desireability of giving the local inspector more extended powers to hear complaints, and also to the necessity of amending the statute so as to provide for regular meetings of the Board. It was possible under the statute for the majority of a school board to ignore the business of a section altogether if they chose, of put it at the beck and call of other than the ratepayers themselves, and at present there was no appeal. The deputation afterwards met Sir James Whitney. After the deputation left the buildings it was freely stated that the increased activity of the Roman Catholic clergy, together with their newly-created "secret council of vigilance" was a danger to the faith of Protestant children in a school, especially where they were in a small minority, but it would not be fair to ask for relief for Protestants in respect of religion, and not provide for it in cases of Catholics also. Therefore, the complete secularization of public schools was hoped for. Dr. Pyne remarked that this was the policy of the U.S., and asked if the deputation wanted the American Public School. It is likely that the question will become a leading one at the next general elections throughout the province.

SUFFRAGE BILL IS FIRST.

Women Suffragists Score a Lucky Point in Parliament.

London, Feb. 9.—Luck served the women champions in Parliament yesterday when a ballot was taken to secure places for private bills. They won first chance for the Suffrage Bill. The Conciliation Committee thereupon met and revised the Conciliation Bill, so that it will enfranchise all women householders. The committee also adopted a resolution appealing to Prime Minister Asquith not to take their day.

There is no present certainty that it will get beyond the initial stage.

GRAND NEWS FROM NEW ONTARIO

MR. G. W. TODD TELLS HOW HE GOT RID OF HIS RHEUMATISM.

Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills brought him the long-looked-for relief—How Rheumatism is cured once and for all.

Wah-tay-Bay, New Ontario, Feb. 10—Special—Every person who suffers from Rheumatism wants quick relief and a sure cure. That's the reason they will all be interested in the statement of G. W. Todd of this place. Listen to it:

"After suffering with backache and Rheumatism for twelve months and trying several so-called remedies and getting no relief, I decided to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. Two boxes brought me the relief I had looked for so long."

Are you looking for relief from your Rheumatism? Are you also looking for a cure that will banish its aches and pains so that they will never return?

You will find both in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. That uric acid is in the blood, simply because disordered Kidneys are not doing their work. With healthy Kidneys, all the uric acid will be strained out of the blood and there cannot possibly be any Rheumatism. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to make the Kidneys healthy. Ask your neighbors about them.

Dusty and Randall were Laid Out

Belleville, Feb. 10.—Owing to the disbanding of the Picton professional hockey team three of their players were on Belleville's line-up against Port Hope last night, namely, S. Burgoyne, Dusty and Crossetto. The game was fast, but rough, several of the players being laid out, the game finally resulted in a farce so far as fine hockey was concerned. Dusty and Randall were laid out, probably for the remainder of the season. Port Hope won the game by a score of 10 to 6. In the last period there were but four players aside. The line-up:

Sir George Gibbons Addressed the Canadian Club Last Night

There was a large attendance of members at the Canadian Club last night, to hear Sir George Gibbons, chairman of the International Waterways Commission.

On being introduced by Dr. Cameron, the chairman, Sir George Gibbons said that he was a great admirer of Canadian Clubs which were serving a splendid purpose in Canada. He proposed to speak on "International Relations." Canada, however, was not a large nation, but was progressing in that direction. Canadians have what might be called a practical independence. Her treaties, the delimitation of boundaries, tariffs, etc., are all Canada's own. But Canada is also becoming more loyal to the motherland.

The Waterways Commission owes its origin to the anxiety of the U.S. and Canada respecting the great levels, likely to be affected by the Chicago sewage canal.

The general desire to use water for power was the next issue. The increased navigation are considered paramount. All waters draining into the lakes are also under the Commission's control.

An international treaty was both the basis and the result. The great lakes became also open everywhere for vessels under both flags. The Americans gave us an even division of the waters as a matter of policy. Where divisions of waters on either side permitted, rights that are injured are indemnified as if there were no international boundary at all. This waterways treaty makes it almost impossible for war between the United States and Canada. It is a good imperialism to be friendly with other great English-speaking nations. But the Americans respect us because we respect ourselves.

The speaker closed with a magnificent peroration in favor of a world peace.

Judge Huycke moved, seconded by Mr. E. A. Peck, a cordial vote of thanks.

THE MORNING TIMES

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1911.

CLERGY AND POLITICS.

It is announced that Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal will issue orders directing that clergy within his diocese refrain from taking any part whatever in politics. If this be true and it is consistent with his diplomacy and foresight, a newspaper war which has been going on for weeks and which has stirred up considerable hostility among different elements in Quebec, will likely draw to a desired end. The trouble arose over the aggressiveness of Bourassa and his paper, "Devoir," which was, it is claimed, getting support from some of the Catholic clergy because they were in favor of Nationalism. Other newspapers of longer record and more power were excluded from the colleges because of political and religious opposition. Naturally objection arose to this, and letters, editorials and spirited articles fired the French temperament till the controversy became wearisome.

In Quebec journalism and religion are so closely associated, so far as the French are concerned at least, that nearly every priest regards himself as an editor, and nearly every editor as a priest. The daily and weekly press is used more or less as a medium for threshing out parochial as well as national religious questions. When envy is excited, therefore, over the supposed endorsement of one paper against another, the editors play on the sentiments of their readers and the clergy on the faith of their parishioners. This is not for the purpose of attracting attention and "making good copy" as a less devout English journalist would say, perhaps, but because the convictions, the vital belief, of the Frenchman is touched and he would defend his religion next to his home.

The dangers resulting from the interference of the clergy into purely secular and particularly political affairs is considerable, as the Archbishop is said to think. Politics should be left to politicians, and religion to the ecclesiastics who can do most good by ministering to their flocks in the spiritual matters and whose entrance into political disputes and intrigues only causes dissension and quarrels.

EXTENDING RURAL SCHOOL HOLIDAYS.

A bill before the Provincial Legislature proposes to extend the summer holidays of rural schools to the period enjoyed by the urban schools.

There are very good reasons why the holidays of the country schools should be extended to September. The attendance during the month of August is invariably small, as the older pupils are required at home; the weather during August is often sweltering, and therefore not conducive to study; at the end of the harvest season the larger pupils return, disorganizing the work of the school; the holidays in the town act as an inducement to many good teachers to accept situations in urban schools rather than in the country.

There was a time and that not many years ago, when a bill of the nature of the present one, would have received scant attention in the House, but there is now every indication that a change of mind has come over the rural communities and that they look upon the bill in a favorable light.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

Still make short work of it. Come on! Let us follow his advice here!"

Swinging his horse around, he rode straight at seral and battery. Grapeshot and bullets sang the death-song of many a brave fellow, but Nicholson was untouched. The 61st leaped to their feet with a yell, rushed after him, and did not fire a shot until they were within twenty yards of the enemy. A volley and the bayonet did the rest. They captured the guns, carried the seral, and pelted the flying rebels with their own artillery. The 1st Punjabis had a stiff fight before they killed every man in the village of Nujufgarh on the left, but the battle was won, practically in defiance of every tenet of military tactics, when the 61st forced their way into the seral.

Utterly exhausted, the soldiers slept on the sodden ground. That night, smoking a cigar with his staff, Nicholson commented on the skill shown in the enemy's disposition.

"I asked a wounded havildar who it was that led the column, and he told me the commander was a new arrival, a subadar of the 5th Irregular Cavalry, named Akbab Khan," he said.

Malcolm started. Akbab Khan was the young sowar whose life he had spared at Cawnpore when Winifred and her uncle and himself were escaping from Bithoor.

"I knew him well, sir," he could not help saying. "He was not a subadar, but a lance-corporal. He was one of a small escort that accompanied me from Agra to the south, but he is a smart soldier, and not at all of the cutthroat type."

Nicholson looked at him fixedly. He seemed to be considering some point suggested by Malcolm's words.

"If men like him are obtaining commands in Delhi they will prove awkward," was his brief comment, and Frank did not realize what his chief was revolving in his mind until, three days later, the Brigadier asked him to don his disguise again, ride to the southward, and endeavor to fall in with a batch of mutineers on the way to Delhi. Then he could enter the city, note the dispositions for the defense, and escape by joining an attacking party during one of the many raids on the ridge.

"You will be rendering a national service by your deed," said Nicholson, gazing into Frank's troubled eyes with that magnetic power that bent all men to his will. "I know it is a distasteful business, but you are able to carry it through, and five hours of your observation will be worth five weeks of native reports. Will you do it?"

"Yes, sir," said Malcolm, choking back the protest on his lips. He could not trust himself to say more. He refused even to allow his thoughts to dwell on such a repellant subject. A spy! What soldier likes the office? It stifles ambition. It robs war of its glamour. It may call for a display of the utmost bravery—that calm courage of facing an ignoble death alone, unheeded, forgotten, which is the finest test of chivalry, but it can never commend itself to a high-spirited youth.

Frank had already won distinction in the field; it was hard to be chosen now for such a doubtful enterprise.

His worst hour came when he sought Chumru's aid in the matter of walnut-juice.

"What is toward, sahib?" asked the Mohammedan. "Have we not seen enough of India that we must set forth once more?"

"This time I go alone," said Frank, sadly. "Perchance I shall not be long absent. You will remain here in charge of my baggage and of certain letters which I shall give you."

"Why am I cast aside, sahib?"

"Nay. Say not so. 'Tis a matter that I must deal with myself, and not of my own wish, Chumru. I obey the general-sahib's order."

"Jan Nikkelsen-sahib Bahadur?"

"Yes. I would, refuse any other. But haste thee, for time presses."

Chumru went off. He returned in half an hour, to find his master sealing a letter addressed to "Miss Winifred Mayne, to be forwarded, if possible, with the Lucknow Relief Force."

There were others to relatives in England, and Frank tied them in a small packet.

"If I do not come back within a week—" he began.

"Nay, sahib, give not instructions to me in the matter. I go with you."

"It is impossible."

"Huzoor, it is the order of Jan Nikkelsen-sahib Bahadur. He says I will be useful, and he hath promised me another jaghir."

The Mohammedan's statement was true enough. He had waylaid Nicholson and obtained permission to accompany his master. Like a faithful dog he was not to be shaken off, and, in his heart of hearts, Malcolm was glad of it.

Their preparations were made with the utmost secrecy. The same men who sold Bahadur Shah's cause to the British were also the professed spies of the rebels. They were utterly unreliable, yet their tale-bearing in Delhi might bring instant disaster to Malcolm and his native comrade.

Nejdi was in good condition again after the tremendous exertions undergone since he carried his master from Lucknow. Malcolm was in two minds whether to take him or not, but the chance that his life might depend on a reliable horse, and, perhaps, a touch of the gambler's belief in luck, swayed his judgment, and Nejdi was saddled. Chumru rode a spare charger which Malcolm had purchased at the sale of a dead officer's effects. Fully equipped in their character as rebel non-commissioned officers, the two rode forth, crossed the Jumna, reached the Meerut road unchallenged and turned their horses' heads toward the bridge of boats that debouched beneath the walls of the King's palace.

Provided they met some stragglers on the road they meant to enter the city with the dawn. By skilful expenditure of money on Malcolm's part and the exercise of Chumru's peculiar inventiveness in maintaining a flow of lurid language, they counted on keeping their new-found comrades in tow while they made the tour of the city. The curiosity of strangers would be quite natural, and Malcolm hoped they might be able to slip out again with some expedition planned for the night or the next morning.

Of course, having undertaken an unpleasant duty he intended to carry it through. He did not fancy the

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

GOLD BELT ACROSS DOMINION! DOMINION GOLD MINES, LIMITED

It is becoming more evident continually that that part of the Dominion covered by the granites and schists of the Laurentian formation is heavily mineralized, wherever there are unions with the Huronian rock or where quartz or other veins are interposed. St. Francis Beauce, Porcupine Cobalt, Bruce, Ont., and Sturgeon Lake are proof spots of this theory corresponding to the test probings of diamond drills in a mining claim.

This last locality has received but slight attention as yet in the newspapers, though a good deal of successful development has been done on the spot. The lake itself is connected at its south end with Port William by a branch of the Grand Trunk and runs an irregular, greatly indented course, amid capes and islands over 40 miles to the north, where it is only eight miles away from the Transcontinental line of the same railway. Gold is found over a wide stretch of the country about the upper end, and several opening have been made with excellent prospects in nearly every case. The Dominion Gold Mines, Limited, control six claims covering 220 acres of land generally heavily timbered. That locality gives the lie direct to any but the most extravagant theories regarding the extent of the pulpwood reserves of that Dominion, being covered with spruce of good size and quality. At the present it looks as though the fate of all the timber within the sight is to fill the stake-hole of power-producing boilers. There is enough of it in sight to drive drills and mills for many a decade of years.

EXPERT OPINION.

During the week Mr. Beidelman, a mining engineer and prospector of very wide experience, extending from James Bay to Mexico, from British Columbia through all the mining states of the West, told The Standard something of what he had himself seen in the Sturgeon Lake, or Thunder Bay district.

"In all my experience, I have never seen more gold showing at the surface," he said. "The geological stratum is perpendicular, as a rule, and the vertical fissures, which are numerous, are all heavily mineralized, the ore being generally copper pyrites bearing gold. The Keewatin runs in veins, from a foot and a half up to some feet in width. Where the Dominion Gold Mines, Limited, are working, for instance, they have two parallel veins of good ore, only a few feet apart, and the rock between the two veins is full enough of mineral to make it a good low-grade proposition. It is to get out this matter and mill it that the company is offering 200,000 shares for sale at a very low figure in Montreal. A mill will have to be built, and the material reduced to a condition of readiness for refining, though I believe the cyanide process could be applied right on the spot."

From the general excellence of the assays made by the Dominion Government analyst, Dr. J. T. Donald, and Mr. W. W. Bennet, assayer to the U. S. Steel Corporation, which shows results ranging from never below $17 up to $424 a ton in gold, it will be seen that there is no doubting the presence of the precious metal in paying quantities. The specimens dealt with were not hand-selected chips, of which the Standard has seen many from that section of much greater richness, but good-sized blocks, representative of the whole texture of the veins.

It is clear that Canada is to have her reputation established as a land of gold by a widely-dispersed series of gold camps. It is many years—60 at least—since Nova Scotia astonished the world by stories of gold discoveries. Northern Quebec is still to have her possibilities developed. The Peace River and Rocky Mountain section a have shown mineral for many years, and so the band of gold which weds the East and West is probably about to be proved to be a reality. Ontario is having a wonderful development, and the new camp at Sturgeon Lake will add greatly to her wealth. Only the future can make it clear, whether the banner agricultural province is to maintain the position she at present promises to fill, of being also in mineral production.

5,000 MILLION IS POST OFFICE RECORD

The Number of Postal Packets Dealt With in Great Britain Last Year—Interesting Figures

The report of the Postmaster-General of Great Britain for the year ending with March last has just been published. Over 5,000 millions of postal packets were dealt with during the year, including about 3,900 millions of letters, 974 millions of halfpenny packets, 946 millions of postcards nearly 300 millions of newspapers, and 113 millions of parcels. The number of letters per head of the population of the United Kingdom has increased since 1906 from 57 to 65. Undelivered packets were estimated at over 21 millions, and the amount of money found in addressed and unaddressed packets recorded in returned letter offices was nearly £550,000. Over 35 millions of old-age pension orders were paid, representing nearly £8,500,000. The number of telegrams passing over Post Office wires was nearly 87 millions.

FEAR OF DEATH

A Well-Known Magistrate Doubts its Deterrent Effect on the Criminal

The well-known magistrate, Mr. Plowden, contributes an interesting study in criminal psychology to the discussion on the death penalty which has been carried on for the past fortnight in the columns of the "Times." Incidentally Mr. Plowden pleads for a saner judgment of the character and motives of the murderer. He says:—

It is a popular fallacy to regard a murderer as the worst of criminals. The real truth is that in many cases it is hardly fair to describe him as a criminal at all.

No one who has not been through the fire can tell what may be the effect on his self-control of a long course of studied insults and provocation on the part of a worthless wife against her husband persevered in day by day, for months and even years at a stretch.

Sir Henry Smith, in his virtuous indignation with Crippen, makes no allowance for desperate circumstances like these.

He is angry with Crippen on account of his coolness in the witness-box, which he calls an outrage, and he apparently regards it as a distinct aggravation of his conduct that he should have sworn to love and cherish at the altar the wife whom he subsequently put to death.

It is somewhat amazing to me that considerations such as these should weigh for a moment in any just appreciation of Crippen's character. They were to me absolutely irrelevant.

What Crippen actually did, and for which he suffered death, was to kill a wife whom he hated for the sake of a woman whom he loved. Probably of all the murders that are committed under the sun, in one country or another, there is no more common type of murder than this.

It was the irony of Crippen's fate that he did not meet No. 2 until after he had met No. 1. Had such been his good fortune he would probably have lived a life not better nor worse than his neighbors, and have enjoyed with the best of them the reputation of a contented, law-abiding, citizen. I am convinced from such experience as I have had of criminal courts, extending over many years, that what a man murderously inclined really dreads is not death, but pain.

The spectre of death, though it can always be conjured up, is too remote and shadowy to have much effect on the nerves of a man in the enjoyment of full and vigorous health. Not so with pain. There is no imagination so dull that it cannot take in the terrors of the "cat"; and I believe if such punishment could be made part of the sentence, even without abolishing capital punishment, the deterrent effect would be unmistakable.

I think even Crippen's courage, wonderful as it was, would have quailed on that dark and wintry morning, had he known that he would have to endure a flogging before he was hung.

And had he been asked which he feared most—the physical pain of the lash or the death to follow—can anyone doubt what his answer would have been?

MEN WHO TOILED IN THE ATTICS

Masterpieces That Have Been Produced in Garrets—Paderewski Drummed His Fingers There

Even within human memory great men have dwelt and worked in attics, and have often enough hungered and starved there. Yet, most curious of all, many of the world's most noble masterpieces have been produced in humble, slope-roofed garrets. Imagine writing an epoch-making novel at a table the position of which you have continually to shift to dodge the large drops of rain that come through a faulty roof, and on the other side of the door an irate landlady declaiming against you having not paid your rent.

That is just what happened to Oliver Goldsmith when in Green Arbor Court, Old Bailey, he was preparing his immortal "Vicar of Wakefield." Besides a ramshackle bed and a table, the only other piece of furniture the room contained was a chair. Nor did Goldsmith reap any of the rewards of his genius; he was born poor, and lived and died in London garrets, with swallows his only companions.

Coming nearer to our own times, Thomas Carlyle occupied a top-back room in Cheyne Row, Chelsea. It was lighted from above where no sight or noise penetrated. He could have lived there all his life without anyone ever knowing of his existence.

If the question as to who is the greatest living woman were given to ten people, nine of them would unhesitatingly answer, Mme. Curie. Now, Mme. Curie and her husband lived for years in apartments in Paris which would not favorably compare with many a London attic. Except for half a dozen acquaintances, few knew of their existence; but in that tumble down dwelling (it was not even rainproof), these two, husband and wife, were doing a work that was eventually to revolutionize science. They discovered radium, and it was not until the news had been shouted from one end of the world to the other that the neighbors began to take a sort of interest in the quaint couple who kept the light going all night long in their window.

A Young Inventor

Strange, too, is the story of the young inventor who one day walked into the office of the famous Commodore Vanderbilt, the founder of the Vanderbilt millions. He had devised an air-brake, he said, and wanted to interest the multi-millionaire in it—in short, he wanted money.

"Do you mean to tell me," cried Mr. Vanderbilt, "that you claim you can stop a train by wind?"

"That is exactly my intention, sir," replied the young fellow.

"Go away," said the elder man; "go away. I've no time to waste on fools." The inventor went back to his attic, where for weeks, nay, for months, he had existed on the most meagre of allowances. Among his friends he became known as "Crazy George." One day a railroad manager good-naturedly allowed him to experiment.

Capitalists who had snubbed him and who were present at the trial were disappointed, dumbfounded, when "Crazy George" demonstrated by actual fact that a train could be brought to a dead stop by air.

That was forty years ago, and today that man, whose name is George Westinghouse, is himself responsible for a hundred patents, and is the head of a corporation having a capital of $50,000,000.

For days and weeks and months Paderewski drummed his fingers on a deal table in a Paris garret. He did not know he could play the piano as few even then could, but the information was unfortunately native to himself. All he wanted was the opportunity to convince people what he was capable of; and who would dream of looking for a musician in a damp, out-of-the-way attic near the Seine?

But one day somebody did go there and engage the young Pole to play some accompaniments at the house of a society lady. So overwhelmed was his employer with his performance that she offered on account of the rain, to send him home in her own carriage.

"No, madam," said Paderewski, "are not my own carriage and coachman waiting for me at the end of the street?"

And overcoatless and umbrellaless, through the rain and the slush and the mud, he walked home. That night the tide turned, and the young Pole soon found himself with no further use for such things as garrets.

Victor Hugo

The story of men of genius hungering for food and pining for recognition is a long one. Take Victor Hugo, according to some critics the greatest genius of modern times, who executed some of his finest poetical masterpieces in a garret in Belgium, where the rain came through the tiled roof and which was so small that he could but take four steps as he walked about thinking. His writing-table consisted of a hinged shelf, which he always put up against the wall so his four steps could not be curtailed.

Tom Hood the author of the celebrated "Song of the Shirt," rented a top-back room in London at six shillings a week, and it was dear at that. Charles Dickens's blacking-factory days were spent in equally miserable surroundings. De Quincey spent half his life in a garret off Oxford St. wet, and Maxime Gorgy wrote some of his most realistic stories in the over-heated and unhealthy atmosphere of a baker's oven-room. Chatterton, the boy poet, died in a tiny apartment at the very top end of a flight of stairs; and Whistler, the famous impressionist once had his pictures sold to pay off his attic landlord.

CAPTURED ALIVE

A raccoon was captured alive at Lucknow, Ont., the other day. It entered a drug store and by means of considerable strategy was captured alive in a box. It is supposed that while hunting for food along the river it became frightened and lost its way.

THE QUEUES HAVE TO GO

Chinese Imperial Edict is Being Carried Out—How Queue Was Introduced by the Manchus

The most distinguished queue in San Francisco's world-renowned Chinatown was cut off recently by a pair of American shears when Li Yung Yew, Chinese Consul-General, entered a barber shop and had his hair trimmed a la American.

"Next!" the barber called out, and Li Yung Yew stepped into the chair, ready for the rite, which he understood was the occasion of many [illegible] leaving a retreat."

Fu Chien Yu, secretary of the Chinese legation in Mexico, accompanied the Consul-General and also sacrificed his queue asking the barber to go over his head with a pair of clippers to get the extreme effect in contrast to the manner in which he formerly dressed his locks.

Both hair cuts were the result of the imperial edict issued recently at the suggestion of Tao, Prince Regent, decreeing all Chinese consular and commercial representatives to sacrifice their queues and adopt Western dress and manners.

Prince Tao visited the United States about a year ago, and upon his return to China he interested himself in many reforms founded on Western ideals.

Young China had already begun to wear its hair short, but it took a royal proclamation to make the more conservative government officials consent to the shearing of the queue.

"The passing of the queue means that China is officially committed to a broad and general scheme of emancipation," said Consul-General Yew.

"The kingdom is not prepared for any radical reforms as yet, but Western ideas and institutions are being assimilated by the reigning dynasty as rapidly as is commensurate with circumstances. Many Chinese have been waiting for years for just such an edict relating to the queue.

"They considered the queue a nuisance, making them different from other people when they went abroad and subjecting them to unnecessary ridicule. Personally, I believe that in a comparatively short time a Chinese with a queue will be a curiosity, even among our own people. In the Chinese colony here many merchants and others will be led to dress their hair in the Western fashion as the result of the edict, as the Chinese as a class generally model their dress and customs after the imperial officials."

Vice-Consul Owang dispensed with his queue two years ago, as did all the other attaches of the consulate.

Dr. John Gardner of the immigration service, who speaks Chinese and is an authority on their manners and customs, said the agitation for dispensing with the queue came with the awakening of China.

"The queue is about 270 years old in China and dates from the time of the invasion by the Manchus," explained Dr. Gardner. "The Manchus wore queues, and they compelled the conquered people to adopt them as a badge of submission and servitude. Many Chinese sacrificed their heads rather than have the queue forced upon them. The Chinese are a people who make a virtue of a necessity, however, and before long they began to ornament their queues and to be as proud of them as the Manchus.

"By a paradox of time the people who had first objected to the queue became so accustomed to it that they resisted the attempt to do away with it just as strenuously as they had originally objected to its adoption.

"The more wealthy a Chinese the more elaborate is his queue. The common people generally braid it with black silk, and the more prosperous with scarlet. When in mourning they braid it with blue and white.

"It is believed that the queue was introduced into Japan by the Chinese, and since the Japanese have made such national advancement since they abolished it, the awakened Chinese believe they will be able to profit by their example and do likewise."

ROYALTY WILL ATTEND

The King and Queen Will Appear in Costume at a Fancy Dress Ball

One of the most brilliant social events of the coming coronation season next year in London will be the fancy dress ball to be given by the Duchess of Roxburgh. It is said that the ball will be on a scale of magnificence seldom seen here before, and it will be attended by the King and Queen and practically all the younger members of the Royal Family, and all of them will appear in fancy costume. This will be the first time in nearly a century that a King of Great Britain has appeared in costume at a fancy dress ball, though King Edward, when Prince of Wales, once appeared at one given by the Duchess of Devonshire, dressed as Henry VIII., as depicted in the famous painting by Holbein.

MAMMOTH NEW HOTEL

What will be the largest hotel in England, and one of the largest in Europe, is to be built near Piccadilly Circus, London, Eng., by the Strand Hotel Company. The hotel will have twelve or thirteen hundred bedrooms and will occupy a piece of ground with an area of 44,000 square feet, bounded by Air Street, Glasshouse Street, Sherwood Street, and Brewer Street. The principal entrance will be a few yards from Piccadilly Circus, near the Monico.

The land is now chiefly taken up by shops, all the leases for which expire in 1912.

NATURAL PUNCH BOWL

At Kenmare Castle Ireland, is an enormous cockleshell, weighing 250 pounds, brought from the South Sea Islands. It is moulded into a most fantastic form and exquisitely elaborated by the hand of Nature. In the olden days of baronial hospitality it was used as a punch bowl. When this gigantic natural bowl, filled with its ocean of choicest punch, was placed on the oaken table in the vaulted hall of the castle it is recorded that the effect was very pleasing.

LONDON'S POLICE FIGURES

Crime as a profession is declining in London; Londoners are becoming more fond of walking and more careless; the "growler" is still making a determined struggle for life; between 3 and 4 a.m. is the burglar's busy time; he likes insecure windows best as a means of entry; and Jane Heath, a retired charwoman receives a pension of $62 a year.

These are only a few of the things which the average Londoner does not know, and which he can learn from a perusal of a grimly-bound panorama of London, issued under the title of "Report of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for the year 1909."

There is one constable now serving in the forces who joined in 1867. Those were the "good old days" when the burglar's life was worth living. In those days (to take the record of the year 1870) there were 19,696 felonies relating to property when the population was 3,618,903—and only a few more than half the felons were caught. Now the police catch 18,228 people for 17,923 felonies; and although the population has doubled, the total amount secured by "professionals" only advanced from $604,110 to $1,054,165, while the amount [illegible] average from $30,800 to $120,-000.

The returns of public vehicles allow some interesting inferences. Hansom cabs, for instance, have fallen in number from 6,662 in 1905 to 3,220 last year, and fleets of taxi-cabs have been launched to take their place. There were only nineteen taxi-cabs in 1905, but there were 1,906 last year.

There is, of course, a notable increase in motor-omnibuses and trams, and a corresponding decrease in their horse-drawn predecessors; but the most remarkable thing about the public carriage statistics is this: there are fewer vehicles in use now than there were in 1905. In that year there were 16,555 vehicles on the road. Last year there were 15,906. Many of them are larger, of course, but then the population has also grown considerably in the same time. So, obviously, London walks a good deal now.

London still goes on in its absent-minded way shedding its possessions in cabs and omnibuses. Sixty-five thousand three hundred and seventy-five articles were reported found by the conductors of public conveyances last year.

Twenty-eight thousand and sixty-two of these articles were restored to their owners. The rest, after three months, went to the drivers or conductors who found them. One man was rewarded with these ten of $450 for his find, another received $280.

DRUIDS PLANT OAK

Strange Ceremony in England in Honor of the Peacemaker

Frequenters of Finsbury Park London, Eng., recently witnessed a strange and, in spite of certain grotesque features, a not unimpressive ceremony. Druids from all parts of the Kingdom, from the Continent, and even from distant Colonies assembled to take part in a ceremony of planting an oak in the memory of King Edward, "the Peacemaker."

There was an indisposition on the part of many of the spectators to believe that of these hundreds of reputable citizens clad in long white gowns, wearing fantastic cowls, and carrying various symbols of their Order, marching solemnly across the park, only for the purpose of planting a tree. But when they had all assembled at the chosen spot and had spread around it in a series of wide circles, and the first hymn, the invocation to the Trinity, was raised by at least 1,000 voices, the spectacle was not without its touches of solemnity.

It was not necessary, says a writer in a London paper, to accept the theory of the descent of this Order from the worshippers of the oak and the mistletoe in ancient days to see a certain beauty in their proceedings. All that was needed was to remember that the promotion of universal peace is one of the principles of the present-day Order, that the oak is their symbol, and that the planting of the sapling in Finsbury Park was intended to commemorate the efforts of the late King Edward in the direction of world-wide peace.

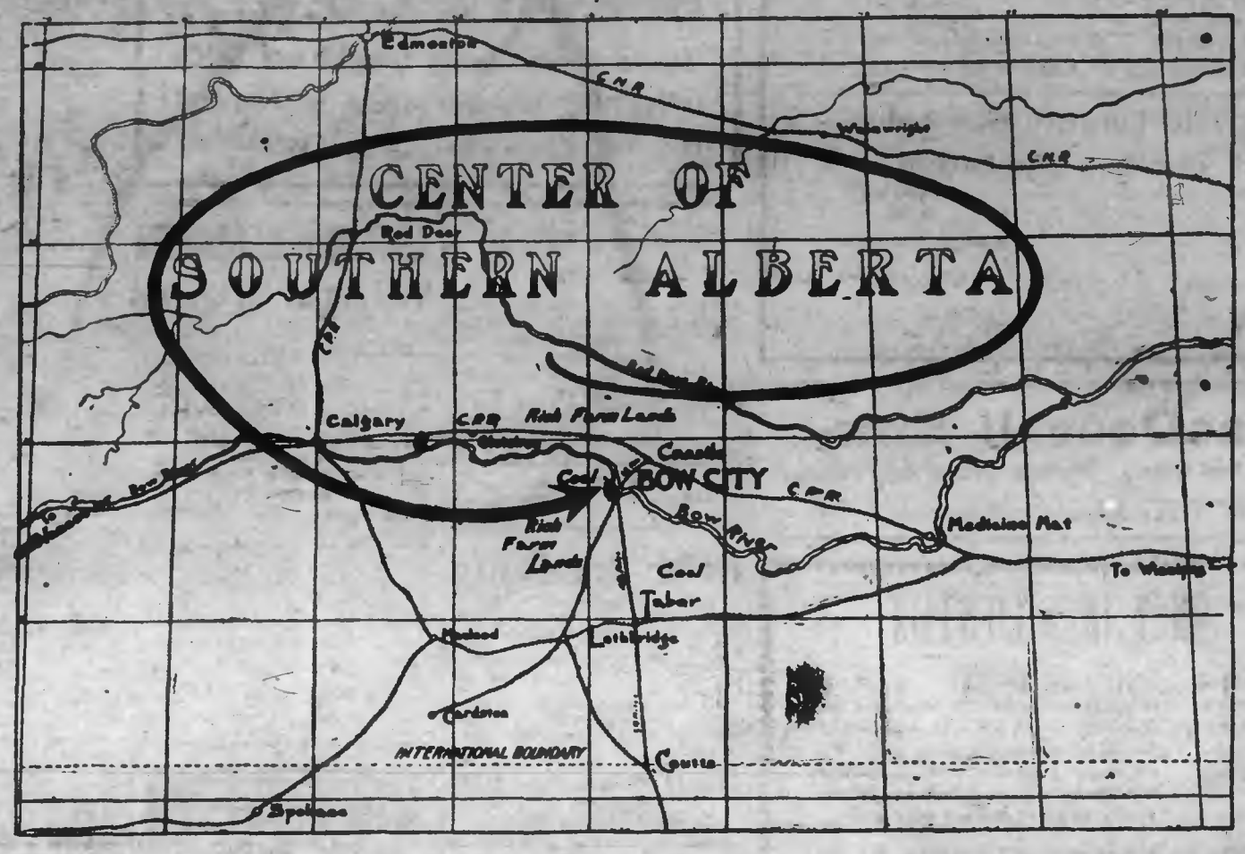
A symbolic procession walked around the newly-planted tree, when they received the Druidic salutation, consisting of the clapping of hands and the making of some mystic signs, while wierd Druidic hymns were sung by French and German choirs.

FINGER SHAVED OFF INSTEAD OF BEARD.

New York, Feb. 9.—A special to the World from Chicago says Henry Ward, a travelling man of St. Louis, went to a barber shop last night to be shaved. He was in a hurry to meet a friend and asked George Selter, one of the barbers to make haste.

"That reminds me," said Selter, as he began stropping the razor, "of a story," which he began telling and as he finished he leaned on the arm of the chair in which Ward was seated, holding the razor with the edge upward. Ward shouted with laughter and raising his right hand in a gesture of mirth brought it down on the razor cutting off his little finger.

"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"



If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid-"erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub-"stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Albert has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ago

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your application by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots. On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

No Drinking Man Need Despair

The Neal Cure--Greatest of all Discoveries—Offers a Means of Escape from the Curse of Drink. A Cure of the Drink Habit is Guaranteed in Three Days, no matter whether the Patient is a Hard and Constant Drinker, Social Tippler or goes on Occasional Sprees.

MANY SUCCESSFUL CURES IN TORONTO

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the washtub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do to-day!

But this home, which was made a hell on earth through strong drink — as every drunkard's is — may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as the result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink; then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES, or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man physically and mentally in THREE DAYS' TREATMENT.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

COACHING TRIP COAST TO COAST

PAUL A. SORG, GREAT FOUR-IN-HAND DRIVER, PLANNING MOST DIFFICULT DRIVE.

Will Use Up 75 Horses—Will Take Two Coaches, Forty Men—Horses Will Travel by Train Between the Relays.

New York, Feb. 8.—Paul A. Sorg, is planning a coaching trip from coast to coast, which, if carried out, will be the longest and most difficult drive ever attempted by an amateur or professional four-in-hand whip. Mr. Sorg has been one of the most successful exhibitors in the horse show circuit, and he has been particularly successful with his heavy harness and coach horses. Mr. Sorg established a reputation as a coaching devotee when he put together four horses that defeated Alfred G. Vanderbilt's famous greys for the first time in their long career and at the recent National Horse Show his four again defeated Mr. Vanderbilt's four in record time in the race which started at Arrowhead Inn and finished at Madison Square Garden.

Last year Mr. Sorg's road four broke the world's record at White Plains, when they trotted a mile on the track in 3.14½, drawing a loaded coach weighing 2,892 pounds. At Syracuse last year the same four trotted five miles in 18 minutes with twelve passengers on the coach, and at Ogdensburg they established a record in 1908, which stood until they lowered it at White Plains.

The proposed 3,000 mile trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific is to be carried out on a scale unexampled in the annals of the road, with an equipment of seventy-five horses, two coaches, the Old Sport and the All Sport, forty men, and two special cars for transportation of paraphernalia. The route of the New York Central Railroad will be followed as far as Chicago, and the teams used each day will be shipped ahead by rail in special cars to await the coming of the coach. The stages are to be twelve miles, and at the end of each stage the keepers will be posted with fresh teams ready to whirl the Old Sport over the road to the next relay station. One of the special cars will carry an extra coach to be used in case of a breakdown, and a blacksmith will go along to shoe the horses and make any needed repairs to the coaches. William C. Grant, the manager of Mr. Sorg's show stable, will be the professional whip in charge and he will alternate with Mr. Sorg in driving. Mr. Sorg purposes disposing of all his show horses with the exception of those used for the trip. They will go under the hammer at Durland Academy on 21st March, and one week later Mr. Sorg will start on his coaching trip across the continent.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MISS PANKHURST TELLS HER STORY

CANADA HAS SAME PROBLEMS AS IN ENGLAND.

Old Clothes in Prison—Speaker Says They Don't Even Fit—What Woman Suffrage Would Do.

Ottawa, Feb. 8.—"I want you here in Canada to realize it is the same for you as for us. You have the same social problems to face, you have poverty and distress. What our civilization lacks to-day are just the things our women know most about. We believe we could bring something into politics and commerce that men do not bring. There are many women so placed that an interest in politics is just what they need to engage their otherwise neglected activities. The woman suffrage movement aims to abolish the underworked as well as the overworked woman."

Concluding an address of an hour and a half before a fair-sized audience in the Russell Theatre here last night, with these remarks, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, representative of the famous militant suffragette family of that name, aroused her audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Calmly and without effort at any rhetoric or perferbid theatricals, this young woman—she is only twenty-one—told the story of the struggle for women suffrage in England.

"Wear your oldest clothes when you go to prison," she said in telling of her experiences in the common jail. The feminine members of the audience were interested in a minute description of the garments furnished by the jail authorities to female prisoners. These were of the most rudimentary character, and did not even intend to fit their wearers. Bed-clothes were always supplied just too narrow to be of use as a covering.

The story of the inception of the movement in England, the strenuous times through which it had passed, was told in simple, yet convincing style by the young exponent of suffrage.

Mr. Ralph Smith, M.P., occupied the chair, and announced himself as a staunch supporter of women suffrage.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

Jail Crowded Beyond Capacity.

Montreal, Feb. 8.—"Four hundred and twenty-one prisoners are packed in the Montreal jail, having only accommodation for 225. The jail is a breeding place for crime and disease. The number is steadily increasing. If a fire ever broke out every soul would be burnt to death. I tell you, gentlemen, I cannot sleep at nights, wondering what will happen." So spoke Mr. Valee, Governor of the Montreal Jail.

Outbreak Not Important.

New York, Feb. 9.—"The Mexican Government does not attach any importance to the outbreaks in the state of Chihuahua," says Manuel C. Cosio, Minister of War and Marine, in a despatch to the New York Times to-day.

Cannot Even Sell their Children Now

Nanking, China, Feb. 9.—Children are a drug on the market, and prices have fallen, with few buyers, according to reports received here to-day from field workers in the famine districts. The last report of the starving thousands, that of selling their children, has failed them.

According to the estimate of Rev. Dr. Lobinstein, one cent a day each for three months is needed to keep alive the 1,000,000 persons in Anhui Province, now near death from starvation. Another million lives are in great danger of being snuffed out owing to the ravages of disease. A scant one-third of the entire population is able to maintain life without aid.

With the advance of the winter season the suffering has increased. Hundreds are being frozen to death. In the large villages where the well-to-do have live stock the owners are besieged by peasants begging the privilege to sleep with the animals.

RAILWAY CHARTERS.

According to a statement made in the Senate the other day, parliament has issued 225 railway charters in the last twenty years, and of the companies which have secured these charters only 23 have done any building. The 225 charters authorized the construction of 78,138 miles of railway, but only 1348 miles have been built. Presumably the great bulk of all the charters applied for are secured for speculative purposes only. The applicants have neither the means nor the intention of building. The charters, apparently, are obtained to be sold to the real builders when he comes along. A bill has been introduced in the Senate providing for the granting of charters hereafter by the State Department, on the advice of the Dominion Railway Commission. There seems to be need for some sort of change.

Oranges From Chance's Grove Arrived Here.

Included in the train load of California oranges which just reached here from the coast are several cases from Captain Frank Chance's grove near Los Angeles.

The "Peerless Leader" of the champion Chicago Cubs, has shipped all the present crop from his old ranch and is at present looking over his new grove recently purchased.

According to reports from Chance, he stands to make a big profit this season. He personally overlooks all the picking and shipping of his oranges and it is a common sight to see him carrying his men from place to place in his big auto.

Chance grows two grades of oranges on his ranches—the famous "Sunkist" brand and the "Red-Ball," equally as popular on the eastern tables.

Last spring, while on his way to join the Cubs on their spring training trip, Chance brought a suit case full of his own oranges along with him. It was his intention to treat the players. But he happened to mention the fact to one of his fellow passengers, with the result that only two were left when he finally reached Chicago.

Pitchers Mordecai Brown and Orval Overall, of the Cubs, will spend a couple of weeks with Chance this winter and their boss hopes to coax both of his star pitchers to stop growing.

Cure Your Rheumatism

50,000 BOXES GIVEN AWAY TO ALL WHO APPLY

John A. Smith and his Remarkable Rheumatism Remedy — Cured Himself First and now Proposes to Cure the World.

A Box of this Great Remedy Mailed Free to any Suffering Reader who will send Name and Address.

Cured Many Cases of 30 and 40 Years Standing.

On the theory "that seeing is believing," John A. Smith of Milwaukee wants every one to try his remedy for the cure of rheumatism at his expense. For that reason he proposes to distribute 50,000 free boxes among all persons sending him their address.

Deformity of the Hands in General, Chronic Articular Rheumatism.

Mr. Smith had suffered all the agony and torture from rheumatism, tried all the remedies known and yet utterly failed to find relief.

At times he was so helpless that he had to take morphine and after considerable doctoring he gave up in despair. He began studying into the causes of rheumatism and after much experiencing, finally found a combination of drugs which completely cured him. The result was so beneficial to his entire system that he called his new found remedy "Gloria Tonic". Those of his friends relatives and neighbors suffering from rheumatism were next cured and Mr. Smith concluded to offer his remedy to the world. But he found the task a difficult one as nearly everybody had tried a hundred or more remedies and they couldn't be made to believe that there was such a thing as a cure for rheumatism. But an old gentleman from Seguin, Texas, wrote him saying if Mr. Smith would send him a sample he would try it, but as he had suffered over thirty years and wasted a fortune with doctors and advertised remedies, he wouldn't buy anything more until he knew it was worth something. The sample was sent, he purchased more and the result was astonishing. He was completely cured. This gave Mr. Smith a new idea and ever since that time he has been sending out free sample boxes to all who apply. At National Military Home, Kansas, it cured a veteran of rheumatism in hips and knees. In Hannford, N. Dak., it cured a gentleman who writes: "Since taking "Gloria Tonic" I am as supple as a boy". In Staynes, Ont., it enabled a lady to discard her crutches. In Westerly, R. I., R.R. No. 1, it cured a farmer 72 years old. In Fountain City, Wis., it cured an old gentleman after suffering 35 years. In Molalla Oregon, it cured a lady 75 years of age who had suffered for thirty years. In Sumner, Iowa, it cured a lady after suffering thirty-four years. In Elm Grove, Wis., "Gloria Tonic" cured a severe case of Sciatica. Even prominent physicians had to admit that "Gloria Tonic" is a positive success, among them Doctor Quintero of the University of Venezuela, to whom it was recommended by the United States Consul. In hundreds of other instances the result has been the same. It cured many cases which defied Hospitals, Drugs and Electricity, among them persons of upwards eighty years of age.

Mr. Smith will send a trial box, also his illustrated book on rheumatism, absolutely free of charge to any reader of The Times, for he is anxious that everybody should profit by his good fortune. Mr. Smith's address in full is:

A New Wagon Road.

A new wagon road has been constructed, partly by the Government and partly by the merchants of Edson, Alta., through to the Grande Prairie country, a distance of 165 miles from Edson, which is all practically completed and is reported to be remarkably level, with no heavy hills, and over which heavy loads may be drawn with ease. Road houses have also been established along this wagon road and settlers will be able to travel in comparative ease and at slight expense from Edson on the Grand Trunk Pacific this year in the course of a week where the former routes via Edmonton and Lesser Slave Lake occupied several months and very great cost. The whole distance to be traversed being over four times as long as the new route.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise ocarning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr, Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

A Great Railway System.

Hardly a town, village or city in Ontario, that does not receive daily benefit from the operation of the Grand Trunk Railway System, and considering the net work of Branch line connections, it is wonderful with what regularity trains are run. Not only is a good service provided between points in Ontario, but this line also reaches nearly all the important cities of Michigan, via: Detroit, Flint, Saginaw, Bay City, Lansing, Battle Creek, Jackson, Grand Rapids and Muskegon, South Bend, Ind., and the second city in America, viz: Chicago, Ill., the gateway to the North-west, West and South, bringing Ontario in close connection. On the East, the Grand Trunk connects Ontario with Montreal, Quebec, the Maritime Provinces and Boston, Mass.

With a double-track line all the way from Chicago to Montreal, and also to Niagara Falls, connecting with Lehigh Valley for New York, the Grand Trunk reaches out in all directions for your patronage, and well deserves it, for its vestibule coaches, Parlor and Dining cars and modern Pullmans, give the service desired.

Consult your nearest Grand Trunk Agent for information regarding your next trip.

VOL XXXIV NO. 36 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, MONDAY FEBRUARY 13, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

C.P.R. Steamship Service to West Indies

PACIFIC EMPRESSES TO BE PUT ON THIS RUN AND FASTER SHIPS ON PACIFIC LINE.

Will Also Build Up Chain of Summer Hotels at St. John's, N.B., Yarmouth, N.S., Jamaica and Bermuda.

Montreal, Feb. 13.—Private advices received in the city to-day from Jamaica show that the C. P. R. is now completing arrangements for the most important departure upon which the Company has entered since it bought up the Beaver line of steamships and became a competitor in the Atlantic steamship trade.

The new project is the establishment of a steamship line between the Maritime Provinces and the West Indies, via Borton and the building up of a chain of summer hotels at St. John, N. B., Yarmouth, N.S., Jamaica and Bermuda, equal in all respects to the chain of hotels which the company now has across Canada.

Mr. Harris, assistant to Vice-president Bosworth, of the C. P. R., is now on his way to the West Indies, and according to the arrangements made there the whole scheme will be announced at a meeting of the Governors of the various island colonies to be held in Jamaica shortly after Mr. Harris's arrival.

The establishment of this line is expected to give an immense impetus to reciprocal trade between Canada and the West Indies, and also to open up an immense tourist trade. In order that the enterprise may start under the best possible conditions, the C. P. R. will use for the purpose the "Empress" steamships, now running between Vancouver and the Orient. These ships, which are built on the graceful lines of yachts, have great accommodation for freight, and are, moreover, perhaps the most luxurious passenger ships in the Canadian marine. They are in every respect admirably suited for the Canada-West Indian trade. Already the company has two new liners on order for the Pacific business. These will be delivered next year, and then the "Empress of India", and the "Empress of China", both of which are of 6,900 tons, will at once be put on the West Indian route. Two other boats are to be put on order for the Pacific trade, and when these are completed, probably the year after next, the "Empress of Japan" will also be transferred to the West Indian route.

That the project will make the West Indies a popular holiday resort for Canadians is confidently expected, and no doubts are entertained that a large tourist business between Boston and the West Indies will be created by the line. The Company already has steamship terminals at Boston, which it acquired when it took over the Dominion Atlantic Railway and steamship line.

A big fruit business that is now done by Canada, via Boston and New York will, under this scheme, be done direct and a new lease of prosperity will, it is expected, be given to the Maritime Provinces by the new facilities offered for reaching the West Indian market with Canadian products. The scheme is also one of great importance to the manufacturers of Montreal, who will find, so the advices from Jamaica state, a ready market for their products in the West Indies.

A Troopship Lost with All on Board

Turkish Vessel Reported to Have Been Sunk—Perhaps Pirates Captured It.

Constantinople, Feb. 11.—The transport Marmora, carrying troops and war munitions to the Yemen, where the natives are in revolt, was reported to-day as having been lost with all on board, in the Red Sea.

Another version is that the transport was captured by pirates, but this is denied by the War Office.

Steamer Lituania is Still Burning

Ship Threatened With Destruction—Blaze Breaks Out With Renewed Vigor.

Dover, Eng., Feb. 11.—After a 96-hour battle with the flames, the cargo in the hold of the Russian line Lituania was still burning to-day, while the vessel stood off this port, and the crew lay by ready to take off the crew if necessary. The Lituania carried a miscellaneous cargo containing much combustible stuff. Sailors thought they had the fire extinguished last night, but immediately after they ceased pouring water into the hold it blazed up with renewed vigor.

The ship is threatened with destruction. The fire had been burning since the ship left Newcastle Tuesday noon. The first report of the fire stated it had originated in an explosion off Dover.

HIGH BIRTHRATE IS ECONOMICAL

DR. CHAS. W. ELIOT, LATE OF HARVARD, IS ADVOCATE OF LARGE FAMILIES.

Satisfactions in Life That are Most Durable are Obtained in Largest Measure by Those Having Several Children.

Boston, Feb. 11.—Dr. Chas. W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard is the latest advocate of large families and cultured Boston is to-day discussing with great interest an address which he made before the Twentieth Century Club last night. In it he decried plans for restricting the birth rate and declared that such a measure would be supported neither by morals nor economics.

"It is the high birth rate that is economical," he said. "The durable satisfactions of life depend in a large measure upon a normal number of children. They are not obtained by families that have only one or two.

"I understand the normal number of children to a family to be five or six, and this number should not for any economic reason be lowered.

"It is my belief that normally every mother should bear a child once in two years. Granting that marriage should come at the average age of twenty-four, this periodical childbearing should continue until the age of forty, with eight children as a resultant issue.

"We are anxious to have individual freedom in America because we are a democracy, but in such cases as this we must act collectively for proper precautions. We are behind Europe in legislation on these matters."

SUPPOSED STOLEN BODY DISCOVERED

REMAINS SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN REMOVED FROM MAUSOLEUM WERE FOUND THERE.

Hidden in Unused Crypt—Niece of Millionaire Scott Tells How His Wife's Body Was Finally Located.

Erie, Pa., Feb. 11.—How the body of Mrs. Anna McCollum, supposed to have been stolen from the Scott mausoleum was discovered yesterday, was told to-day by Mrs. C. H. Strong, niece of the dead woman and daughter of millionaire Scott, builder of the mausoleum.

"The Berkins, father and son, went to the tomb with me late yesterday to make a thorough examination of the place and we found the body of Mrs. Anna McCollum, my aunt, at first believed to have been stolen," said Mrs. Strong.

"The body was in a crypt which had never been used. This vault behind the door and was partly concealed from view when the door was open, as was the case during our first visit Wednesday evening, after the burglary was report. In the hasty examination of the place, made then, my husband and I overlooked this compartment.

"We looked only in the vaults that had contained bodies. We saw that the body of my aunt was missing and believed it had been removed from the tomb.

"I was warned against disturming the interior of the tomb before the arrival of detectives, as it was feared valuable clues would be destroyed. Therefore my inspection was merely superficial. The detectives also arrived too late Thursday to make a thorough inspection of the tomb at that time.

"Yesterday, it was only after a search of almost two hours, during which we opened nearly all the unused vaults, which had been sealed, that we struck the right one. The cover of the vault containing Mrs. McCollum's body had been cleverly replaced, so that it presented the same appearance as others which had not been tampered with.

"The body of my father, William L. Scott, had not been changed, although there were a few marks on the crypt cover.

"My mother's casket had been pulled partly from the niche, but it was not broken into.

"The casket containing my aunt's remains was almost demolished, but the body had not been removed. Coffins containing corpses of John McCollum, Richard Townsend, and his baby, Anna Townsend, were not harmed. Silver name plates and ornaments were torn from several."

CAN GERMANY OUTFOOT BRITAIN IN THE BIG ARMAMENT RACE?

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT IS DEMOCRATIC

The appointment of the Duke of Connaught as Governor-General of Canada is now officially announced, and, as sensible people, Canadians will try to make the best of the experiment. They are told that there is no intention of establishing a royal court in Canada, and that the Duke of Connaught is a democratic person. All this may be, but the democratic instincts and good sense of the new Governor-General are not sufficient guarantees against certain inevitable tendencies of the new departure.

Whatever may be said to-day, the new occupant of Rideau Hall will not be regarded in the same light as his predecessors. The social and ceremonial side of life at Ottawa will be emphasized. There will be a tendency to magnify the office held by a distinguished member of the royal family. When the Duke leaves us, the question will be raised whether the Governor-Generalship shall remain in the royal family, and at every change there will be the same air of fuss and mystery which has preceded this appointment. Fortunately this is a level-headed community, and its common sense will minimize the mischief that might be wrought by the amateur statesmanship that has suggested the appointment.

PROFESSOR BALLOD, A LEADING GERMAN ECONOMIST SAYS IT CAN BE DONE.

Germany Can Stand Increasing Military and Naval Expenditure Better Than Great Britain Can.

Is Germany capable of withstanding the financial strain of its growing armaments, which are already enormous, but which are steadily increasing year by year?

The Fatherland has a standing army of 500,000 men and 3,000,000 in its reserves. Its fleet is rapidly attaining to a foremost position among the navies of the world. Each year sees an additional enormous sum devoted to the construction of Dreadnoughts, more money spent on big guns, higher expenditures for improving the personnel of the navy, and side by side with this enormous and increasing burden a steady growth in the cost of maintaining the army.

The last scheme of taxation introduced by the Administration in the summer of 1909, and accepted by the Imperial Legislature, so raised taxation that there are many who declare the country has reached the limit of endurance.

Whether or not this is true is a vital question for Germany, because success in its contest for world supremacy, waged in competition mainly with England, now depends on money and on money alone. England is certainly not far from a point—for it is seriously armed—where it will decide to build two Dreadnoughts to every one which Germany undertakes. More than this, many English naval authorities, supported by influential bodies of politicians, business men, patriots and patriots, are clamouring for the construction by Great Britain of twenty Dreadnoughts at once, so that the country's maritime supremacy may be definitely established for years to come. This would mean a corresponding demand upon Germany, so that it has become clear that the winner in the great contest will be the nation with the resources to withstand the financial strain of increasing armament for the longest time.

One of Germany's greatest political economists and scientists, Prof. Ballod, has just published a highly interesting treatise in which he deals with the question whether the Fatherland's enormous expenditures for military and naval purposes are reducing it to financial ruin.

The professor proves by official statistics that Germany's private fortunes have increased $12,500,000,000 within a decade, and the records of fire insurance companies indicate a similar increase in the value of tangible property. Nor is the country's prosperity limited to the rich, workingmen's wages having shown an average increase of 48 per cent. in twenty-two years.

Alongside of this growth in wealth and wages, the professor denies that there has been a corresponding increase in the cost of living. The price of bread, he says, is not rising. He asserts that coffee, sugar, tea, clothing and other common necessaries of life are cheaper than they were a quarter of a century ago.

His statistics prove—or seem to prove—that the per capita consumption of rye, wheat, potatoes, sugar, coffee, and particularly beer is materially increasing. There has also been a considerable per capita increase in the consumption of meat. Altogether the professor sums up, there can be no question as to the laboring classes' prosperity.

From the growth of the Fatherland's national wealth, the statistician comes to the conclusion that the country can continue to spend fortunes upon its army and navy without in any way neglecting the great problems of education and social reform, with which it is struggling—not unsuccessfully, he adds.

In short Prof. Ballod believes that Germany stands a better chance than England of victory in the great international race.

ON THE INCREASE

Bi-Lingual Schools in Manitoba are Plentiful.

Winnipeg, Feb. 13.—There are now between 230 and 240 bi-lingual schools in Manitoba and the number is still growing rapidly. In 130 of these schools French and English are taught, in fifty German and English, and in fifty to sixty, other languages including Polish, and Ruthenian and English.

In the French and English schools a fairly good progress is being made on account of the fact that several of them are graded schools, and also that the teachers are upon the whole, competent of giving instruction in both languages. There are in all about two hundred teachers in the French and English bi-lingual schools.

RADIUM FAMINE THING OF PAST

German Professor Has Discovered An Effective Substitute.

Berlin, Feb. 11.—The newspapers announce the end of the radium famine. They say that Prof. Otto Hahn of Berlin University, has obtained an effective substitute, and that at the end of a few months the Academy of Science will be in possession of 250 milligrammes, which it will lend to investigators. The new radio-active matter is a by-product of the manufacture of thorium gas mantles, and it has been named by its discoverer mesothorium. In combination with bromium, it is a white salt, with the same radio-active properties as the corresponding salt of radium, although the latter costs thrice as much.

It is said that Germany alone can produce ten grammes of the mesothorium salt a year, which would be equal to the entire world's supply of radium salt at present.

LIVELY BURGLAR HUNT.

Marauders Were Not Caught and Got Away With $50,000 in Jewels.

Despite the long hunt the marauders escaped with $50,000 worth of jewelry, calmly walking out under the very [illegible] of the searchers.

TOOK THE BRIDE FROM HUSBAND

ANGRY FATHER OBJECTED TO HER MARRIAGE TO DASHWOOD YOUNG MAN.

Followed Young Couple — Caught them at Parkhill and, With a Constable, the Parent Carried His Daughter Away.

Parkhill, Feb. 11.—Parkhill is becoming something of a Gretna Green. On Tuesday evening Arthur Weaver, of Dashwood, was married by Rev. S. A. Carriere, of Grand Bend, to Miss Clara, daughter of William Zimmer, hotelkeeper, of Dashwood. After the ceremony the young couple drove to Parkhill to take the morning train to Sarnia. While "Love laughs at lock-smiths," in this case true love did not "run smooth."

It appears that after the young couple disappeared from Dashwood, the father became suspicious, and consulted the county constable at Dashwood, and then drove to Centralia to stop the marriage; but when he reached there he found that he had missed them, and at once made up his mind that the objects of his search might be in Parkhill.

MET THEM FACE TO FACE.

On Wednesday morning, accompanied by the constable, he took the train to Parkhill, arriving at 9.30 a.m. When the father stepped onto the platform he stood face to face with his son-in-law and daughter in the act of boarding the train for Sarnia. The father at once took his daughter by the arm and enforced his request by the presence of the arm of the law.

The angry parent then engaged a livery rig, and accompanied by his daughter and the constable, drove to Dashwood, followed by the bridegroom in the stage, wrapped doubtless in gloomy thoughts. The couple it appears, have been "keeping company" for several years. The young lady is over 20 years of age and the groom her senior.

Rumors of a Marriage—Conference Between the Griscoms and the Arnolds Take Place To-day.

Atlantic City, Feb. 11.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Dorothy Arnold may be solved before Geo. S. Griscom, jr., of Pittsburg, whose name has been connected with that of the missing young woman, leaves Atlantic City and probably to-day.

This information was obtained last night. It is expected that before the day is over Mr. Griscom will make a statement in connection with the affair. Rumors that Griscom and Miss Arnold had been married or are to be married, are in circulation.

Mr. Griscom arrived here early last evening and was followed two hours later by his parents.

Young Mr. Griscom came here unexpectedly after his father and the father of the missing girl had held a conference in New York. It is reported that his purpose in coming to this city is to meet Miss Arnold.

It is also reported that Miss Arnold's father and one of her brothers had engaged rooms at a hotel here for to-day, and that Mrs. Arnold would come here immediately after her arrival from Europe.

First Aeroplane Flight in Actual Warfare

"THERE SEEMS TO BE QUITE AN ARMY THERE," SAYS HAMILTON.

In Spite of Warning That He Might be Shot, Aeroplanist Soars Over the Army of Juarez.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 11.—In spite of the warning that he might be fired on by Federal troops, Charles K. Hamilton yesterday flew across the border into Mexico and made the first aeroplane reconnaissance ever attempted in time of war. Rising from the aviation grounds on the American side of the river, Hamilton in a biplane crossed directly over the Mexican custom house, circled over the defences of Juarez and returned to the American side of the river.

QUITE AN ARMY.

Hamilton was allowed to make the flight by the American officers in charge of the border patrol on condition that he would divulge no information he might acquire in his flight. When he brought his machine to the ground he declared. "There seems to be quite an army in Juarez."

TIMOTHY HEALEY UNSEATS AN M.P.

Alleged That Hazleton Captured North Louth by Bribery and Intimidation—Charges Admitted.

Dublin, Feb. 10.—Timothy Healy's contest to nullify the election of Richard Hazleton who at the last election turned out "the Ishmael of Nationalist politics" from the seat for the North Division, which he had held for eighteen years, proved successful to-day.

The case has been before the Court at Dundalk for several days, during which Healy presented evidence of much intimidation and rioting at the polling. Hazleton's attorney consented to having the election declared void without offering defence.

The matter has not ended however, as Healy asserted his right to introduce all his evidence in support of his charges, which include bribery and the court decided to hear it.

The fight in the Louth constituency was one of the most bitter in the recent campaign. The Redmondites brought all their forces to bear against O'Brien's chief lieutenant and the defeat of Healy overshadowed the chagrin in the Redmond camp at William Redmond's failure to oust O'Brien in Cork City. Exciting scenes marked the polling, free fights were frequent and Healy himself at times required police protection. When it was announced that Hazleton had secured Healy's seat in the House of Commons, the Independent candidate announced that he would protest the election, alleging gross corruption and intimidation. Hazleton was returned unopposed for the North Division of Galway.

Rang Too Many Alarms.

Montreal, Feb 10.—An excited nun came near causing a panic in St. Joseph's School, Hochelaga, when, during a fire drill, she turned on the city as well as the school alarm. As the apparatus came dashing down to the building, the children became frightened and made a dash for the door, but were assembled and marched out.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Liniment and bound on to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN GULF.

George Kennan, who is one of the best authorities on Russia among those who are not native to that empire, points out in the current number of the Outlook the gulf between the Russian government and the Russian people, shown most clearly in the recent funeral of Tolstoi and also that of Prof. Murontsef.

Count Tolstoi is too well known to need rehearsal as to why he received no public official honor in his burial, but less is known of Prof. Murontsef, who is described by Mr. Kennan as an exceptionally gifted instructor and author, an eminent jurist, an unselfish patriot, a distinguished liberal leader and a man of the highest and purest personal character.

He had been president of the Duma which represents the people's hopes, and when he died it is said that Europe has not seen such a funeral since the burial of Thiers in France. More than 600 wreaths from societies, corporations and persons were sent to his residence within two days from his death and the procession to the grave was witnessed by hundreds of thousands.

It is neglect on the part of government to show its interest in its most able and really distinguished citizens which shows, as Mr. Kennan says, the tremendous gulf between the government and the people in Russia. This is no new thing, however, and it may be that the majority of the people are unconscious of it in their ignorance and, discouraging as the fact may seem standing by itself, there is a great body of testimony to the effect that Russia is making advance in the general movement of civilization.

It is more by comparison with the state of things in former reigns, even within comparatively late times that one may judge better whether the situation is hopeless or rather full of encouragement. And yet one may gain a new idea of the low plane that the government itself stands on when there is such desperate jealousy, if not positive and murderous hatred of liberal ideas.

FARM VALUES AND WAGES IN CANADA.

The Census Monthly for January says that values and wages in Canada make a good record for 1910. The total value of live stock on the farms is $593,766,000, which is $34,979,000 more than in 1909. The price per head of horses is $132.50 as against $130.72 in 1909, of milch cows $42.60 against $36.36, of other cattle $30.90 against $28.81 and of sheep $6.00 against $5.89. Swine alone show a drop in average price, being $11.30 per head against $11.80. The total value of horses is $293,398,000 for last year against $278,789,000 for 1909, of milch cows $121,613,000 against $103,601,000, of other cattle $131,781,000 against $126,326,000, and of sheep $15,819,000 against $15,735,000. The value of swine, however, fell from $34,368,000 in 1909 to $31,157,000 in 1910.

The highest average price of horses was in Saskatchewan, of milch cows, other horned cattle and sheep in Ontario, and of swine in Quebec. Horses three years old and over reached the highest price in British Columbia where the average was $225. Swine per 100 lb. live weight ranged from $6.50 in Manitoba to $9.02 in Quebec. The price of unwashed wool was 18 cents in 1910 and 17 cents in 1909, and of washed wool 24 cents for each year.

The average value of occupied farm land in the Dominion was $38.45 per acre or 15 cents less than for the previous year. It was highest in British Columbia, where the cost of clearing is heavy and the land is largely occupied for fruitgrowing, the average being $74 per acre, or 56 cents per acre more than in the previous year. Ontario comes next with $48 per acre, which is $2.22 less than in 1909.

Farm help for the summer season shows an average of $35.15 per month for males and $20.70 for females counting board, as compared with $33.69 and $19.08 respectively in the previous year. Males have an average of $347.10 and females $209.69 per year, counting board, as against $336.29 and $206.06 respectively for 1909. The highest prices per month in summer are paid in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, where they are $40 and over for males and $25 and over for females, counting board. The average rate of board per month ranges from $8 for males and $6 for females in Prince Edward Island to $20 and $17 respectively per month in British Columbia.

The rates of wages and board are quoted for the farm, where males are employed on the land and females in the house. They are averages compiled from a large number of returns by farmers to the Census Office.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

nature and extent of the enemy's batteries, the general dispositions of the defense and the state of feeling among the different sections that composed the rebel garrison, he must perforce remain longer. But that was in the lap of fate. At present he could only plan and contrive to the best of his ability.

Fortune favored the adventurers at first. They encountered a score of ruffians who had cut themselves adrift from the Gwalior contingent. Among these strangers Chumru was quickly a hero. He beguiled the way with tales of derring-do in Oudh and the Doab, and discussed the future of all unbelievers with an amazing gusto. Malcolm, whose head was shrouded in a gigantic and blood-stained turban, listened with interest to his servant's account of the actions outside Cawnpore and on the road to Lucknow. It was excellent fooling to hear Chumru detailing the wholesale slaughter of the Nazarenes, while the victors, always the sepoys, found it advisable to fall back on a strategic position many miles in the rear after each desperate encounter.

In this hail-fellow-well-met manner the party crossed the bridge, were interrogated by a guard at the Water Gate and admitted to the fortress. It chanced that a first-rate feud was in progress, and the officer, whose duty it was to question new arrivals, was taking part in it.

Money was short in the royal treasury. Many thousands of sepoys had neither been paid nor fed; there was a quarrel between Mohammedans and Hindoos, because the former insisted on slaughtering cattle; and the more respectable citizens were clamoring for protection from the rapacity, insolence and lust of the swaggering soldiers.

That very day matters had reached a climax. Malcolm found a brawling mob in front of the Lahore gate of the palace. He caught Chumru's eye and the latter appealed to a sepoy for information as to the cause of the racket.

"The King of Kings hath a quarrel with his son, Mirza Moghul, who is not over pleased with the recent division of the command," was the answer.

"What, then? Is there more than one chief?"

"To be sure. Is there not the Council of the Barah Topi? (Twelve Hats.) Are not Bakht Khan and Akhab Khan in charge of brigades? Where hast thou been, brother, that these things are not known to thee?"

"Be patient with me, I pray thee, friend. I and twenty more, whom thou seest here, have ridden in within the hour. We come to join the Jehad, and we are grieved to find a dispute toward when we expected to be led against the infidels."

The sepoy laughed scornfully.

"You will see as many fights here as outside the walls," he muttered, and moved off, for men were beginning to guard their tongues in Imperial Delhi.

A rowdy gang of full five hundred armed mutineers marched up and hustled the mob right and left as they forced a way to the gate. Their words and attitude betokened trouble. The opportunity was too good to be lost. Malcolm dismounted, gave the reins to Chumru, and told him to wait his return under some trees somewhat removed from the road, for Akbab Khan had sharp eyes, and the Mohammedan's grotesque face was well known to him. Chumru made a fearsome grimace, but Malcolm's order was peremptory. Summoning a fruit-seller, the bearer led the Gwalior men to the rendezvous named and distributed mangoes amongst them.

Frank joined the ruck of the demonstrators and passed through the portals of the magnificent gate. A long, high-roofed arcade, spacious as the nave of a cathedral, with raised marble platforms for merchants on each side, gave access to a quadrangle. In the centre stood a fountain, and round about were grassy lawns and beds of flowers.

The sepoys trampled on, heedless of the destruction they caused in the garden. They passed through the noble Nakar Khana, or music-room, and entered another and larger square, at the further end of which stood the Diwan-Am, or Hall of Public Audience.

Not even in Agra, and certainly not in gaudy Lucknow, had Malcolm seen any structure of such striking architectural effect. The elegant roof was supported on three rows of red sandstone pillars, adorned with chaste gilding and stucco-work. Open on three sides, the audience chamber was backed by a wall of white marble, from which a staircase led to a throne raised about ten feet from the ground and covered with a rarely beautiful marble canopy borne on four small pillars.

The throne was empty, but an attendant appeared through the door at the foot of the stairs, and announced that the Light of the World would receive his faithful soldiers in a few minutes.

The impatient warriors snorted their disapproval. They did not like to be kept waiting, but carried their resentment no further, and Malcolm, with alert eyes and ears, moved about among them, as by that means he hoped to avoid attracting attention.

Even in that moment of deadly peril he could not help admiring the exquisite skill with which the great marble wall was decorated with mosaics and paintings of the fauna and flora of India. The mosaics were wholly composed of precious stones, and the paintings were executed in rich tints that told of a master hand. There was nothing bizarre or crude in their conception. They might have adorned some Athenian temple in the heyday of Greece, and were wholly free from the stiff drawing and flamboyant coloring usually seen in the East. He did not then know that a renegade Venetian artist, Austin de Bordeaux, had carried out this work for Shah Jehan, that great patron of the arts, and in any event, his appreciation of their excellence was spasmodic, for the broken words he heard from the excited soldiery warned him that a crisis was imminent in the fortunes of Delhi.

"Who is he, then, this havildar of gunners from Bareilly?" said one.

"And the other, Akbab Khan. They say he fought for the Nazarenes at Meerut. Mohammed Latif swears he defrauded the treasury there," chimed in another.

"As for me, I care not who leads, I want my pay."

"I, too. I have not eaten since sunrise last—"

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an option of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

HAS DR. GRENFELL RECEIVED KNIGHTHOOD.

Despatch Declares That Labrador's Hero Was Recently Honored by King George.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 10.—Sir Wilfrid Thomaston Grenfell, the well known medical missionary of the Labrador coast, has been selected as the William Bolden Noble lecturer at Harvard University for 1911-12.

Dr. Grenfell, who was recently knighted by King George, has practically isolated himself from the world in order to minister to the needs of the fishermen and their families on the coast of Northern Newfoundland and Labrador.

This is the first public reference to the knighting of Dr. Grenfell, and it is possible a mistake has been made. It seems improbable that Canadians should not learn of his being honored before the Americans heard it. Dr. Grenfell received the C.M.G. in 1906.

DOROTHY ARNOLD HAS BEEN MISSING 59 DAYS.

Important Developments Are Expected To-day on Arrival of George C. Griscom.

New York, Feb. 9.—Interesting developments in the search for Dorothy Arnold, who has now been missing for 59 days, are expected to-day.

The chief of these will be the arrival of George S. Griscom, jr., of Pittsburg, who returns to his country to aid in the search for the girl, and to see at rests the reports that he was secretly married to her.

The man with whom lawyers for the family acknowledge Miss Arnold was in love, arrives on the steamship Ivernia from Italy, at a time when all theories but one have practically been abandoned in the remarkable hunt for the daughter of the rich perfumery importer.

So far the reasons advanced for the disappearance have included the theories of murder, suicide, kidnapping, sudden mental disability for a secret love affair, or a desire for adventure.

All of these suggestions, with the exception of the last named one, have been eliminated.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The People's Chimes

This Title Has Been Stamped Upon the Bells.

Rev. Canon Davidson, chairman, and Mr. G. C. Wainwright, treasurer of the Chimes Committee publish a statement regarding the chime of bells which are to be erected in the tower of St. John's church. The Times, for some reason probably, known only to Canon Davidson, was not supplied with a copy of the article, which is as follows:

After placing the order for eleven bells, we corresponded with the chimemasters of some of the largest chimes in the United States, with a view to finding out whether by any chance there was any deficiency in our chime which it would be possible to remedy now, while under construction. We were advised that for really effective work, and to secure a large range of tunes, two more bells were highly desireable. While considering which of these was more important to attempt, a generous citizen gave the larger of these two as a memorial bell, thus earning the gratitude of all citizens. We consulted with the three representative music leaders of the city, and with prominent citizens, as far as time allowed. As the remaining bell required an extra expenditure of only $200, it was unanimously determined that we were not only justified, but actually called upon in the public interest, to risk this outlay, and complete the chime. Others have since warmly endorsed this action, which will, we feel confident, be welcomed by Peterborough people generally.

The situation now is as follows: Peterborough is to have installed next June, a magnificent chime of 13 heavy bells, the largest weighing 3000 pounds. This will be by far the largest and most complete chime in the whole of Canada, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and will be unique, not only for its size, but also for the multitude of subscriptions of all classes and creeds, and from the fact that by resolution of St. John's Vestry it will be operated for the benefit of the public and the trust, and its full advantage shared in by all citizens.

The name, "The People's Chimes," first suggested by the press of the city, has been stamped upon the largest bell, and we may confidently expect that it will prove a bond of union between all citizens, as well as bringing happiness and cheer to all; in fact it will be a public piano for the people. The chime should further exercise a strong influence in developing a healthy national and religious sentiment in the city. The lines of public use has not yet been fully worked out, and this can only be gradually done with the help and suggestions from all interested persons.

Believing that the magnitude and importance of this enterprise will commend it to all.

Yours truly,

ANOTHER ONE NEEDED.

Rev. Canon Davidson,
Chairman Chimes Committee,—

Dear Sir,—Your enquiry as to the advisability of adding an E Bell to complete the Peterborough chimes admits of only one answer and that answer decidedly in the affirmative. Such a bell probably weighing 400 pounds, would be of great value in chiming, as well as giving greater scope for patriotic airs and hymns. In short, if any bells above the octave are added, the higher E becomes an essential, and as we understand that C sharp and D are decided upon the addition of upper E will make the Peterborough chime the finest in Ontario, if not in Canada.

Yours faithfully,
JOHN CRANE,
RICH. J. DEVEY,
R. GLIDDON.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS
It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise oearning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

LONDON PAGEANT TO BE SPLENDID

Ten Thousand Grand Costumes Are Being Prepared For It--Will be Seen at Coronation Time

London, Feb. 13.—Elaborate preparations are now being made for the pageant of London, which is to be one of the principal features of the forthcoming Festival of Empire, to be held at the Crystal Palace, from May to October next, under the patronage and with the support of his Majesty's Government—a distinction rarely accorded to events of this kind.

The pageant promises to be one of the greatest historical spectacles ever witnessed, for neither money nor pains is being spared in the effort to make the twenty-four scenes, which are to be enacted, accurate representations of events of the various periods selected. The costumes and the dresses for this huge undertaking are in themselves a very big item, and some idea of the work that is being done is the way of dressing the pageant in the exact mode of the respective periods may be gathered from the fact that there are no fewer than 15,000 performers taking part in the various scenes.

In order that every little detail of the costumes may be absolutely accurate, a research committee was formed, whose duty it was to trace in the various museums and private houses old masterpieces and tapestries portraying characters and scenes of stirring times long gone by. Then a large staff of artists, all specialists in this kind of work, was engaged to take copies from the paintings, and from these colored drawings the designs for the dresses were executed.

Of the ten thousand or more costumes required for the pageant there are nearly seven thousand already completed, work which necessitated a staff of over 200 workers being engaged practically night and day during the past twelve months. All the material employed in the manufacture is of the finest quality, and all the principals, and there are many hundreds of them, will be clad in the finest satins, silks, and richest velvets, compatable with the dignity of the characters they are impersonating.

It will thus be seen that the cost of dressing the pageant alone is a very big item of expenditure, for the dresses range in price from two pounds to thirty guineas, the latter price having been paid for the outfit for the lady who will play the part of Queen Elizabeth.

Another important item is the armour of the knights. It is doubtful whether there is sufficient available armour in the country for the hundreds of characters that will be thus clad in the pageant, so it was decided to manufacture special suits for the occasion. In order to do this a special armoury has been established at the Crystal Palace, where no fewer than 80 workmen are busily engaged in turning out the mail armour. The chain armour, another big item in itself, has been contracted out.

Ald. Kerneghan Charges That Fire Hose is Left Uncoupled On the Streets For Hours

Chief Howard Begs to Differ---Rigs Are Always Loaded Up in Preparation for Fire Before Wet Hose is Taken Back to Hall

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met in the city committee rooms last night, when there were present Mayor Morrow, and chairman Ald. Morgan, and Aldermen Kerneghan, Metheral, Graham and Edgar.

McBRIDE'S SALARY.

Ald. Kerneghan moved, seconded by Ald. Graham,—That Foreman McBride's pay be advanced to the second year grade, dating from March 1st.—Carried.

This is disciplining McBride who was discharged on a misunderstanding and re-engaged within a few days. He thus loses a few months' increase, as a second year man, which he would have been receiving, had not the said discharge and re-engagement occurred.

His Worship was not in sympathy with the disciplining of McBride in this manner.

KERNEGHAN AFTER THE CHIEF.

Ald. Kerneghan—"Can anyone tell me the reason that fire hose is left two or three days on the streets after a fire, not uncoupled, for rigs to drive over, it is?" Ald. Kerneghan quoted Murphy's recent fire on Smith street as an instance of this neglect of hose, and also a fire in South City. He took back the two or three days, however, in the case of Smith street, and substituted "24 hours anyway."

Again, Ald. Kerneghan thought some of the drivers did not know the city.. In order to reach the Smith street fire, he said, "they drove to the top of Smithtown Hill and down Auburn street. The alarm was rung in from Braund's box. The horses were in poor shape on reaching the fire."

Ald. Graham—"Run any horse that distance and it will be winded."

Ald. Kerneghan thought that perhaps there are not regular drivers for the teams.

The Committee here adjourned to visit the fire hall.

Ald. Kerneghan—"We should go there when the hose is all over the floor, and trodden underfoot by the men. They have been scrubbing the place since four o'clock this morning."

Ald. Morgan—"You'll find everything in good shape."

Ald. Graham—"Yes, at any time, you'll find the hall kept as well as any in Canada."

Ald. Kerneghan—"Why is it that at a late fire the hook and ladder wagon was out four minutes ahead of the hose rig?"

The Mayor—"Should a team be out exercising when an alarm is rung it takes time to reach the hall. The brigade get out in quick time."

Ald. Morgan—"There's no mistake about it; they can get out on record time."

HOSE QUESTION AGAIN.

Subsequently the hose question alluded to above was brought up in the fire hall in Chief Howard's presence, by the Mayor, who wanted the charge enquired into above board.

Chief Howard flatly denied ever leaving any hose out twenty-four hours. At Murphy's fire, at two in the afternoon, the hose was brought in at five; they had been all uncoupled and laid at the side of the road. After a fire it is customary to leave the hose while the rigs return to the hall and load up again in readiness for another call. The hose is then sent after. This is a protective measure in the city's interest. Then no hose is left lying around the fire hall unless the tower is full of wet hose drying.

Ald. Kerneghan said he could bring witnesses that on three occasions hose had been left uncoupled on the streets for rigs to drive over.

The Chief begged to differ and the matter dropped.

THE VETO BILL NEXT MONDAY

Government Intends to Force the Measure Through—Will Create New Peers If Necessary.

London, Feb. 13.—Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons to-day that he would introduce the Government's veto bill next Monday.

As evidence of the Government's intention to force this measure through John W. Gulland, the Scottish Liberal Whip, stated in a speech at Edinburgh this afternoon that he was busy just now compiling a list of men who would accept peerages with the object of passing the veto bill in the Upper Chamber, in the event that the Conservative peers proved recalcitrant.

Dr. BEATTIE NESBITT IS CLOSE TO THE BORDER

TORONTO POLICE ARE SURE HE IS NOT AT ISLAND "F"—WITH HIS FAMILY.

Believed to be Directing His Business Interests in Toronto by Long Distance Telephone.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, first president of the Farmers' Bank, is probably within 150 miles of Toronto It is probable that he is in more or less regular communication with at least four people in this city by telegraph, mail and telephone. In fact long distance would be his ideal medium for directing his business interests here.

The charges against Dr. Nesbitt are not extraditable. The authorities declare that there is no charge that can be laid against him that could be sustained in contested extradition proceedings. Therefore no police circulars are dogging the footsteps of the fat and jovial doctor and banking facilities are sufficiently convenient to make life close to the border worth living.

Those who think that Dr. Nesbitt is still at Island "F" are mistaken. The police have every reason to believe that he is beyond Canadian jurisdiction and they do not doubt that he is in a comfortable room in a high class hotel not far beyond the border.

Dr. Nesbitt's connection with the Farmers' Bank has made him an exile but not a prisoner. It is not likely that sentiment will prompt him to change his position.

CARGO VALUED AT $393,000

St. John, N.B., Feb. 13.—What is declared to be probably the most valuable cargo ever sent from a Canadian port is on board the C.R.R. port is on board the C.P.R. liner Empress of Ireland, from this port Friday, for Liverpool. The value is $393,000. Included are two tons of Cobalt bar silver and 250 tons nickel copper matte, the latter for British navy armour plate.

OVER TWO MILLION PEOPLE STARVING

TWO AND A HALF MILLIONS ARE DEPENDENT UPON CHARITY.

To Tide the Suffering Provinces Over Till Next Harvest Fully a Million Dollars Will be Required.

New York, Feb. 13.—The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions has received from its missionaries in the Province of Anhui, China, an account of the famine conditions prevailing there. The missionaries declare that at least a million dollars will be needed to tide the suffering provinces over till the next harvest time. Crop conditions are so bad, they add, that it will take the district several years to get back to normal conditions in the flooded districts.

The Rev. E. C. Lobenstine, who made a long trip of inspection through the flooded districts around to Hwai-Yuen Mission Station writes that "the inhabitants are face to face with the worst famine in their history. The rainfall last summer was the greatest, of which there is any record, and the autumn crops were a total failure over a region of approximately seven thousand square miles. It is estimated that two and a half million persons are practically starving, and the death roll of the coming months is bound to be very great. For six months hundreds of thousands will be absolutely destitute and more than one million persons will be dependent upon charity.

MISS LE NEVE LOSES SUIT

Half Sister of Mrs. Crippen is Awarded the Estate by the Court—Will Set Aside.

London, Feb. 13.—Ethel Clare Le Neve, the fair typist for love of whom Dr. H. H. Crippen slew his wife, Belle Elmore Crippen, to-day lost her fight for the Crippen estate when the courts awarded it to Mrs. Theresa Hunn, of Brooklyn, a half sister of the slain wife.

The Occupants Safe

Lindsay Man Loses His House—Was Away Visiting at the Time.

Lindsay, Ont., Feb. 13.—A bad fire broke out in a house occupied by Mr. Jos. Curtin last night. The occupant and his family were missing, and it was feared that Mr. Curtin was burned as the fire started in a bed-room. However, Mr. Curtin turned up this morning, when it was learned that he had been visiting his parents just outside the town.

Fire Brigade Supplies for the Current Year

No Fire Alarm Boxes East of Park Street—The Business Deliberations of the Committee Interupted by a Chimney Fire.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee made an official inspection of the fire hall last night, and found everything spick and span as usual. They went over, with Chief Howard, a list of supplies he is asking for, and granted the following:

Four Pole Axes.
Two Steel Crow Bars.
Six Rubber Coats (when wanted).
One White Rubber Coat for Chief.
Four Black Leather Helmets.
Two 5-gallon Chemical Tanks.
One 20-foot Extension Ladder.
One 12-foot Folding Ladder for Chief's wagon.
Rubber Tires for Chief's wagon.
500 Feet of Hose.
Three Belts and Three Wrenches.
One or Two Rubber or Woolen Rugs
Eight Pump Valves.
100 Feet of Small Hose for Washing Rigs.
Two Mop Wringers.
Lumber with which to build 8 or 9 clothes closets.
Fly Wheel for Alarm Boxes.
Billiard Table Cloth and Cushions.
Six Pairs Rubber Boots (if wanted)

The Committee will purchase a hose tester if their appropriation will permit.

Five additional alarm boxes will also probably be furnished. There is not a fire alarm box west of Park street; and others are needed on George street, urged Chief Howard.

There is 4100 feet of hose in the Hall, some of which is full of pinholes. The department is usually allowed 500 feet each time a renewal is made. Hose has gone up from 90c and 95c to $1.10 per foot.

The committee agreed that it would be good policy to purchase a quantity of hose each year, to keep the fire hall well equipped in this respect. It was generally conceded that 1911 will be an easy year in regard to supplies for this department.

AN ALARM.

In the midst of the committee's deliberations a genuine alarm was rung from the corner of Concession and Hazlett streets, East City, and the hall was immediately a scene of well-disciplined activity—every man and horse to his place without any confusion, and away in commendable time. In fact it took the brigade just 17 seconds to get out of the hall.

STREET LIGHTS NOT BURNING

The question of reporting street lights not burning arose incidentally and it was agreed that if people will report to Ald. Morgan, chairman of the F. W. and L. Committee, or the Fire Chief, any street lights not burning during schedule hours, the matter will be immediately looked into.

CHARLOTTE ST. CROSSING.

Fire Chief offered that the Grand Trunk Tracks on Charlotte street should be illuminated by incadescent lamps on scheduled moonlight nights when the moon is obscured by clouds. The arc lamps are not burning on such occasions, which renders this crossing a dangerous point for pedestrians. The committee will go into this matter.

FIREMEN PRESS FOR INCREASE IN WAGES

Married Men Estimate That It Costs Them $12.66 To Live Decently---Their Salary is $9.59

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee held last week, Fire Chief Howard asked for his men an increase of 10 cents per day. This question was again considered last night with the following results:

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral,—That the men get an increase of 10c a day providing the time is deducted from the Chief's salary.—Lost.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, in amendment,—that no action be taken.—Carried.

Consequently the men will get no increase on the Committee's recommendation.

THE MEN'S WAGES.

The firemen's wages per year are scheduled as follows:

Chief	$1250
Assistant Chief	700
Engineer	650
First year men	500
Second year men	550
Third year men	575

Earlier in the evening at the fire all the men submitted to the Chief the cost of living each week for the 'average married fireman.' One man has six children, and another five. There are eleven married men on the brigade. The men's weekly estimate of living expenses was as follows:

Rent	$2.50
Groceries	4.00
Butcher	2.00
Bread	.70
Vegetables	.50
Coal	1.25
Clothes	1.00
Milk	.21
Light	.50
	$12.66

The men's weekly wage the first year is $9.59; with an increase of $50 the second year, and another $25 the third year.

At the fire hall when the committee were officially inspecting the same, Chief Howard submitted the above figures and earnestly pressed for an increase of 10c per day for the brigade, excepting himself. The matter was not re-opened by the committee.

Without going deeply into the question, it is quite evident that a fireman living up to the foregoing estimate, cannot out of the salary allotted the rank and file men, indulge in much tobacco or five cent shows, to say nothing of paying insurance. The question arises can he live cheaper these days. One thing is quite certain—the position under the present schedule, is far from desirable for a man with a family.

Frontenacs will Play Grillers Here Tonight

Toronto, Feb. 13.—An imperfect knowledge of the French language has caused an unfortunate mix-up in the junior O.H.A. series, and the trouble has come from a quarter where it was least expected, as the Kingston Frontenacs' management is noted for its strict observance of the rules.

It has been found that W. R. Marchand, the Frontenacs' goalkeeper, is over the age limit. The management had considerable trouble in locating Marchand's birthplace, and this was finally found to be in some obscure parish an the Province of Quebec.

A record of Marchand's birth and baptism was found, and this was embodied in a declaration written in French and forwarded to the Frontenacs. According to this document, Marchand was born in October, 1890, and baptized on August 20, 1891. In the incorrect translation; both at Kingston and at O.H.A. headquarters here, it appeared, however, that Marchand was born in August, 1891 and baptized in Octobe

Roots and Branches of British Peerage Founded in Thievery, and Shame

Many of England's Greatest Nobles Owe Their Wealth to Spoilation of the Church--- Duke of St. Alban's Descended from Nell Gwyn

What's to become of the Peers? The question after six weeks' quiescense, comes to life again with the reassembling of Parliament. Canadians who feel that the claims put forward for hereditary-second-chamber rules are ridiculous are not likely to experience any weakening in their position after reading the following extracts from an article by Mr. Henry Lucy (Toby, M.P.), in T.P.'s Magazine, tracing some of the "roots and branches of the British Peerage."

Disraeli wrote in "Coningsby:" "We owe the English peerage to three sources—the spoliation of the Church the open and flagrant sale of honors by the elder Stuarts, and the borough mongering of our own times." It will be observed in the details that follow how accurately and exactly this sentence sums up the long story.

The Earl of Pembroke for example, inherits Wilton Abbey from William Herbert, a frequenter of the Court of Henry VIII., who filched it from the Abbots. He lived into the reign of Queen Mary, who made him an Earl. Wilton Abbey was not the only portion of the plunder of the Church tossed to him by a friendly master. Monastic houses and manors in Glamorganshire, Dorset, Wilts, and Herefordshire were grabbed. Wilton Abbey, upon the site of which the Earl of Pembroke's homestead now stands added to the thousands of acres whose rent roll to-day sustains the earldom.

The Barony of North is another of the ornaments of the House of Lords which had its birth in the time of Henry VIII. The founder of this family was, to begin with, Clerk of the House of Commons. King Henry, having more monastic land than he knew what to do with, established for its management what was called a Court of Augmentations. Of this he appointed North Treasurer with opportunity for many pickings. When in course of time the sturdy Defender of the Faith was gathered to his fathers and wives, Queen Mary came to the throne, and with the help of fire and sword, re-established the Papish faith. North, prototype of the Vicar of Bray, forthwith became a Catholic making up for earlier heterodoxy by persecuting the Protestants, sallying forth upon them from the monastic residence he still retained. The Queen was so pleased with him that she made him a peer.

ENGLAND'S DARKEST HOUR.

The Lord North who looms most largely in English history was Prime Minister to George III., to whose counsel the United States largely owes its being. The English point of view is presented in a sentence from J. R. Green's History, where it is written; "The period of Lord North's administration was the darkest hour of English history."

According to the principle of heredity by which Amurath to Amurath succeeds in the House of Lords, the British army of to-day should be commanded by the Duke of Marlborough. Perhaps, to be inflexibly just, the Duke of Wellington should be Joint Controller. Logically, one cannot limit the principle. If the eldest son of a peer succeeds to the estate and the legislative functions of his father, he by equal right should become heritor of his business. However, that fence is shied at, and the heirs to the conquerors of Blenheim and Waterloo to-day walk the paths of peace, not to say of mediocrity. The Duke of Wellington content to enjoy the tenancy of Apsley House and Strathfieldsaye, with a rental exceeding £31,000, plus a pension of £4,000 granted by Parliament to the Great Duke, takes no part in public life. He may be counted upon for a vote when the backwoodsmen are whipped up to give the Commons a lesson. Otherwise, he is a rare visitor to the Legislative Chamber, and still more rarely disturbs its stillness by articulate speech.

A PRODIGY OF TURPITUDE.

The Duke of Marlborough rather fancies himself as a statesman, and is not indisposed to give the House and the country the advantage of his counsel. Up to the present time his nearest approach to a political coup has been an adaptation of Canning's famous boast about calling into being a new world to redress the balance of the old. Shortly after he succeeded to the dukedom he married a rich American heiress, whose dower relieved Blenheim from some of the effects of the extravagance of his father.

The country thinks gratefully of the first Duke of Marlborough as the soldier who in a perilous moment saved the State. His personal history was akin to that of founders of peerages already mentioned, and others too numerous to name. Shrewsbury, who had an awkward habit of describing a man in a sentence, presents John Churchhill, first Duke, as "a man who owed his rise to his sister's dishonor, who had been kept by the most profuse, imperious, and shameless of harlots, whose public life to those who can look steadily through the blaze of genius and glory will appear a prodigy of turpitude."

The sister was Arabella, mistress of the Duke of the Duke of York, brother to Charles II. Not to be out of the family business, Churchill paid court to Barbara Palmer, whom Charles created Duchess of Cleveland. She paid him not only in love, but money, the latter, of course, drawn from the King's purse, a receptacle fed by the hapless taxpayer.

The Duke of York, later King James, being head of the Army, looked after Arabella's brother, who made rapid advances. The patronage was rewarded by Churchill's taking a leading part in the plot that exiled King James and brought to the throne William of Orange. In turn Churchill plotted against William, paying court to Anne, who, when she became Queen, made him a Duke with a pension of £5,000 a year, this to be supplemented by backsheesh received from Army contractors and a percentage on the pay of foreign troops. The scandal leaking forth, the House of Commons passed a vote of grave censure on the Duke, and process was taken under direction of Attorney-General to recapture the plunder. The effort was not more successful in degree than was the analogus one in the case of the reverend and noble Earl of North. Still, as the old man morethan once remarked to little Peterkin, Blenheim was a glorious victory.

Amongst the most richly endowed English peerages is the Dukedom of Portland. Its fortunes do not date farther back than the time of William III. In his train came a Bentinck who abundantly verified the national characteristic annotated by Canning's

In matters of commerce the fault of the Dutch is giving to little and asking too much.

Bentinck, giving nothing but the service of a courtier, asked for everything. King William unexpectedly coming to the heritage of a rich country gave him much. A catalogue of royal favors transferred from po...

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss said to me why I was off work so much and I told him my trouble. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & K. nearly as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

A NATION IN THE MAKING.

Piet Cronje, general of the Boer armies, is dead. In Canada, the name of the dead commander is associated with Paardeberg, the scene of his last stand and the place where many Canadians laid down their lives for the sake of the British Empire. It is safe to say that the philosophical historian of the future will place the Boer war in the front rank of wars of the later Victotia era. The Jameson raid was a picturesque escapade of filibusters that ended in disaster. The Boer war was undignified in its inception and inglorious in its incidents and in its immediate outcome. It was well, indeed, that an end had been made of Krugerism in the Transvaal; it was ill that the demand for the abolition of Krugerism should have arisen mainly out of the necessities of British commerce and the ambitions of greedy capital. Fortunately, there is an aspect of the struggle which is more pleasing to contemplate. To the Boer the war became a fight for hearth and home; throughout the British dominions it came to be regarded as a struggle for the maintenance of the most humane imperial power in ancient or modern times. In this spirit Roberts and Kitchener gave of their valor and experience and the daughter nations gave of their youth and virility, to the ending of the war. And now a United South Africa sits among the nations of the British Empire.

Footprints in Snow Caused Arrests

Police Nabbed Three Young Men who are Now Charged With Robbery.

Yesterday Robert Powell, appeared before Magistrate Dumble, charged with receiving stolen goods, consisting of a case of eggs, the property of Wm. Scott & Co., East City. The goods were alleged to have been stolen by Bruce Roy and two of his friends.

On Saturday, Fred Raymond, Bruce Roy and Albert Lafreneer were charged with breaking into Scott & Co's store house and stealing therefrom a case of eggs. They pleaded guilty and the circumstances pointed to the fact that Powell had received the goods, knowing that they were stolen. He pleaded not guilty, however, so the evidence will be taken on Friday when the other young men are being sentenced. The three young men were also charged with attempting to break into the store of Sam. Londry, with an intent to commit an indictable offence. On Friday night Mr. Londry heard some one trying to break into his store and telephoned for the police. Sergt. Adams and P. C. McGinty were quickly on the scene, but the would-be thieves had departed. Their foot-prints could be easily seen in the newly-fallen snow, however, and the two officers tracked them to the home of Mr. Powell, 558 Park street, north.

The officers entered and found the three young men in bed, and they stated that they had been there from 10 o'clock, but the fresh snow on the boots of the trio gave the game away, and they were promptly arrested with the before stated results. A search of the house was made, and the eggs and several other articles including a turkey and a couple of chickens were found.

The three young men above mentioned admitted to the Chief that they had revolvers, but would not tell where they kept them. The Police went to the Powell home and made a thorough search, with the result that they found a box of ammunition. Yesterday, Mr. Powell came to the Police station with the revolvers and three boxes of ammunition. He stated that he had found the revolvers in the bed tick, along with the ammunition. There were two of them of 32 calibre, and one 38. The 38 was loaded, and was in a pouch on a belt, which buckled around the waist. One of the revolvers was a new one, and had evidently never been shot off. This fact would indicate that the prisoners are amateurs, and were just getting set up in business.

The young men admitted that they had the revolvers with them, when they were at Londry's, also at Scott & Co's. More discoveries are expected to be made.

THE RED YEAR

—By—
LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

"We shall get neither food nor money till some one clears those accursed Feringhis off the hill," growled a deep voice close behind Malcolm.

There was something familiar in the tone. Frank edged away and glanced at the speaker, whom he recognized instantly as a subadar in his old regiment.

But now a craning of necks and a sudden hush of the animated talk showed that some development was toward. Servants entered with cushions, which they disposed around the foot of the throne and at the base of its canopy. A few nobles and court functionsaries lounged in, two gorgeously appareled guards came through the doorway, and behind them tottered a feeble old man, robed in white, and wearing on his head an aigrette of Bird of Paradise plumes, fastened with a gold clasp in which sparkled an immense emerald.

Malcolm had seen Bahadur Shah only once before. He remembered how decorous and dignified was the Mogul court when Britain paid honor to an ancient dynasty. And now, what a change! The aged emperor had to lift a trembling hand to obtain a hearing, while, ever and anon, even during his short address, belated officers and troopers clattered in on horseback, and did not dismount within the precincts of the sacred Hall of Audience itself.

He began by explaining timorously that while affairs remained in their present unsettled condition he could not arrange matters as he would have wished. He knew that there were arrears of pay and that the food supply was irregular.

"But you do not help me," he said, with some display of spirit. "Respectable citizens tell me that you plunder their houses and debauch their wives and daughters. I have issued repeated injunctions prohibiting robbery and oppression in the city, but to no avail."

He was interrupted with loud murmurs.

"What matters it about the bazaarfolk, O King," yelled a sepoy. "We want food, not a sermon."

The Emperor seemed to fire up with indignation at the taunt, but he sank into the chair on the throne. He raised a hand twice to quiet the mob, and at last they allowed him to continue.

"I am weary and helpless," he said faintly. "I have resolved to make a vow to pass the remainder of my life in service acceptable to Allah. I will relinquish my title and take the garb of a mouliah. I am going to the shrine of Khwaja Sahib, and thence to Mecca, where I hope to end my sorrowful days."

This was not the sort of consolation that the mob expected or wanted. A hawl of execration burst forth, but it was stayed by the entrance of two people from the private portion of the palace.

There was no need that Malcolm should ask who the pale, haughty, beautiful woman was who came and stood by her father's side. Roshinara Begum did not share the Emperor's dejection. She faced the rebels now with the air of one who knew them for the canaille they were. But that was only for an instant. A consummate actress, she had a part to play, and she bent and whispered something to Bahadur Shah with a great show of pleased vivacity.

A man who accompanied her stepped to the front of the throne, and his words soon revealed to Malcolm that he was listening to the Shahzada, the heir apparent, Mirza Moghul.

"Why do you come hither to disturb the King's pious meditations?" he cried angrily. "You were better employed at the batteries, where your loyal comrades are now firing a salute of twenty-one guns to celebrate the capture of Agra by the Neemuch Brigade."

He paused. His statement was news to all present, as, indeed, it well might be, seeing that it was a lie. But his half petulant, half boastful tone was convincing, and several voices were raised in a cry of "Shabash! Good hearing!"

"This is no time to create mischief and disunion," he went on loudly. "Help is coming from all quarters. Gwalior, Jhansi, Neemuch and Lucknow are sending troops to aid us. In three or four days, if Allah be willing, the Ridge will be taken, and every one of the base unbelievers bumbled and ruined and sent to the fifth circle of hell."

The man had the actor's trick of making his points. Waiting until an exultant roar of applause had died away, he delivered his most effective hit.

"At the very time you dared to burst in on the Emperor's privacy he was arranging a loan with certain local bankers that will enable all arrears of pay to be made up. To-day there will be a free issue of cattle, grain and rice. Go, then! Tell these things to all men, and trust to the King of Kings and his faithful advisers, of whom I am at once the nearest and the most obedient, to lead you to victory against the Nazarenes."

For the hour these brave words sufficed. The sepoys trooped out and Malcolm went with them. A backward glance revealed the princess and her brother engaged in a conversation with Bahadur Shah and a courtier or two. Their gestures and manner of argument did not bear out the joyful tidings brought to the conclave by the Shahzada. Indeed, Frank guessed that they were soundly rating the miserable monarch for having allowed himself to speak so plainly to his beloved subjects.

Malcolm knew there was not a word of truth in Mirza Moghul's brief speech. The Gwalior contingent had gone to Cawnpore. All the men Bareilly had to send had already arrived with Bakht Khan, the "havildar of artillery," who was now the King's right-hand man. Jhansi, Neemuch, and Lucknow had enough troubles of their own without helping Delhi, and, as for the bankers' aid, it was easy to guess the nature of the "loan" that the Emperor hoped to extract from them.

Indeed, while Malcolm and Chumru and their new associates were wandering through the streets and making the circuit of the western wall, there was another incipient riot in the fort. Delay in issuing the promised rations enraged the hungry troops. A number hurried again to the Diwan-i-Am, clamored for the king's presence, and

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roselyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

WAR'S NEW HORROR

The Developmenet of Flying Machines Brings Many New Methods of Destruction into Consideration

Two interesting articles relative to the employment of aeroplanes or dirigibles in war, recently appeared in an issue of the Journal of Paris. The first of these deals with experiments made by some officers of Chalais-Meudon in destroying dirigibles. These experiments were made at the Eiffel Tower, and the method employed was to drop arrows, each carrying a small explosive charge, which burst on coming in contact with the envelope of the balloon, setting fire to the gas. A number of small captive balloons were secured round the tower, and the arrows were dropped on them by hand from the first stage. In every case the arrows exploded, igniting the gas and destroying the balloons. Further experiments will be made at varying altitudes. The idea is that an aeroplane or a dirigible with superior speed shall get above the enemy's dirigible and drop the arrows upon it in passing.

The other article, which deals with the employment of aeroplanes as fighting machines, and not mere instruments of reconnaissance involves a good deal of somewhat dry mathematical calculations; but the object of the writer is to show that it is feasible for an aviator to fly over hostile camps discharging bullets broadcast from his machine, and thereby inflicting considerable losses. He began by pointing out that aeroplanes have made flights of sixty miles carrying two passengers. If it is possible to do this, it would, according to the writer in Le Journal, be equally possible for the aviator to carry a quantity of bullets equal to the weight of two passengers. These need not be fired from a gun, because, according to the well-known law which governs the speed of falling bodies, the bullets only require to be released at a sufficient height to acquire sufficient velocity on reaching the ground to kill both men and horses. According to this law a bullet dropped from a height of 3,200 feet would have a velocity of about 460 feet per second on striking the ground. This altitude is easily within the range of aeroplanes, and bullets falling from that height would certainly kill any man or horse if struck in a vital spot. The projectile of the French rifle weighs 25 grammes, and 100 kilogrammes, or about 225 pounds' weight, would contain some 4,000 bullets. One hundred kilogrammes would not, of course, weigh so much as two passengers, and, therefore, could easily be carried by a sufficiently powerful aeroplane. The aviator flying above massed troops could release this cloud of missiles, and probably cause a great number of casualties. He could fly a long way inside the enemy's position of attack, not among the scattered firing lines, but the reserves collected in thick masses of troop on the march, or even soldiers at rest in their tents in camp. In favorable circumstances an aeroplane could make four or five journeys of this kind daily, and fire the equivalent of 20,000 rounds of ammunition. The work could be repeated every day, and the French writer estimates that in this way each aeroplane would be equivalent to four regiments of infantry.

The writer also calculates that in attacking troops in masses, such as on the march or in reserve, at least one bullet in a hundred should be effective, so that each flight of the aeroplane would mean one hundred men killed or wounded. France now possesses at least fifty aeroplanes, which, as the writer estimates each to be equal to three thousand infantry, is equivalent to an army of 150,000 men. Apart from its mere distructive effect, the hail of bullets from an aeroplane might have very far-reaching effects in cases where it was able to be launched, for instance, against a group of general officers or the headquarters staff. It is also pointed out that if the aeroplane is fired at by the soldiers while overhead all the bullets discharged will fall back again on earth with destructive effect upon themselves, added to the effect of those dropped by the aviator. Finally the writer sets out the proposition that aeroplanes used in this way would be vastly superior to artillery as a death-dealing instrument. He urges that experiments should be begun immediately to ascertain the best method of employing them, and to learn the shape of bullet which will give the best penetration when dropped from a height.

MOOSE LEAVING MAINE

And Going to New Brunswick, Says Boston Doctor

Dr. Charles M. Whitney and Dr. A. C. Pearce, of Boston, recently spent some time in the backwoods of New Brunswick taking pictures of big game and enjoying life in the woods. Dr. Whitney is said to have the finest series of big game pictures in the world, and obtained between sixty and seventy more as a result of his recent trip. Dr. Pearce stated: "The moose are leaving Maine and coming to New Brunswick. I am sure I am right in my statement. I can also say that the moose down here appear wiser than those in Maine and more difficult to approach. Dr. Whitney saw over two hundred on his trip and I myself saw over one hundred. Some fine specimens were included, and the sportsmen coming to New Brunswick should increase annually."

LIVE GEESE AS DECOYS

Mr. George Carruthers, of Winnipeg, has trained some live geese as decoys and they act most effectively. The geese appear to know that they are safe however fierce may be the cannonade, and accordingly they continue to call down the passing flocks by every goosey wile of which they are capable. Many offers have been made for the use of these trained decoys, but their owner prefers to keep them under the cover of his own gun.

LAMENESS AND HORSE-SHOEING

Many Defects in Horses' Feet Can be Cured in the Blacksmith Shop

Dr. W. J. Taylor, a noted veterinarian, has made some interesting suggestions about horse shoeing. Many of the defects which cause lameness [illegible] to this experienced teacher can be cured or relieved by proper shoeing. For corn, remove the pressure by cutting away the hoof at the point of contact with the corn, says Dr. Taylor, so as to relieve the pressure, and support the shoe where necessary by a half-bar. There are two kinds of founder, the true foundered or the hoof founder, and the grain founder. The symptoms of these two are very much alike, but the former can be recognized by the fact that in the condition the hoof instead of being arched upward between the frog and the edge of the hoof bulges down ward. This can be relieved by shoeing with a full-bar. The grain founder is due to feeding when the animal is too warm. For contracted hoof, the shoe should be hinged at the toe, and provided with a thumb screw at the heel by which the tips of the shoe can be gradually pressed apart. For forging shorten the hoof at the toe and put on an extra plate on the shoe at the toe, the effect of which will be to weight the hoof and so bring it to the ground a little sooner. Toe crack may be caused either from some injury to the hoof, in which case it cannot be cured, or it may be merely the result of lack of shoes. In the second case it can be cured and in either case it cal be relieved. Cut away the hoof slightly just at the lower end of the crack to relieve the pressure, and hold the cracked edges together by a copper plate screwed on the outer surface of the hoof with short screws. Navicular disease is a disease of the coffin-joint above the hoof, and cannot be located by the finger as there is no external sore spot. The symptom is lameness when the horse is first taken from the stable a lameness which disappears temporarily when the horse has been driven for a time. This cannot be easily cured, but the lameness can be relieved by putting on what is called a double-rocker shoe, a shoe thicker in the middle that at either toe or heel. This distributes the pressure more evenly and relieves the shock more than a flat shoe. The hoof should be kept as soft as possible by an occasionall soaking, or by allowing the horse to stand on damp earth.

TREES VS. SILKWORMS

Many Valuable Varieties of Silk Obtained from Trees

A kind of vegetable silk is obtained from a tree attaining the size of an ordinary chestnut tree, which abounds in Paraguay. It can be woven into threads, but the chief use for it at present is for the stuffing of quilts and cushions, for which purpose it seems well adapted on account of its extreme lightness. This silk resembles a glossy down, but grows in balls about six inches long and about four and a half inches in diameter.

Near Stettin, in Germany, there is a manufactory that turns out skein silk made from wood pulp. It is said that no special kind of wood is needed to furnish the pulp. The latter, after undergoing a chemical treatment, is driven by hydraulic pressure through very fine tubes. The strands thus formed are, separately, hardly perceptible to the eye. Eighteen of them twisted together make a thread of silk. The silk is very soft and of a cream color. It is not as strong as genuine silk, but there is said to be a large demand for it abroad.

GERVAIS CREAM CHEESE

This dainty little cheese is made from a mixture of new milk and cream, the mixture being in the proportion of two parts of milk to one part of 22 per cent. cream. Take a quantity of this mixture, and bring to a temperature of 65 degrees F. Add rennet at the rate of 6½ drams per 100 pounds of the mixture, or enough to bring a coagulation in three hours. When the coagulum is firm enough, dip out into huckaback cloths placed over the bowls, with a long-handled culture dipper. Then tie up by the four corners and hang to drain. The cloths should be previously scalded, and used wet. After the cheese has been hanging up for a few hours, open out the cloths and scrape down the sides to aid the draining; repeat the scraping at intervals of a few hours, until the cheese is firm enough to mould. Salting is done by means of sprinkling fine dry salt over the cheese, and working in with a table knife or bone spatula, at the rate of one ounce of salt to every four pounds of cheese.

The moulds should be lined with clean white blotting paper, and placed on a scalded straw mat or cloth, and the cheese pressed in with a bone spatula or spoon. In the winter time, a few drops of color added to the milk and cream before renneting, will improve the color of the cheese.

MENDACIOUS WINDOWS

Chancellor Prescott, of Carlisle, is anxious that stained-glass windows should tell the truth, and not represent the pictorial fiction of artists. He granted a faculty for a window which is to be erected in St. Aidan's Church Carlisle, in memory of the late Bishop Ware, of Barrow-in-Furness, subject to an amended design being submitted. He did not think angels usually wore coats-of-arms, and one of them was represented clad in the coat-of-arms of the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. Oswald, King of Northumbria, who died at the age of thirty-eight, was represented as an aged man, and the artists in stained glass will now have to make him look more youthful.

ELEPHANT SAVES A THOUSAND LIVES

It Takes Pilgrims from a Submerged Island to a Place of Safety—A Story from India

How an elephant saved a thousand lives is told in the "Pioneer" by its Afra correspondent, who mentions the wild rumors afloat about the disaster at the bathing festivities at Sorong, in the Agra division, and continues:—

Thousands of pilgrims had camped on a strip of land which had never before been flooded within the memory of the oldest residents.

There was a sudden rise in the tide of the Ganges, and the pilgrims were stranded on the spot where they were encamped, which had now become an island surrounded with deep water. The pilgrims who had the presence of mind to link arms and stand up, though immersed chest-deep in water, were saved but those who ran panic-stricken to regain terra firma fell into the deeper stream and were lost.

Rescue parties, headed by the Deputy collector of the locality and the police, arrived on the scene as soon as possible, and with the aid of boats and an elephant rescued the stranded pilgrims. The work done by the elephant, named Jung Bahadur, was wonderful.

Jung Bahadur belongs to a rais named Joer Jaswant Singh, who was on a visit to the fair, and his presence was providential. With ropes attached to his trappings, the elephant repeatedly swam out to the distressed pilgrims, who would cling on to the ropes and be landed in safe places. It is estimated that this noble animal saved at least one thousand lives.

The number drowned is put down at about two hundred, but as the pilgrims had thronged from all parts of India it is impossible to say how many were really drowned.

STATE LOSES FORTUNE

Relatives Obtain Possession of a Legacy Refused by Archbishop of Paris

A curious case has just been decided by the Civil Court of the Seine (Paris), which has pronounced against the State and in favor of two natural heirs. Just two years ago the Ricomtesse de Rainneville, who was of Russian origin, died, leaving the Archbishop of Paris sole legatee of her fortune, amounting to a million francs. The Archbishop having refused to accept the fortune, and the lady's natural heirs having been disinherited by her will, it fell in the ordinary course of things to the State, and, pending the final arrangements, a curator was appointed.

Such was the situation when the sister and nephew of the deceased came forward to claim the property. Their counsel argued that Madame de Rainneville having remained Russian at heart, and strongly disapproving of the policy of the Republic, it was preposterous that her money should go to the State. On the other hand, a learned barrister, on behalf of the curator, maintained that as the deceased lady had deliberately disinherited her relatives they had no right whatever to claim any advantage from the fact that the million francs had been declined by Mgr. Amette, to whom that sum had been bequeathed.

The Court, however, has pronounced in favor of the two natural heirs. The Dame de Rainneville entertained the most violent aversion for the French Government and for most of the statesmen who were in office during the last years of her life, and in most of her letters submitted to the Court she expressed herself relative to the French Government and its members in the most violent terms.

DEAD AT MADRID

Is the Last Descendant of Christopher Columbus

The Duke of Veragua, the last descendant of Christopher Columbus, has died at Madrid, after a long illness, aged 72. He was formerly Minister of Public Works, and also held the post of Minister of Marine. He went to America in 1892 as the official representative of Spain at the celebrations in commemoration of the discovery of the country by his illustrious ancestor.

A New Wagon Road.

A new wagon road has been constructed, partly by the Government and partly by the merchants of Edson, Alta., through to the Grande Prairie country, a distance of 165 miles from Edson, which is all practically completed and is reported to be remarkably level, with no heavy hills, and over which heavy loads may be drawn with ease. Road houses have also been established along this wagon road and settlers will be able to travel in comparative ease and at slight expense from Edson on the Grand Trunk Pacific this year in the course of a week where the former routes via Edmonton and Lesser Slave Lake occupied several months and very great cost. The whole distance to be traversed being over four times as long as the new route.

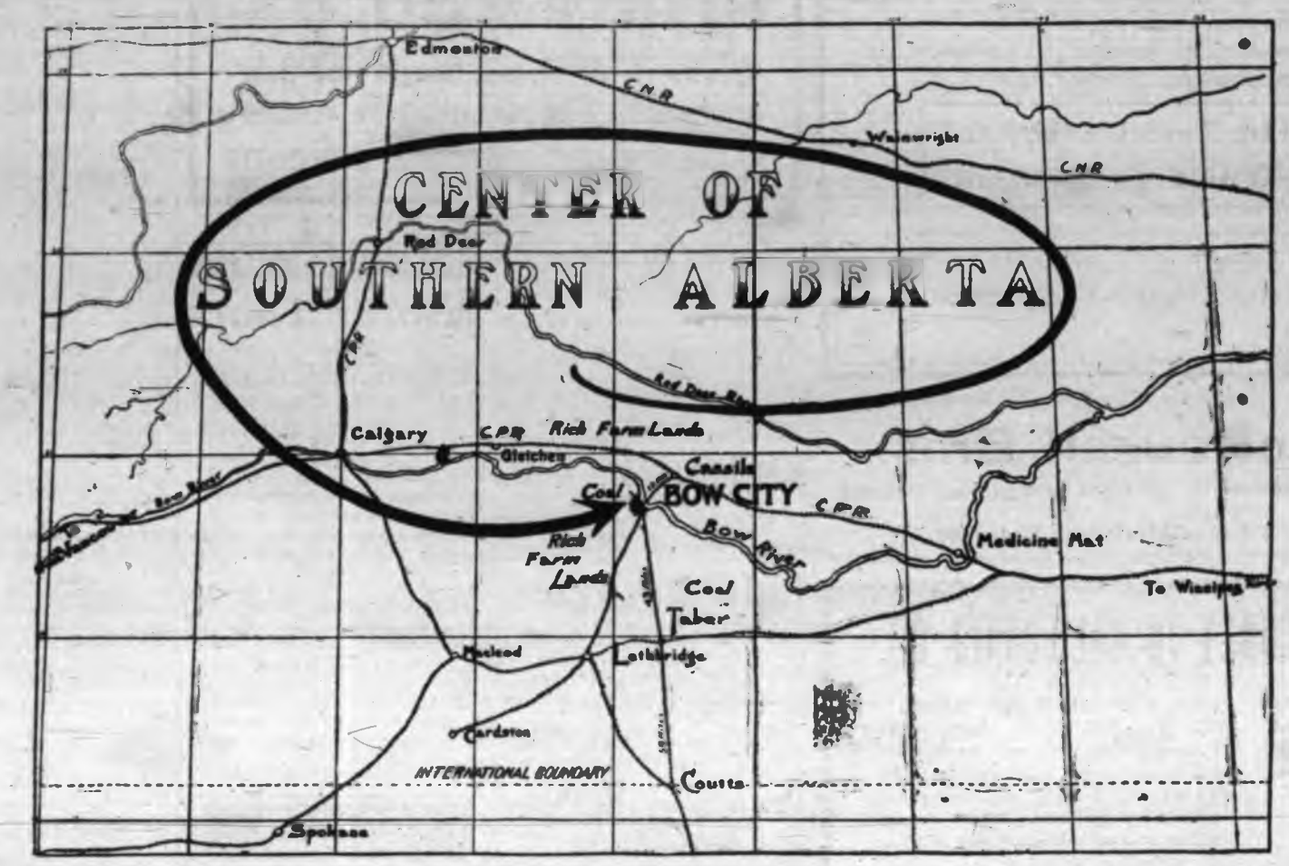
"GIVE YOUR SON A DEED"



If, by way of illustration, you will review the history of the men in your town who have made money out of real estate, you will find that in each and every instance their profits were made from real estate acquired at ground floor prices.

More money can be made by those who acquire a realty interest in a town at its inception per dollar invested than from investments made after a period of years.

Do you know that you can purchase with $5 cash a full sized residential lot in Bow City, Alberta

the logical location for a great city, a city which is destined to be known, the world over, as a market place annually for hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain, grown on the vast irrigated fields surrounding Bow City, a shipping point for coal from the great Bow Centre Collieries, and a purchasing depot for hundreds of prosperous farmers resident throughout Southern Alberta.

To-day is your opportunity to acquire an interest in Bow City at the ground floor price.

It will be too late six months hence, to apply for a lot in Bow City at the present prices and on such easy terms as are offered you in this advertisement.

Why not follow Russell Sage's advice given in a letter published some years ago to the fathers in the Western States:—

"Buy your son a lot in a town being the "centre of a great agricultural country—when "he comes of age that lot will be worth consid- "erable money and will provide a handsome "stake for him in life; it is at least most sub- "stantial life insurance—sure and certain."

Buy your son a $50 lot in Bow City, the coming metropolis of the western prairies. In a very short time he can re-sell the same at a big increase, which money he will find advantageous in business pursuits or in a college course.

Bow City, the centre of the great granary of Southern Albert has a future concerning which no sane business man or banker has any doubt.

When you are assured of the success of the city, when you have proven to you beyond the shadow of a doubt that Bow City will, in the very near future, be one of the most active, one of the most progressive towns on the Western prairies, you should not hesitate to acquire at least one $50 residential lot, when same is on sale on such easy terms as 10 per cent cash and the balance 10 per cent per month until paid—a deed at any time.

Bow City is in the heart of a famous irrigated farming belt whose farmers are assured of a crop every year. They are prosperous and their prosperity will naturally enhance the value of Bow City real estate.

The great coal mines of Bow City will furnish work for 1,000 to 1,500 miners daily, these miners will constitute a substantial basis for a successful city.

The present owners of Bow City have decided that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of spirituous liquors; they intend that this great mining and agricultural centre shall be free from any traffic in intoxicating drinks—it will be a clean city.

Bow City is the headquarters of a railway which taps a territory unparalleled for richness in crops and natural resources.

The Sale of Bow City lots opened but a few days ago

If you are desirous of acquiring a $50 residential lot close in you should lose no time in making application by wire direct to the General Agents of the townsite, or to the nearest sub-agent.

Do not delay by sending your application by mail.

Wire at once your reservation for one or more lots. On receipt of wire your name will be placed on the closest-in unsold lot or lots and same will be held in your name, allowing you sufficient time for your cash payment, mailed same day you wire, to travel from your home to the head office.

You may find it to your advantage, if you are desirous of securing a business opening, or a business lot, to write for copy of the plans, booklets and descriptive matter concerning Bow City, all of which may be had on application, free of charge.

BUSY HAIRDRESSERS

They are Trying to Create a Really New Fashion in Honor of the Coronation

The leading hairdressers of London are determined to produce a remarkable Coronation coiffure for next year, when it is hoped that a British design will lead the fashion.

The scheme was mooted a few days ago at an international hairdressing competition, and further elaborations of the idea will be made at various meetings which the Hairdressers' Guild will hold shortly.

Mr. Unwin, of Albert and Unwin, Regent Street, the president of the Hairdressers' Guild, gave full details of the proposed scheme.

"As you are aware, the Hairdressers' Guild endeavor to promote and establish genuine English fashions," he said, "and we hope that in a few years' time the excellence of workmanship in London will be more fully recognized that at the present moment.

"Many of the leading hairdressers are combining to hold a second annual exhibition in London next year, when the Coronation coiffure will be shown.

"Naturally, the work of evolving such a dressing is an arduous one, and it will be some time before all the final designs will be settled.

"I can confidently say that all the leading members of the hair-dressing profession will enter heart and soul into this scheme."

Mr. Unwin said that curls would play an important part in the dressing, and that the Greek style would be preserved.

The vogue for curls is an undying one, and a soft, rather high chignon of curls, will form an excellent support for those who wear coronets on the great occasion, while a soft bandeau of hair above the curls will give a dignified effect.

MANUEL NOT RICH

Representative of Ex-King Denies Recent Report

The Marquis de Soveral, representing King Manuel of Portugal, has denied the reports that King Manuel had telegraphed an offer of $500,000 to the authorities at Lisbon for the purchase of the Royal yacht Amelia.

The Marquis pointed out, says the London News Agency, that the yacht originally cost King Manuel's father only £60,000, and was now practically obsolete. "At the present moment," continued the marquis, "King Manuel is not in possession of such funds as would enable him to make an offer of anything like £100,000 for a yacht or anything else. It is doubtful whether the King has at the moment funds representing the sum of 100,000 reis (£23 4s.), let alone £100,000."

OFF TO WILD WEST

Two English Boys Had Made Some Great Preparations

A remarkable story was told at Bristol, England, when Thos. Burt, 17, who said he was from London, was remanded on a charge of wandering with a boy of 15. A police officer said he found the lads wearing spurs, one having his upside down. When he spoke they said they were horse-trainers, and were going for two horses they had bought. Each had an airgun, revolver in case, bowie knife, masks, and a complete outfit of highwayman, and "penny dreadfuls." They said they were going out to the Wild West of America, and had equipped themselves with money stolen in London.

A BRIDE FOR A DAY

Tragic Ending to a Honeymoon in Ireland Recently

In Belfast papers one Saturday recently appeared the announcement of the marriage of Hugh McBride, a well-known and wealthy civil engineer of Armagh. Tragically enough the notice of his death appeared the day previously.

Mr. McBride was married and died the same day. On October 25 he led to the altar at Albert Street Presbyterian Church, Belfast, his former stenographer. After the wedding the newly-married pair were proceeding to the railway station when the bridegroom was taken suddenly ill and died a few hours later in the local hospital.

It had been arranged that Mr. and Mrs. McBride should cross on the following Tuesday night to Liverpool with the object of proceeding with Mr. McBride's brother and wife, who were also recently married, to Vancouver, British Columbia.

After the funeral the latter, accompanied by the bride of a day, started on their journey to the Far West.

CALL ME "BERTIE"

Sir Herbert Tree has a keen sense of humor. The following story serves to illustrate this. Leaving the Carlton Hotel one evening for his adjoining theatre, he was considerably surprised to feel himself clapped on the shoulder by a young man he did not recollect ever having seen before, and greeted by the youthful stranger (possibly a chance acquaintance from the hotel) with "Hallos, Harry!" Turning a meek and retiring eye upon the clumsy disturber of his meditations, Tree quietly remarked, "My name isn't Harry—it's Herbert. But you may call me 'Bertie'!"

MISADVENTURES OF WELLMAN

The exciting finish to Mr. Wellman's attempt to cross the Atlantic in a dirigible adds one more to his list of startling experiences. Sixteen years ago he fitted out a ship for Polar work, which was crushed in the ice off Spitzbergen. Then he tried again, and this time fell into a crevice and suffered severe injury to one of his legs. Twice he has tried to reach the Pole by airship, but in the first place was driven back by storms, and in the second his airship was wrecked in its shed before he made a start.

HONOR DELAYED

After Forty Years English Soldier Receives Medal

Pte. Parnell, who was discharged from the Rifle Brigade, England, in 1880, after 12 years' service, was entitled to a medal with two clasps for the Fenian raids of 1864 and 1870, but for some reason he never received it. Now, after an interval of 40 years, he has received it through the intervention of Mrs. Walter Salmond, honorary secretary of the Derbyshire branch of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society. Parnell, who is 71, is blind, and an inmate of Derby Workhouse Infirmary, where the medal has been formally presented to him.

QUEER FOOD FOR BABIES

Mothers Who Give Them Beef, Onions and Bloaters

The meetings and conferences in connection with the Royal Sanitary Institute were continued at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton. The Countess of Chichester was unavoidably prevented from presiding at the conference of women on hygiene, and her place was taken by the Mayoress of Brighton. Among the papers read was one by Mrs. W. MacDonald, of Uxbridge, dealing with the feeding of infants. She said that many mothers did not know that pickled onions, corned beef and bloater heads were injurious food for their infants, and that in pure milk they had all the necessary nutrition to sustain infant life for the first six or eight months. One mother, when remonstrated with for giving her baby beef, said, "Well, what am I to do? He won't eat pork."

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise of earning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

Wives of Magnates Are Very Unhappy

Andrew Carnegie in Talk to Girl Workers Tells of Rich Spouses' Woes.

New York, Feb. 14.—Andrew Carnegie, while calling on J. A. Sleicher the editor, was introduced to the young women employed by the Leslie-Judge Company at Fifth avenue and Twenty-seventh street, and consented to give a little advice to the girls.

BLAMES PERTNERS' WIVES.

"Most millionaires' wives are not happy," declared Mr. Carnegie, after contrasting the happiness of toil with the doubtful advantages of being born rich. "They have too many luxuries and have no mental resources to fall back upon.

"Some of my partners have been unjustly criticised for what was not their fault, but the fault of their wives." He smiled while he gave the following advice to the girls concerning millionaires with matrimonial intentions:

"Don't refuse a man simply because he is a millionaire. I would rather be born poor than a millionaire, and I have had some experience in both directions. I have made forty-two or forty-three millionaires in my time, but I want to say that the only right a man has to wealth lies in his acquiring it by some useful labor. The great trouble with the wealth of to-day is that the sons of millionaires do not realize this very necessity of being of use to the community.

"I am very glad to see you all so happy in your work; work that one is not glad to do never amounts to much. Smile all the time.

TELLS STORY OF DUTCHMAN.

"I like to think of the story told me by Mr. Schwab. It was while they were having a little trouble down at homestead and the boys had ducked one old German in the river because he wouldn't leave the pumps. Mr. Schwab met Hans coming up the road all wet and bedraggled and looking the picture of distress. 'Why, what's the matter, Hans?' asked Mr. Schwab. 'Oh, I got thrown in the river,' was the cheerful response. 'And what did you do?' 'I just laughed!' So when you are in danger of losing your temper just think of that old Dutchman and smile.

"I shall never forget how proud I was when I got my first wages of $1.25 a week, and how I felt when I was raised to $1.50 as a telegraph operator. To take home that sum to my good mother gave me such a feeling of manly independence.

TRIBUTE TO HIS MOTHER

"I owe a great deal to my mother. She was a seamstress, cook, washlady, and never until late in life had a servant in the house. And yet she was a cultivated woman. She read Channing and kept up with the literature of the day. When I was a little tot she used to read good books to me.

"You young women have here every opportunity for literary culture and you ought to avail yourselves of it. You ought to be very proud with money earned so honorably, for money that is not earned honorably will never do you any good."

Fifty People were Drowned at Sea

Odessa, February 13.—The cattle steamer Sturman has been lost at sea and forty-one persons on board, among them a number of women, wives and daughters of the cattlemen owning the vessel, have perished.

The wreckage of the vessel was found on the coast by coastguards today. It is expected that a steam barge foundered with the Sturman, and that eight sailors were drowned.

Birth Place of Incandescent Light.

Roselle, N.J., Feb. 9.—To commemorate the fact that Roselle was the first place in the United States to use incandescent lights in a building, a statue is to be erected to Thomas A. Edison.

PAIN TO GO

Dr. Osler is quoted as saying that "the time is not far distant when physical pain will be a thing of the past." Would the total abolition of bodily pain be a blessing or otherwise? Pain is often, at any rate, a blessing, even if disguised, in that it is nature's warning that there is something wrong. If the warning is heeded the wrong may be remedied. Without the warning the trouble might be irremediable. Consumption is especially dangerous because it gives so little warning.

Founded in Thievery, Graft, and Shame

session of the Crown to the Dutchman's maw would fill a page. When William III departed this life, the House of Commons who had vainly attempted to restrain Bentinck's rapacity, twice attempted to rescind the grants. As was pointed out by the mover of the resolution, the alienation of these lands, set apart for the maintenance of the Crown, meant the augmentation of public taxation. The effort proved futile, the Duke of Portland of to-day still possesses a domain of 153,000 acres, with Welbeck Abbey for his country seat, set in a park eight miles in circumference, watered by a lake a full mile long.

A short time ago the Dukedom was much to the fore, an attempt being made to dispossess the present holder of the estate. A romantic story was told with circumstances, how the late Duke had, like Jekyll and Hyde, maintained a dual life. It was said he was the proprietor of a well-known bazar built on his property in Baker street, London. In this capacity he had obscurely married, and it was on behalf of the first fruits of this union that action was effectually taken in the English courts.

HERE IS A RICH ONE.

A larger landowner than the Duke of Portland in his Grace of Devonshire. In England and Ireland, he owns 193,000 acres, yielding a rental of £172,000. He has in his gift forty-two Church livings, possesses seven houses, including historic Chatsworth and Bolton Abbey. The fortunes of the house date back to the time of Henry VIII., and the apoliation of the Church. The epoch found William Cavendish a small landowner in Suffolk. Appointed one of the commissioners for dealing with the monastic surrender, he, being after all only human, took the pick for himself. The Dukes of Devonshire, representatives of Whig principles, have during the last hundred years held a prominent position in politics. The late Duke, better known by his long held title of Lord Hartington, left behind him the memory of an upright statesman, whose first thought was for the welfare of his country.

The House of Russell, equally with that of Cavendish, has an honored place in Parliamentary and political history. But its founder was not free from the taint of the plunder of public property, which, with few exceptions, pertains to the full range of our old nobility.

Among his plunder of Church lands, John Russell, favored by Henry VIII. and making the most of the boyhood of his ten-year-old successor, Edward VI., laid hands on acres of land adjoining the budding metropolis. To-day they lie in the centre of London, thoroughfares and squares yielding fabulous rents. Unearned increment was augmented by a simple device much in favor with landowners like the Duke of Bedford. Instead of selling building sites outright, they granted leases, generally for ninety-nine years. At the end of the time, not only land, but buildings, became theirs.

NELL GWYN'S SON.

"I boast descent of which I am as proud as any Baron may be of the title he owes to the smiles of a King or the favor of a King's mistress." Thus spoke Mr. Chamberlain twenty-six years ago, before the rise of stern, unbending Radicalism had developed into the Darling of the Dukeries, the mainstay of the House of Lords, the champion of the Established Church, the bulwark of landlordism. He, doubtless, had in mind the cases of the Duke of St. Albans, the Duke of Grafton, and the Duke of Richmond.

The present Duke of St. Albans is descended in direct line from Nell Gwyn, the Orange girl whom Charles II. moved from Drury lane to the royal bed-chamber. Unlike their graces the Duchess of Cleveland and the Dutchess of Portsmouth, Nell did not ask for a title for herself. But she was careful that her son should found a family which for 250 years has helped to govern Great Britain. First created Earl of Burford, when the boy reached the age of thirteen, the proud father made him Duke of St. Albans, and richly endowed the title out of public property. Among other honors he was named Master Falconer, a title proudly borne by his descendents at this day. Nell, herself, object of Mr. Pepy's amorous adulation, was content personally to take out her wages in hard cash. Burnet records that in the course of four years she obtained £60,000 from her royal lover, who drew it directly from the public purse.

FATHER OF DUKES.

The Dukes of Grafton also boast royal blood in their veins. The first Duke was the son of Charles II. and his paramour, Barbara Palmer, wife of Lord Castlemain. In view of the character of the lady mother there was among contemporaries some doubt about the paternity of the boy. Ignoring it, Charles II., loaded him with houses and land. The rent roll of the present Duke is drawn from over 32,000 acres of the richest soil in England and Scotland. Part of the former is now transformed into busy London streets. In supplement the fatuous father bestowed upon the young Duke a hereditary pension of £9,000 a year, drawn from the Excise, and another £4,700, levied upon the Post Office. These monstrous additions to the taxation of the people were suffered till, in view of the growth of the Press and the Commons, it was found convenient to commute the payment for a lump sum.

FIRST DUKE OF RICHMOND.

The mother of the first Duke of Richmond, Louise de Querouaille, was a French woman, privily despatched to the Court of St. James by wily Louis XIV. He paid handsomely for her services, but not in excess of their value. Easily establishing ascendancy over Charles II., she reduced him to the pitiful condition of the French monarch's pensioner, secretly selling the interests of England for purses of gold. Charles created the intermediary Dutchess of Portsmouth. When in 1672 a son was born, he was made Duke of Richmond with a grant of land in Yorkshire, and Duke of Lennox in the kingdom of Scotland, with rich estates in that country. Having reached the interesting age of five years, King Charles issued letters patent bestowing upon the child and his heirs for ever a lein of one shilling per ramlidron on all coal shipped on the River Tyne for consumption in England. In the reign of King George II. This infamous tax was commuted for an annuity of $19,000 paid by the Treasury.

DR. PANTCHENKO IS SANE.

Court Not Disposed to Entertain the Plea of Insanity.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10.—The Russian criminal court that is trying Dr. Pantchenko and Count Patrick O'Brien De Lassy for the murder of Count Vasilli Boaturlin, indicated today that he was not disposed to entertain a plea of insanity on behalf of the physician.

When the session opened Pantchenko's counsel asked the judge to order a physical and mental examination of his client. His Honor replied that the alleged poisoner might be examined as to his physical condition, but that his mental state would not be made the subject of an official enquiry.

Battle Lasted Twelve Hours.

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 10.—According to a message received by Federal officials here, three hundred of the Mexican revolutionists and two hundred and fifty Federals were engaged in a battle near Mulato, Mex. The loss on both sides is reported to have been heavy, but no details have been received. According to reports the battle lasted twelve hours.

MRS. EDDY.

Should They Make an Attempt to Secure Control of the Church Books and Writings.

New York, Feb. 11.—"Officials of the Christian Science Church will fight to the end any attempt made by the sons of Mary Baker G. Eddy to secure control of the church books and writings of the cult's late founder."

This announcement was made today by Eugene R. Cox, chairman of the Publicity Committee of the Christian Science Church, following publication of the report that a legal battle would be begun by the blood relatives of Mrs. Eddy.

It was learned here that legal action is to be started against the Board of Trustees of the First Church, who deposed Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, the ex-communicated leader.

Many of the Stetsonites have employed counsel and are prepared to make a fight in the courts unless their names are again placed on the church roll.

Interesting to Barbers.

Although the Barbers' Sanitary Bill before the Ontario Legislature, has been changed from the measure proposed by the Barbers' Union, the three-year apprentice term being shortened to two years and the whole made to apply only to towns of three thousand or over, many of the bodies represented at the Labor Temple at Toronto have passed resolutions endorsing the measure.

To Petition Legislature.

The City Council has passed a resolution which will be forwarded to the Ontario Legislature, asking that the Consolidated Municipal Act be amended so that municipalities may be given the power of refusing to grant licenses to pool rooms. At present municipalities have the authority to grant such licenses upon the payment of the necessary fee, but have no power to refuse any application.

Canadian Press Men.

A district cost conference of master printers is to be held in Lindsay on Friday and Saturday next, which will be addressed by Mr. J. M. Imrie of "Printer and Publisher," Toronto. The circular, calling the meeting concludes: "The ignorance of Ontario printers as to accurate methods of arriving at the cost to them of what they sell has been demonstrated to a certainty during the past half-year. All over the province however, there appears to be an awakening to the importance of better conditions. The Lindsay District should get into line and an urgent appeal is made to every recipient of this circular to attend this Conference.

A Late Easter This Year.

Easter is somewhat late this year, coming on April 16th. Easter day is one of the movable feasts, its date depending upon a phase of the moon. It is always the first Sunday after the full moon, which happens upon or next after the 21st of March. If the full moon comes on a Sunday, Easter day is the following Sunday. It never can be earlier than March 22, nor later than April 25. It is a common notion that spring is early or late, according to the coming of Easter. Those who believe this, tell us that we will have a late spring this year. Good Friday falls on April 14th and Easter Monday on the 17th.

St. Valentine's Day.

To-day will be St. Valentine's day, and in this connection it may be said that the old-fashioned "comic" valentines which showed signs of passing a year ago is almost completely missing on this year. The post card valentine, a comparatively modern conception, leads the fashion this year with burnt wood and leather novelties next in demand. French valentines, ornate in construction and costly, are also in high favor. With the passing of the old comic, dealers notice also a decline in the fervent type of valentine which breathes of romantic love in every line. Love in these later days shows a tendency, they say, to express itself symbolically, or in a sort of sign language which would probably have been regarded as inadequate by lovers of an older generation.

Boy Scouts Get Badges.

Mr. H. G. Hammond, Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scout Movement, has written a letter to the commander of the corps here, approving of the system of organization in force in Peterborough district. He also stated that efficiency badges etc. must be obtained from the central office in Toronto, so that a record may be kept of each and to whom awarded. These badges will be placed in stock in a few days. In order to hurry matters the local committee will meet the last of this week and each patrol leader is asked to furnish a list of the members of his patrol, who pledge themselves to act in accordance with the regulations as set down by this committee, to W. J. Neale, Chief Scoutmaster, on or before Thursday afternoon of this week. Mr. Wainright of the Bank of Ottawa will deliver the next lecture to the Boy Scouts.

Dowie Was Insane.

Dr. Alexander Dowie, who conducted a revival in the old Opera House about 20 years ago, for several weeks, and who afterwards went to Chicago, and founded Zion City, was insane, so his son now says. "When father began to claim that he was the reincarnation of the Prophet Elijah, in 1900," said young Dowie, "we began to see his mind failing him. He worked night and day, preaching, healing, and editing his newspaper. He worked so hard he wore out two or three private secretaries, and finally he broke down mentally and physically. While in Peterborough he made many converts.

Farmer Makes A Strong Statement

IS CONVINCED THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS HAVE NO EQUAL.

They Cured His Backache and Kidney Disease After Two Years Trial of Plasters and Medicines Failed to Bring Permanent Relief.

Poodiac, King's Co., N.B., Feb. 13 —(Special)—Moses Sherwood, a well-known farmer living near here is convinced that as a Kidney medicine Dodd's Kidney Pills have no equal. In a statement just issued Mr. Sherwood says:

"About eight years ago I hurt my back from lifting. I used plasters and liniment, and wore a wide belt. Those gave me some relief for about two years, when Kidney trouble developed.

"My back was so sore I could not lift any weight, and as it was right in haying time I thought I would not be able to pitch any hay that year.

"Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to try them, and before I had finished the first box my backache had disappeared and my urine was a healthy color. I am fifty-one years of age and have been healthy ever since.

You hear of thousands of people who have been cured of Kidney Disease after other so-called remedies have failed to help them. You never hear of anyone trying other remedies after using Dodd's Kidney Pills. They always cure.

Paid His Fine.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. A Chimney Blaze.

The fire brigade was called out to a small chimney blaze at 217 Woodbine avenue, East City, last night, between ten and eleven o'clock. Sparks escaped through holes in the stove pipe and set fire to the bedding and mattress in one of the bed rooms. The brigade quickly extinguished the fire by means of chemicals. The damage is between $5 and $10. The house is tenanted by Frank Mills and owned by Matthew Carton.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

No Drinking Man Need Despair

The Neal Cure--Greatest of all Discoveries—Offers a Means of Escape from the Curse of Drink. A Cure of the Drink Habit is Guaranteed in Three Days, no matter whether the Patient is a Hard and Constant Drinker, Social Tippler or goes on Occasional Sprees.

MANY SUCCESSFUL CURES IN TORONTO

There was wandering in the streets of Toronto lately a homeless man, who at one time held a position, but drink was his downfall. To-day his wife, a cultured woman, works out by the day, endeavoring to support herself and little family. Think of it, you wives and mothers who have homes of comfort and all that makes life worth living, what it would be to you to be deprived of these and forced to face the washtub for an existence, as this poor wife has to do to-day!

But this home, which was made a hell on earth through strong drink — as every drunkard's is — may be made into a heaven upon earth, as many have been made, as the result of the Neal Treatment. Three days only—the wonder of it—to effect a cure and make the victim of strong drink a new man physically, morally and mentally.

We undertake to guarantee to effect a cure of the Drink Habit in Three Days, no matter whether the patient is a hard and constant drinker, social tippler or goes on occasional sprees. Are you interested in a poor fellow going down, down, through the curse of drink; then bring your influence to bear on him and bring him to the Neal Institute for treatment, drunk or sober, and we will undertake to remove the awful appetite for strong drink and deliver him to you a new man.

Here is an opportunity for REFORMATION SOCIETIES for INEBRIATES, or any institution for the reformation of the drunkard, to test our ability to change the hard drinker into a new man physically and mentally in THREE DAYS' TREATMENT.

We invite these Societies or any institution interested in the poor drunkard and the problem of dealing with him to send us for treatment any victim of the drink habit, it makes no difference how much enslaved, and we guarantee to effect a cure in each and every case. Can you spend your money to better advantage or in a way that will bring in greater returns than in redeeming these victims of strong drink and giving back to their families kind fathers, brothers, husbands, and to the country most desirable citizens?

VOL XXXIV NO. 38 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 15, 191 PRICE TWO CENTS

NO INTERFERENCE BY THE PRIESTS

Lanark County Orange Lodge Places Itself on Record---Want No Meddling by Priests in Mixed Marriages

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Lanark County Orange Lodge, which is composed of delegates from Orange lodges in Smith's Falls, Perth, Drummond, Franktown, Carleton Place, Almonte, Pakenham, White Lake, Clayton and Cedar Hill, in executive session in Almonte, passed the following resolution:

"Owing to the growing unlawful interference of Roman Catholic priests, who (in obedience to the laws of the Pope and the Church of Rome) disturb the peace of homes and the lives of British subjects in Canada, who, in the exercise of their freedom and lawful rights under British law, have contracted what is known as a mixed marriage;

"Therefore, resolved, that this County Orange Lodge of Lanark County, in executive session in Almonte this 7th day of February, 1911, register a protest against this unlawful and immoral priestly interference with the marriage laws of Canada and against their disturbing interference in the homes and lives of British subjects as aforesaid, and that we urge upon all loyal British subjects to wake up, unite and demand that our legislators enact a special law similar to that now in force in Italy, which makes it a criminal offence for any priest who in the exercise of his duties disturbs the peace of families or seeks to annoy any Italian subject in the free exercise of his civil rights or from doing that which the law permits him to do, under penalty of a fine, imprisonment, or discharge from his priestly office (only make the latter clause for Canada expulsion from the country)"

This resolution was also passed:—"Resolved, that this County Orange Lodge desires by formal vote to express appreciation and approval of the action taken by G. Howard Ferguson, K.C., M.P.P., in his effort to have the system of bi-lingualism abolished from the Public schools of Ontario by the action of the Legislature, and that we would respectfully urge upon him to press his resolution to a conclusive vote in the House we want to know how the members of the House stand on this vital patriotic question."

Negroes and Whites Have to Fight it Out

Boston, Feb. 13.—Prediction of a world-wide war between negroes and whites, made in an address here last night by Prof. Wm. E. Dubois, of Atlanta University, a colored educator, caused wide-spread discussion here to-day. Prof. Dubois said, in part:

"The race problem is the most important question that confronts the world to-day. Unless it is solved in the human way by raising the standards of our common humanity and by making it possible for men to live among men regardless of color, caste or position, this world-wide question will be settled in bloodshed. For the white man is the negro's hereditary enemy. The white man has ever stood between him and the avenue of advancement."

Saskatoon is Spreading

Over Eight Miles of New Territory Added.

Winnipeg, Feb. 15.—All points in the West report the same state of rapid growth. Saskatoon is about to spread her city limits by about eight miles to accommodate the people who are thronging into this live western city.

Moose Jaw is to have a street railway. Two and a half miles of track have been laid, and material is on hand for three miles more. Moose Jaw is going ahead fast since the C. P. R. made it a strong divisional point of its system. The Saskatchewan Flour Mills in Moose Jaw have made big additions to their milling capacity of late, and are to put a sprinkler system into their plant to insure the best protection against fire. Moose Jaw's telephone service has increased 100 per cent. during the year.

Andrew Carnegie says "most millionaires' wives are not happy." It is probably due to the fact that the wife of nearly every millionaire knows some other woman whose husband is a multi-millionaire.

BABES HELD BY DEAD MOTHER

Their Little Fingers Imprisoned by Her Rigid Hand.

Mount Sterling, Ky., Feb. 15.—Mrs. J. M. Jones of Bath County, was found dead in her chair, tightly clasping the hands of her two little children. She had been repairing the wall paper in her room, when she sat down to rest and expired. She held the hands of her children so tightly that they could not release themselves from the death grip.

Situation in Russia is Serious Every Student Threatens to Strike

WILL PURSUE A POLICY OF VIOLENCE UNLESS THESE DEMANDS ARE GRANTED.

Rioters March Through the Streets Singing Revolutionary Songs—Police Make Many Arrests—Professors Threatened.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 14.—Rioting at the University of St. Petersburg was renewed to-day with the possible result that every student in Russia will go upon a strike. The students of the University of St. Petersburg sent word to-day to the leaders of the students here that they too would pursue a policy of violence unless demands were granted. So serious is the situation that the rector of St. Petersburg University resigned to-day.

MADE 200 ARRESTS.

The police made 200 additional arrests during the morning, it was declared, although the authorities have adopted a policy of secrecy and refused to give out any information.

Rioting students marched through the streets singing revolutionary songs and cheering for the late Count Tolstoi, whose memory they all idolize.

Soldiers were dispatched from the barracks to guard the university buildings, and in a skirmish with these several of the students were hurt.

PROFESSOR THREATENED.

The lives of several of the professors have been threatened and this morning the prefect of police was asked for guards to protect them.

Fear was expressed that the striking students might fire the university buildings, for they have made such threats. They declare that unless the grievances which they seek to have redressed, are considered by the governors of the institution, they will appeal in person to the Czar, and failing to get redress from him, will seek to have every student in Russia leave his school.

Tomsk University is one of the largest in the Empire. The city in which it is located has a permanent population of 66,000, but there are fully 15,000 students among them.

BRITISH INVESTMENTS ABROAD

The British, unlike the French, it is said, do not hoard up their savings in a woollen stocking, but put them out at interest all over the world, with results that are sometimes surprising even to themselves. In the last sixty years the United Kingdom has invested abroad on the average about a quarter of its annual savings. Last year the proportion appears to be nearer one-half. The Statist calculates that the total savings of the nation in 1910 have reached the unprecedented figure of $1,750,000,000. Of this, $1,160,000,000 has been taken up by subscriptions to publicly issued securities, and the rest by private investments. Of public subscriptions roughly $626,000,000 has been in respect of home and colonial governments and enterprises, while foreign governments and undertakings have absorbed $534,000,000. The United States comes first in the list with $197,950,000, mostly for railroad bonds, and Argentina next with $114,325,000, while Canada, among the British possessions, is responsible for $184,410,000. The first question that presents itself is: Where has all that money come from? By far the greater part has undoubtedly been provided by the British public, either directly or through banks or insurance and similar thrift encouraging institutions. The present time is remarkable for the confidence of the British investor in industrial and financial conditions all over the world, and the knowledge of this has prompted the flotation of all kinds of enterprises on the London market. Is Britain exporting old accumulations of capital? The Statist thinks not. It figures that the large subscriptions to new issues must represent new savings. An individual investor, it says, can sell home securities that he has for years and invest the proceeds of the sale in colonial and foreign securities, but for him to do this some other investor must purchase his home securities, and in such a case the capital invested abroad is the new savings of the person who has purchased the home securities from him. That a larger proportion than the average of British savings is invested abroad arises from economic necessity, concludes the Statist, and results from the rapid increase in the wealth of the British people.

Freight Train Slowly Cut Boy to Death

New York, Feb. 14.—Charles Ahrens, ten-year-old son of a Bronx undertaker, was slowly crushed to death beneath the car wheels to-day in the railroad yards directly in front of his home. His foot had caught in a switch from which his frenzied comrades struggled vainly to free him while a freight train slowly but steadily backed down upon him. The frantic efforts of the other boys to release him were futile and their shouts to the engineer at the other end of the train were unheard. Horror-stricken they jumped away as the rear car bore down upon them, and they saw their playmate screaming with terror, go under the wheels.

DID BIRCHELL CONFESS TO HIM

SUDDEN DEATH OF J. FORBES, JAIL TURNKEY WHEN MURDERER WAS HANGED.

Gift From Prisoner—Mr. Forbes Prizes Highly Beautiful Gold Watch Given Him by Birchell Before the Execution.

Woodstock, Feb. 14.—While waiting to take a train for Goderich in the waiting room of the G.T.R. station this morning, Mr. James Forbes organizer for the Sons of Scotland, dropped dead at nine o'clock. Mr. Forbes was in his usual good health, but succumbed to a sudden attack of heart trouble. He was one of the best known men in Oxford County; until three years ago he was turnkey of the Woodstock jail. He was in that position when Reginald Birchell was hanged for the murder of young Benwell.

During his long incarceration in the jail, Birchell became very intimate with Turnkey Forbes and it was generally believed that, if the noted murder ever made a confession, and it is almost certain he did, it was to Turnkey Forbes and Rev. W. H. Wade of Hamilton, his spiritual adviser.

One of Mr. Forbes' most highly prized possessions was a beautiful gold watch presented to him by Birchell just before the execution. It is also worthy of note that Forbes was with the late Chief Powe of Tillsonburg, three years ago when the latter dropped while the two were pursuing an escaped prisoner. Mr. Forbes was 55 years of age and leaves a wife and family.

CHINA MAKES WAR ON THE QUEQUE

NEWSPAPERS RIDICULE IT AS AN EVIDENCE OF THE COUNTRY'S BACKWARDNESS.

Some Resist the Change—Students at University Punished for Adopting Reform—Army Chief Up-to-Date.

Peking, Thursday, Jan. 12.—A curious agitation, significant of the times, is going on throughout China with regard to the queue. The pigtail is being ridiculed by all progressives as an emblem indicative of backwardness, distinguishing the Chinese from all other civilized peoples. Cartoons appear regularly in the newspapers, showing the advantage of the queue to the assistant of the headsman in the act of decapitating a criminal, or depicting the various other animals that wear the tail, the dog and the pig being in the foreground.

Editorials denounce the custom, and news groups of associations are daily falling into the line of reform. Progressive military officers, newspaper men, or employes of foreigners meet together and agree to sacrifice their queue, and then hold a fire-cracker festival to celebrate the performance publicly.

The general movement is meant to indicate the change of ideas that has come over the nation's advanced men. It has been followed by hundreds in the treaty ports, but in the conservative capital, where the official spirit prevails, the movement has received slight checks. For instance, the movement amongst students of the Imperial University was speedily suppressed by the faculty giving to the first students appearing without the appendage one-third the number of demerits necessary for dismissal. On the other hand, a newspaper which printed the statement that the Empress Dowager was against the change suffered suppression for the period of one week.

The throne has sent an inquiry to the Governor or Viceroy of each Province asking for advice. General Yin Chang, the army reformer, now at the head of the War Bureau, is the first member of the Ministerial body to adopt the Western fashion. He appears before the Tsucheng Yuan, the National Assembly, with his suite, in modern military uniform, and without the queue.

WANT A CHINESE REPUBLIC.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—Two educated young Chinese women, Mrs. J. Jung, a graduate of the Canton Normal school, and Miss D. Loo, graduate of the University of California, addressed a revolutionary meeting, under the auspices of the Young China Party here last night, urging their male hearers to take up arms and fight for a republic in China. The young women were cheered during their appeals, after which the audience joined in singing the Chinese Marseillaise, "Choong Gwan."

NEW BILL PUTS IT UP TO CHINKS

WHITNEY MEASURE WILL PREVENT CHINESE SLEEPING IN THE LAUNDRY.

But Exempt the Homes—Houses of Women Who Take In Washing Not Subject to Inspection.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—Premier Whitney's bill, which is to place Chinese and other laundries under the supervision of the Ontario factory inspectors, have been printed and may come up before the Legislature this afternoon.

It provides that every shop, building or room, in which laundry work is done by way of trade or for purpose of gain shall be considered a factory under the terms of the Ontario Factory Act, and shall be subject to all regulations as other factories under that act.

The bill provides that no laundry work is to be done in any sleeping or living room and that any place in which laundry work is done must be in a clean condition, free from vermin and all impurities of a contagious or infectious character.

The same penalties for breaches of the act will be inflicted as upon other manufacturing plants. A special exception is made for laundry work done by women in their own homes.

LARGE LAMP FACTORY TO BE ERECTED HERE

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY MAY BUILD LARGE STRUCTURE.

At a meeting of the Board of Works, held yesterday afternoon, General Manager Nicholls of Toronto, with his assistant and E. G. Patterson, were present, and stated that the company contemplated erecting a lamp factory on Townsend-street, west of Park. The new building, which would cost $250,000 would be 60x250 and four storeys high.

The front of the building would be beautified with a lawn and other horticultural effects.

Mr. Nicholls asked if the city would grade Townsend-street, put in a sewer and build a sidewalk in the event of the factory being erected and he was assured that this work would be done. He stated that he wished the factory erected in Peterborough, as did also his assistant and Mr. Patterson, but the matter would be decided within the next week or two.

In any event, the intention of the company was to erect a new office building.

Speaking of the progress of the company, Mr. Nicholls made the statement that last year $2,500,000 had been paid out in wages.

FRONTENACS WILL SUE.

Kingston, Feb. 14.—The Frontenac hockey management have, through their lawyer, written the editor of the Belleville Intelligencer, demanding a retraction of an article in yesterday's issue of that paper, in which the Junior Frontenacs are referred to as "Sutherland's Pirates." If the paper refuses to apologize an action for seven thousand dollars will be instigated against it.

CHARGES ALL FALSEHOODS.

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—Rev. W. A. Milne, pastor of the Globe Presbyterian Church, denied from the pulpit the statements made about him by Col. Sam. Hughes. He regretted for the sake of the congregation that his name had been bandied about. He has denied the charges made against him, at the Ministerial Association, and he again stated that they were absolute falsehoods. He has never given any intimation to anyone as to the political leanings of the congregation.

CHURCH PROPERTY SHOULD BE TAXED

Mr. C. R. McKeown Asks for The Abolition of All Exemptions---Public and Separate Schools Included

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., for Dufferin, introduced a bill in the Legislature yesterday, the purport of which is to do away with all exemptions on property owned or occupied by churches, Public and Separate schools, universities and seminaries.

The bill proposes to amend the Assessment Act by striking out clauses 2, 3 and 3a of Section 5 of the Act. This does not give much idea of the proposal, which is a far-reaching one. Mr. McKeown is opposed to the exemption of churches and similar institutions and his bill provides for the repeal of the clauses exempting from taxation every place of worship and land used in connection therewith; the buildings and grounds of and attached to or otherwise bona fide used in connection with and for the purposes of every university, every High school, every Public or Separate school, whether vested in trustee or otherwise, so long as such buildings and grounds are used to such purposes only.

Sir James Whitney's bill for the protection of persons employed in the construction of buildings has been distributed. It provides that if the Council of any town or city does not appoint a sufficient number of inspectors of scaffolding to provide for the proper and efficient inspection of all hoists, scaffoldings and other constructions named in the Municipal Act, the Government may appoint as many inspectors as may be deemed necessary to ensure proper and efficient inspection, and their salaries or other remuneration shall be paid by the corporation of such town or city.

The erection of unsafe scaffolding is prohibited by the Act, which states that every person employing or directing another to perform labor in the erection, alteration, repair or improvement to any building, chimney or other structure shall not furnish or erect, or cause to be furnished or erected for the performance of such labor scaffolding, hoists, stays, ladders or other mechanical contrivances which are unsafe, unsuitable or improper, or which are not so constructed, placed and operated as to give proper protection to the life and limb of a person so employed or engaged.

FRONTENACS 9 GRILLERS 3

Kingston-Frontenacs again beat out the Grillers last night at the Brock street rink by a score of 9 to 3. The half-time score being 3—2, thus having a margin of 6 goals on the semi final fixture. The return game will be played in Kingston on Friday night. The first half was of a stellar brand of hockey, both teams playing a lightning game—the players travelling from end to end with terrific speed, first an attack on the Kingston nets only to be relieved by the visitors stalwart defence, then up the ice the rubber travelled. The Grillers had the better of the argument during this period, but their many shots on the visitors nets lacked the speed or went wide.

In the second half the Frontenacs came back strong, scoring seven goals while the locals were blanched.

MR. WARREN IS HOME FROM THE WEST.

Is Served With Summons in Connection with the Farmers' Bank Charge.

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Mr. James J. Warren, general manager of the Trusts & Guarantee Company, arrived home from the West this morning and has been served with the summons which was issued against him in connection with the Farmers' Bank affairs. He will appear in court on Friday.

The charge against Mr. Warren is that he did conspire, confederate and agree to defraud by false representation, deceit and fraud, through the Treasury Board of the Dominion of Canada, the certificate required in order to enable the bank to open business under the provisions of the Banking Act to the detriment of the public.

Stripped of its legal verbiage, this is a charge of conspiracy similar to that preferred against the provisional directors of the bank.

A SAD COINCIDENCE.

It was a sad home to which Mr. Warren came this morning. He arrived to find that one of his children was dead. The little one passed away yesterday, and Mr. Warren was too burdened with this sorrow to discuss the charge or make any explanation in his own behalf.

THE MAIN STREET SWEPT BY FIRE

Several Business Places and Hotel in Hensall Wiped Out by Flames To-day.

Hensall, Ont., Feb. 14.—A fire which broke out here this morning at an early hour swept the north side of King street.

Several business places were wiped out, including the Commercial Hotel.

The stores on the north side of the main street of the village were not damaged except that windows were broken in several instances by the force of the explosions of cartridges and powder in the two hardware establishments, which fell a prey to the flames.

A portion of the contents of the hotel was saved and the inmates had ample time to escape.

The blaze destroyed the following places, the loss in most cases being fairly well covered by insurance.

J. and C. McDonell, hardware and furniture.
E. Rannie, dry goods and groceries
T. W. Palmer, restaurant.
R. J. Drysdale, shoe merchant.
F. Manns, barber.
J. B. McArthur, hardware.

Increase of 10,000

Calgary Has Now a Population of 53,360.

Winnipeg, Feb. 15.—Based upon a multiple of 2,875, the directory census of Calgary gives the city 55,250 people or an increase of nearly 10,000 in a year. Street railway earnings bear out these figures by showing the net earnings of the street car service for January of this year to have made an increase over January of last year of $7,551, for the same mileage. The street car system in Calgary is owned by the city and is earning big money on the outlay. In spite of turning down the publicity plan by refusing the appropriation for it, Calgary will go out after industries strongly. The business men of the city feel that there should be more industrial work done there and will try to get as many new manufacturing firms as possible to locate in Calgary.

Brave Newsboy Saved a Score of Lives.

New York, Feb. 14.—The bravery of a newsboy, who was too scared to give his name, saved more than a score of lives in a fire that destroyed a big tenement at 775 Grand street, in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, early to-day. The boy clambered up an awning post alongside of the burning building and cut loose a fire escape ladder which was tied fast with ropes, getting it down in time to permit men and women trapped on a platform of the escape to reach the ground just as the flames broke through the windows alongside of which they had been standing.

THE FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE.

Mr. Frank Lascelles, master of the Pageant of London, which is to be one of the principal features of the forthcoming Festival of Empire, to be held under the patronage of His Majesty's Government at the Crystal Palace, London, from May to October next, was entertained on Monday night at the Savoy Hotel, fresh from his triumphs in South Africa as master of the splendid pageant at Cape Town, which played an important part in the festivities in connection with the opening of the Union Parliament of South Africa.

Speaking of the forthcoming Festival of Empire at the Crystal Palace, Mr. Lascelles pointed out how tremendous is the undertaking, and a sum of no less than £250,000 is being spent on it by the general council alone, quite apart from special sections, such as the Canadian, upon which the Canadian government is spending £70,000. "My experience as master of the Canadian pageant," continued Mr. Lascelles, "and just lately of the South African, have been a revelation to me as to what the spirit of imperialism means, of what it is that has made the name of Britain honored by countless nations of every creed and tongue. I am hoping that our Festival of Empire will teach the hundreds of thousands who will throng to London for King George's coronation their responsibilities in this respect. In South Africa it amazed me to see how soon all the conflicting interests of Boer and Portuguese, Malay and negro, have been welded together in this high purpose. When I first went over there a good many people thought anything like an united South African pageant was quite impossible. Some unpleasantness, they thought, was bound to occur. To show you how varied were the component parts of the pageant I had to have no fewer than seven interpreters. But in the end we were as 'brothers and sisters all.'"

"The pageant itself, too, is only an incident in the festival which we shall try to make into one vast imperial 'at home'. By what we are calling the 'All-Red Route' we are going to make it possible for every visitor to make a panoramic trip around the whole Empire, from the Canadian cornfields to the Himalayas, yet keeping always within the palace grounds. Not only so, but our hospitality committee is arranging for a social welcome for all colonial guests, and free excursions to all sorts of places of interest throughout the homeland. But I could go on for hours telling you what we are going to do. Just one thing, I must say, namely, that we have every reason to hope that King George himself will be present soon after the opening, if not on the actual day."

THE HEAD TAX.

In reply to an enquirer it may be stated that a Canadian going into the United States has to pay no head tax, nor is a citizen of the United States required to pay any head tax on coming into Canada. With regard to Mexico, the facts are similar. The amount paid in head tax by natives of countries other than those named is $2. Undesirable citizens, either of the States or of Canada, are, as far as possible, prevented from crossing the border. If they do, and are discovered, they may, of course, be deported.

School Reform Causes Split.

Montreal, Feb. 10.—The question of school reform has caused a split among the Roman Catholic ecclesiastical authorities. Rev. Abbe Perrier, Catholic school inspector, signed a report with his colleague, suggesting that there be a general school commission for the whole city and district. Yesterday Canon Roy, chancellor of the Montreal archdiocese, stated that the clergy as a body are against the proposed change. The report will come before the Legislature. There will probably be a lively discussion on it.

STOP THAT ITCH.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE RED YEAR

—By—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

told him roundly that he could to imprison his sons, who, they said, had stolen their pay.

"If the Treasury does not find the money," was the threat, "we will kill you and your family, for we are masters."

This later incident came to Malcolm's ears while Chumru was persuading a grain-dealer to admit that he had some corn hidden away. The sight of money unlocked the man's lips.

"Would there were more like you in the King's service," he whined. "I have not taken a rupee in the way of trade since the hujoors were driven forth."

It was easy enough to interpret the unhappy tradesman's real wishes. He was pining for the restoration of the British Raj. Every man in Delhi, who had anything to lose, mourned the day that saw the downfall of the Sirkar.

"Affairs go badly, then," Malcolm put in. "Speak freely, friend. We are strangers, and are minded to go back whence we came, for there is naught but misrule in the city so far as we can see."

"What can you expect from an old man who writes verses when he should be punishing malefactors?" said the grain-dealer, bitterly anxious to vent his wrongs. "If you would act wisely, sirdar, leave this bewitched place. It is given over to devils. I am a Hindu, as you know, but I am worse treated by the Brahmins than by men of your faith."

"Mayhap you have quarreled with some of the sepoys and have a sore feeling against them?"

"Think not, so, sirdar. Who am I to make enemies of these lords? Every merchant in the bazaar is of my mind, and I have suffered less than many, for I am a poor man and have no family."

In response to Chumru's request the grain-dealer allowed the men to cook their food in an inner courtyard. While Malcolm extracted additional details as to the chaos that reigned in the city the newcomers from Gwalior consulted among themselves. They had seen enough to be convinced that there were parts of India much preferable to Delhi for residential purposes.

"Behold, sirdar!" said one of them after they had eaten, "You led us in, and now we pray you lead us out again. There are plenty here to fight the Feringhis, and we may be more useful at Lucknow."

Malcolm could have laughed at the strangeness of his position, but he saw in this request the nucleus of a new method of winning his way beyond the walls.

"Bide here," he said gruffly, "until Ali Khan and I return, which we will surely do ere night. Then we shall consider what steps to take. At present, I am of the same mind as you."

He wanted to visit the Cashmere Gate and examine its defenses. Then, he believed, he would have obtained all the information that Nicholson required. He was certain that Delhi would fall if once the British secured a footing inside the fortifications. The city was seething with discontent. Even if left to its own devices it would speedily become disrupted by the warring elements within its bounds.

Chumru and he rode first to the Mori Gate. Thence, by a side road, they followed the wall to the Cashmere Gate. Traveling as rapidly as the crowded state of the thoroughfare permitted and thus wearing the semblance of being engaged on some urgent duty, they counted the guns in each battery and noted their positions.

Arrived at the Cashmere Gate they loitered there a few minutes. This was the key of Delhi. Once it was won, a broad road led straight to the heart of the city, with the palace on one hand and the Chandni Chowk on the other.

Malcolm saw with a feeling of unutterable loathing that the mutineers had converted St. James's Church into a stable. Not so had the founder, Colonel James Skinner, treated the religions of the people among whom he lived. The legend goes that the gallant soldier, a veteran of the Mahratta wars, had married three wives, an Englishwoman, a Mohammedan, and a Hindu. His own religious views were of the nebulous order, but, so says the story, being hard pressed once in a fight, he vowed to build a church to his wife's memory if he escaped. When he came to give effect to it he was puzzled to know which wife he should honor, so he built a church, a mosque and a temple, each at a corner of the triangular space just within the Cashmere Gate.

Whether the origin of the structures is correctly stated or not, they stand to this day where Skinner's workmen placed them, and it was a dastardly act on the part of men who worshiped in mosque and temple to profane the hallowed shrine of another and far superior faith.

Malcolm was sitting motionless on Nejdi, looking at a squad of rebels erecting fascines in front of a new battery on the river side of the gate, when Chumru, whose twisted vision seemed to command all points of the compass, saw that the commander of a cavalry guard stationed there was regarding them curiously.

"Turn to the right, hujoor," he muttered.

Malcolm obeyed instantly. The warning note in Chumru's voice was not to be denied. It would be folly to wait and question him.

"Now let us canter," said the other, as soon as the horses were fairly in the main road.

"You did well, sahib, to move quickly. There was one in the ground yonder whose eyes grew bigger each second that he looked at you."

They heard some shouting at the gate. A head in the road near the ruined offices of the Delhi Gazette gave them a chance of increasing the pace to a gallop. There was a long, straight stretch in front, leading past the Telegraph Office, the dismantled magazine, and a small cemetery. Then the road turned again, and by a sharp rise gained the elevated plateau on which stood the Ridge.

Glancing over his shoulder, at this point, Malcolm caught sight of a dozen Sowars riding furiously after them. To dismount and hope that they might not be in pursuit, to mow the leader down in his stirrups, and consistently urge on his own horse, was the impulse of a moment. It was impossible to know what had caused this chase, but

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a groupeof ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

LEVEL COLT'S FEET

Properly Done, It Cures Wrong Tendencies and Prevents Resultant Injuries

The feet of foals frequently need leveling to prevent an abnormal development of the legs as a result of unequal wear of the hoofs. Many foals stand badly at first, and if they are slow in gaining a correct position of the legs the hoofs may become worn in such a way as to prevent a proper standing position or a straight form of action.

Leveling the feet acts both as prevention and cure. It prevents a breakage, or other cause of rapid wearing away of any part of the hoof from throwing the weight on the wrong part of the joints. Even if the foal is born with a natural tendency to stand wrong, as with the feet too wide apart or too close together or pigeon-toed, such a tendency may be gradually corrected in a large part by keeping the feet level. A colt that stands pigeon-toed, for example, wears off the outside wall of the hoof faster than the inside, and the more that condition develops the worse the tendency to stand wrong becomes. By rasping off the inner wall to correspond with or even slightly to exceed the wear of the other side, the foot will be thrown more nearly into line as it strikes the ground. While the leg bones and joints are growing they are susceptible to the persistent pressure from one angle or another and grow toward a correct position or away from it according to the condition of the feet.

A level foot induces the colt to assume a correct position of the leg. As an example of the marked effect of the pressure on the joints from shortening one wall or the other of the hoof, work horses with lameness and symptoms of spavin have frequently been made to go sound simply by taking half an inch off the inner wall of the hoof, thus throwing the concussion on to the outside of the hock joint. If colts' hoofs are kept fairly short at the toes, with the inner and outer walls of equal length, the foot will develop as nearly a correct shape as it can be induced to take and the limbs as well will be safe-guarded against deformity.

NOURISH FEET OF HORSES WELL

Canadian Breeders of Clydesdales Should Know How to Get Good Feet and How to Keep It

Horsemen should know more about growing and keep horses' feet right than they do. Canadian breeders of Clydesdales, trained as they are to recognize merit in a wide hoof head, a broad strong foot built to wear and last on a hard city pavement, have learned a great deal more about the importance of a good foot than about how to get it, and how to keep it. The fine free step of the broad-footed Clydesdale with the foot lifted jauntily, carried straight ahead and set firmly down, tells a story of something more than nicely adjusted articulation of joints and co-ordination of muscles, with lines of power identical with those of resistance. Does it not tell a story of foot steps that are free from pain and all feeling of discomfort? Going farther back, does it not mean a good free circulation of blood, and of a circulation able to take up waste matter—in fact, of a well nourished foot?

Dry hard feet tell a story of insufficient nourishment. Certain conditions may assist in producing this situation, and it is wise to correct or alleviate them as much as possible. In stables where feet appear to become dried out, attempts to correct this by stuffing the frog with wet clay have been popular. This has been a partial success at least, but it is doubtful if a horse appreciates going to bed with his feet soaked with cold mud, much more than this his owner would, although in the latter case the consequences might be more immediately disastrous.

There might be a little lost and a good deal gained if this side of the argument were kept more prominently in view by horsemen whose chargers are troubled with dry hard or contracted feet. Such means are conducive to general good health and thrift, accompanied by others well known to be useful in stimulating the nourishment of any part, by stimulating the blood circulation. Such methods as soaking, "tubbing" the feet in warm water, afterwards giving a cold bath and drying thoroughly, should be well worth a patient trial for feet showing a tendency to become dry and brittle. The human fingernail, when it becomes dry and brittle usually becomes thin as well. Treatment with olive oil will usually improve it in a very short time. The same could be tried on a dry brittle hoof. The use of a very light blister around the hoof head is known to be of benefit. All of such plans should appear more hopeful and more humane than standing a horse for hours in wet clay or stuffing his feet with it.—Canadian Farm.

FIGHTING WEEDS

Plough as Early as Possible After the Crop is Removed

Summer fallowing is not necessary for the eradication of noxious weeds such as mustard, Canada thistle, curled dock and so forth. By plowing as early as possible after the crop is removed and cultivating frequently until the ground freezes, it is quite possible to free land from the weeds mentioned. The farm of one of our neighbors was badly infested with mustard, says J. R. Westlake, of Carleton County, Ontario. The former occupant, who had merely rented the farm, had failed to keep this pest in control, and it had practically driven him off the farm. When his successor and present owner (an Englishman by the way) took the farm we were all very interested in knowing how he would make out in the struggle for existence with the weeds.

His first grain crop could not be seen for mustard. This crop was not allowed to ripen, but was cut when green, and with careful curing made very fair winter feed. The land was plowed immediately, and, in the course of a week or so, was green again with a fine growth of mustard, thistles and many other weeds. When these were well started he disced the land thoroughly and let stand for a couple of weeks. The next growth of weeds was plowed under. He followed this up with alternate discing and plowing as long as the weeds continued to grow. By following this method combined with a rotation which contained a large amount of corn and roots, he has his farm practically clear of weeds.

Nor was the freeing of the farm from weeds the only benefit derived from this system of cultivation. The land was put in splendid shape for next year's crop. The large amount of cultivation and aeration made available a large supply of plant food. The large amount of vegetable matter in the form of weeds turned under, greatly increased the supply of humus in the soil with all its attendant benefits. Farmers who are carrying on what seems like a hopeless struggle with weeds, would do well to follow the example of our English neighbor and do more fall cultivation combined with a large acreage of hoed crops.

THE MANURE HEAP

Never Allow Yourself to be Tempted to Dispose of It

So far as manure is concerned you should make it your business to keep your small holding self-supporting so far as possible. In these days of mechanical traction dung is becoming increasingly scarce, and though artificials are more used than ever, there will always be a demand for the invaluable farmyard refuse, which contains the nutritious properties for soil in such well-balanced quantities.

Still, though manure is such an important commodity, there is no need for it to intrude, and your stack may well be made up at some convenient point well away from the house. Here waste from the stable, pigsty, cowhouses and yards may be stored, and it should be packed closely so that it may "heat" and decompose.

Later on in the winter—preferably in frosty weather—the stuff may be carted on to the land and used, economically yet judiciously; the more rotten it is the better. Never be tempted to dispose of manure. It will probably be against the conditions of your tenancy, but whether or not, it is bad farming to let a load go.

RATS STEAL FALSE TEETH

A young woman of Burnley left her false teeth in a glass of water for the night, and the following morning they were missing. A haunt of rats under the kitchen slopstone was searched, and there, sure enough, were the missing molars intact. They were lying among some scraps which had been collected by the rats.

CANADA'S PEAT OF GREAT VALUE

Ottawa Expert Says There Are No Less Than 36,000 Square Miles of Bog in Dominion

Dr. E. Haanel, director of the new bureau of mines of the federal government, has been in the West in conference with various mining men interested in the development of the peat deposits to the east of Winnipeg.

Dr. Haanel made the interesting statement that peat could be laid down in the field for 90 cents per ton and that one and three-quarters tons of peat was equal in heat value to a ton of anthracite coal. This peat he stated to be equal to any known fuel for grates and for kitchen stoves. It is clean, it does not break up and burns to the finest ash, leaving no clinker. It burns with a clear flame requires no poking and the ash is a good fertilizer. In the experimental station which he has established in Ontario, Dr. Haanel produced during the past season 1,600 tons of peat, and he is burning it in his own home at the present time with perfect success. No examination has yet been made by him of the great peat deposits to the east of Winnipeg, and he was therefore unable to state what there was there.

"It is supposed," said the distinguished visitor, "that there are 36,000 square miles of peat bog in the Dominion, a large part of this being in Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec. These provinces are dependent largely for their coal on the United States, as the Canadian mines are in the far east and the far West, and the long haul makes the use of Canadian coal impossible in the central provinces. The development of the peat deposits is therefore of high importance."

LITTLE UTOPIA IN SWITZERLAND

Ideal Community Found Among the Swiss—No Taxes to Pay

"Lloyd's" correspondent, wiring from Geneva, announced the discovery of a little Utopia where life is entirely free from the competition and anxieties of the workaday world.

Inhabitants of the village of Burtigny, beautifully situated on the slopes of the Jura Alps, in the Canton of Vaud, have no rates and taxes to pay. The village, after paying its debts, which amount to between £140 and £150 a year, divides the surplus of about £10 among the oldest inhabitants.

The village owns forests, vineyards, and tracts of fertile land, as well as cattle. The villagers possess in common their own water service and reservoir, a cafe, wine presses, public fountain, and weighing machine, a baker's and butcher's shop, and a dairy.

Everything is sold at cost price, and the surplus stock is sent to the markets in the vicinity. Very little money exchanges hands. Most of the necessities of life are paid for in kind and by labor.

family receives so much wine, and the remainder is sold to "outsiders." The same system prevails when the timber is cut every year. If a member of the community becomes ill or old and unable to work, he or she receives food and lodging free.

Each inhabitant is content to work hard for the common good. Crime is unknown. The village sends few but splendid young men to do their service in the federal army.

PUZZLES IN WEIGHTS

The weights and measures used in England are confusing to very many more than foreign visitors. Home men are frequently at a loss in making up their reckoning when they chance to be considerably afield in a strange district.

Some butchers and cattle-dealers of the old school still calculate by the Dutch stone of 17½ lbs. London men keep by the stone of 8 lbs., but in many parts of England, notably in the southern counties, the score of 20 lbs. is adhered to in making out weights of farm animals.

The cental of 100 lbs. is still kept to the coast side for wheat-weighing. Inland, wheat goes at Mark Lane, for instance, at the quarter containing 480 lbs. In East Anglia the coomb of four bushels is used. Newcastle, Carlisle, and Darlington hold by the boll of five bushels. Berwick, Duns, Kelso, and several other places buy and sell wheat as a rule on the basis of a boll of six bushels. Chester, Shrewsbury, Nantwich, and one or two other centres reckon the bushel of wheat at 75 lbs. At Monmouth, however, it is 50 lbs., but it is down to 45 lbs. at Aberystwyth, this being 2 lbs. over what some are inclined to reckon the Scottish standard. Old Preston men have their windle of 230 lbs., while their friends in Denbigh argue over a bobbet of 168 lbs.

THE LORD MAYOR'S COACH

The coach of London's Lord Mayor used in the annual procession has probably had more money expended upon it than any horse-drawn vehicle in the world. Originally costing something more than $5,000, and now 150 years old, but still used, more than $100,000 has been paid out in refurnishing it for the sole occasion when it is made use of each year.

A more modern coach could be had for the cost of five years' repairs, but a new coach would never seem the same to the London public who like the Strand for the November parade. It is probable that the Lord Mayor of a century hence will ride in the same equipage, although the coach has been repaired so often that practically nothing of the original vehicle remains.

COLD STORAGE OF APPLES IN IOWA

Results of Experiments are Made Public—Better to Put Fruit in Storage As Soon as Picked

The result of some investigations in the cold storage of apples in Iowa has recently been made public. The fruit was held in storage at a temperature of 36 degrees during one winter, and 75 degrees the following winter. Firm, hard, well-colored fruit kept best. Northwestern Greenings of this type remained in good condition a month longer than poorly colored, easily picked fruit. Fruit stored immediately after picking was in better condition and lasted longer after removal from storage than samples which were harvested at the same time and kept in an upper shed for two weeks before being placed in cold storage.

No advantage was found in wrapping the apples in paper, except with the more tender varieties. With some varieties, such as the North-western Greening, no difference was noted between the different ways of packing. Wealthy apples kept best in boxes. Shrinking was greater in barrels and shrinkage was greater in slat crates than in either boxes or barrels. Practically these same results were obtained some years ago by the federal bureau of plant industry.

RIGHT AGE OF BIRDS

For Egg Production—Some Fowls are Too Old

There are people who have the right variety of fowls, who house and feed them properly, and yet who cannot obtain eggs early in the winter because their fowls are too old. It is seldom that it pays to keep hens for laying after they are two and a half years old; not that they will not give a profit, but that younger fowls will give a greater profit. A great many poultrymen who make a specialty of winter egg production keep nothing but pullets, disposing of the one-year-old hens before it is time to put them in the winter quarters. Early hatched pullets, if properly grown, ought to begin laying in October or early November and continue to lay through the winter. Yearling hens seldom begin laying much before the 1st of January, and older hens not until later. It is the November and December eggs that bring the high prices. The laying breeds should begin laying when about five months old; general purpose breeds at six months, and the meat breeds at seven or eight months.

BIRDS WITHOUT NESTS

There are scores of different kinds of birds in and around the coasts of Britain which never dream of building nests. These either steal nests or do without them altogether.

The kingfishers and the woodpeckers, as well as the cuckoos, never build, but dump their eggs into the nest of any other bird that comes handy. Our commonest little hawk, the kestrel, has a fancy for the disused nest of a carrion crow or magpie if she can find one at a sufficient height above the ground to suit her.

That odd-looking bird, the nightjar, makes no nest, but, choosing some hollow on the ground sheltered by bracken, there lays its two mottled, lead-colored eggs. Game birds mostly have no nests, and lay their eggs in a hollow on the ground. None of the plover family take much trouble about nest-building. The stone curlew, or Norfolk plover, neglects even the few bents which the plover generally places below her eggs. That rare member of the plover family, the dotterel, lays its four pear-shaped eggs in a depression of the sand or shingle on the summit of a hill or mountain.

SALT FOR MANGOLDS

Best Results Obtained From Use of 10 Per Cent. Per Acre

That application of salt in addition to other fertilizers is useful for the mangold crop is generally acknowledged, but what is the most suitable quantity to apply is a question upon which there is considerable difference of opinion.

To obtain definite information on this point, the Harper-Adams Agricultural College has been conducting experiments for three years with quantities per acre of 2½ cwt., 5 cwt., 10 cwt. and 15 cwt. respectively.

The salt was applied in the middle of April and thoroughly worked into the soil by cultivating, harrowing and roling three times before rowing up, the ridges being again split before sowing.

Special care has to be taken to ensure the salt being completely mixed with the soil, otherwise the seed is liable to be damaged.

The dressings were made across all the manurial and variety trial plots, and the weights are the average of the different plots. The result was the following:—The application of—

2½ cwt. produced an average increase, about 4 tons roots;

5 cwt. produced an average increase, about 5½ tons roots;

10 cwt. produced an average increase, about 8½ tons roots;

15 cwt. produced an average increase, about 4 tons roots.

The big application of 15 cwt. was tried for the first time last year, just to see what the effect would be.

The experiment seems to demonstrate that the quantity of salt that can be used with the best result is 10 cwt. per acre.

HORSES IN WINTER

Can be Kept on Straw as Well as on Hay

Professor J. H. Shepperd, of the North Dakota Agricultural College, answering a question recently about wintering horses on straw, says:

The North Dakota station did a considerable amount of work in horse feeding a number of years ago and made extensive trials with oat straw, as compared with hay, for roughage. In the trial it was found that some horses did about as well on it as they did on hay. While others were very much harder to carry, chiefly because their appetites for roughage were too light to cause them to eat enough of it. Aside from those dainty animals there was little trouble in keeping them up on oat straw as roughage.

The oat straw used was that of a normal season, which was coarser and more woody than that which had been obtained this year. The trial consisted of a period of sixty days' feeding with oats as the grain ration against a similar period with oats and hay, and sixty days' feeding with a mixture of half and half bran and shorts of weight with hay compared with sixty days' feeding bran and shorts with oat straw.

During the first thirty days winter conditions were present and the horses were used only about enough for good exercise. During the second thirty days they were worked at harrowing, discing and seeding and had nearly all of that work the last half of the month. The horses receiving oats and hay as a ration required nine and one-third pounds of oats with hay to carry them, while those on oats and straw consumed eleven and one-half pounds of oats per day. During the thirty days that they had light work, the horses on hay gained 176 pounds and the three on straw 169 pounds. During the thirty days when they had heavy work one-half of the time, those on hay lost 300 pounds and those on straw 345 pounds.

The similar lots of pulled oats, bran and shorts, half and half by weight, gained during the winter conditions, 25 pounds when fed hay, 23 pounds when fed straw. Those were on the straw ration with hay work for one-half of the month, lost 236 pounds, and on the hay ration 235 pounds.

These results indicate that horses can be carried almost as well on straw as roughage as they can on hay, provided enough additional grain is given them to supply them with sufficient nourishment. The additional grain required in either case, if the feeder has facilities for grinding the straw and will moisten it and mix the grain fed with it during the season when the animals are required to do very little work, a sufficient amount of grain will carry them.

SUCKERS ON CORN

In the past suckers on corn were regarded as very undesirable, and sometimes the small boy had to go through the cornfield and pull them off. Recent experiments show that suckering of the corn plant is merely a response to its environment. When the conditions are right there always be plenty of suckers. The corn plants simply try to reproduce themselves by suckering.

In an experiment several years ago where there were four plants in a hill eight suckers developed, making one hundred plants; where there were three in a hill, twenty-five suckers developed; where there were two in a hill seventy-six suckers developed while there was only one plant in the hill 196 suckers developed, or each one hundred plants. It was noticed that a large number of the suckers produced ears.

Another reason for suckering is the richness of the land. Rich, new land has been found to produce nearly twice the number of suckers as old, worn out land. To what extent the tendency to suckers is an inherited, but the weight of [illegible]

Brussels, Feb. 13.—The great machinery hall of the German section of the International Exhibition collapsed yesterday. The bodies of eight persons have been recovered, and seven injured have been taken out. A great fire occurred in this Exhibition on August 15 of last year, when the British section was almost completely destroyed.

Algonquin National Park.

Many people are unaware of the fact that in the Algonquin National Park, 1600 feet above sea level, at Algonquin Park station, a charming hotel known as the "Highland Inn" is open during the winter months for the reception of guests who desire to enjoy the pleasures of outdoor life. The purity of the air and the many winter amusements that can be enjoyed soon get the things to reorganize a run-down constitution and build the physical over-worked body. Address "Highland Inn," Algonquin Park Station, Ont., for further particulars.

LOVER SAYS MISS ARNOLD IS ALIVE

New York, February 13.—George S. Gripcom, jr., who returned from Italy last night, and whose name has been linked with Dorothy Arnold's ever since she disappeared, declared to-day that the girl was alive, and that he expected to see her soon. He did not deny the report that he is to marry Miss Arnold.

Mr. Griscom will have a conference to-day with the Arnolds and their lawyers, when plans concerning the search for the girl will be discussed.

Australia Fears Strike

Postal Employees of the Labour Government Making Trouble.

Melbourne, February 13.—So much dissatisfaction exists in all branches of the postal service in the Commonwealth, it would not be surprising if the threats of the employees to go on strike on or after April 10th, were carried into operation. For a considerable time the men have been demanding more pay and shorter hours. They state that the conditions in the service have become a reproach to the administration and that it is imperative that some remedial action be taken without delay.

The executive committee of the employees' association met at Adelaide last night, and formulated their demands, adding at the same time that if steps were not taken immediately to secure redress for the grievances complained of, the men will strike.

The situation may legitimately be regarded as serious, for the dislocation of the postal department would mean that most industries of the Commonwealth would be obliged to shut down. It is probable that the Government will take action before the strike order is put into operation

Professor Inhaled Gas.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 13.—Prof. F. J. Phillips, Professor of Forestry at the State University, committed suicide at his home early to-day by inhaling gas. Prof. Phillips left three letters, one of which was addressed to his wife, instructing her to notify the proper officers when the body was discovered. The other letters were addressed to the chief of police and coroner.

Ex-King Manuel thinks of taking a course in civil government at Oxford. He ought to have taken it earlier.

Choir on Strike; Church is Picketed

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Labor union tactics marred the serenity of religious worship in a Chicago church Sunday.

The choir of St. Andrew's Episcopal, went on a strike just prior to the morning [illegible] and some of the worshippers were compelled to dodge snowballs aimed at those of the choristers and strike-breakers who refused to yield to the entreaties of the pickets stationed near the church door.

While the underlying cause of the trouble is said to be mercenary, the grievance of the strikers was not a question of wages, but the dismissal of Dr. Isaac R. Campbell, choirmaster and organist.

That the vestrymen anticipated trouble because of their action, the leaders of the strike declared, was shown by the fact that strike-breakers from Epiphany and Trinity churches were engaged even before the members of the choir knew that they had a grievance.

But the strike was organized in short order by David Crear, 2045 Lake street, one of the first of the singers to hear of the loss of their leader.

PICKETS ARE EFFECTIVE.

Long before time for services to begin he had enlisted half a dozen others in the cause, stationed them as pickets, and soon thirty of the forty members of the choir had been won over. The pickets did not resort to violence, but the janitor's son constituted himself a self-appointed foe of the strike-breakers and pelted them with snowballs.

Daughter Dies After Mother.

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 13.—As the result of a dose of poison administered several days ago, with suicidal intent, Mrs. Joseph Ladouceur, wife of a prominent Belle River farmer, died last week. On Sunday a daughter, Miss Lucy Ladouceur, also passed away after a brief illness. The shock of the mother's death undoubtedly contributed to that of the daughter.

A Chicago man has paid $10,000 for a 7-week-old bull. This is the most noticeable bull movement we have heard of recently.

Must Register Births

The Deputy Registrar-General of the Province, Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, has started on the warpath against the clerks of the municipalities who have been neglecting to send in prompt returns of the births, marriages and deaths, which they are required to do by law. The department has issued a warning that prosecutions will follow any remissness, and an example is cited of the Clerk of Adjala Township, Simcoe, who was fined a few days ago $50 and $10 costs for failing to send in a single return in two years.

An Anarchist Plot to Kill Two Kings

Anarchists Conspiracy Discovered by Police—Russian Was to Throw Bomb.

Rome, Feb. 13.—An anarchist plot that had for its aim the assassination of King Victor Emmanuel, of Italy, and King Peter, of Servia, has been discovered by the Italian police. Twomen arrested at Trieste are held in close confinement there, while search is being made to-day throughout anarchist dens in Italian cities for other members of the gang.

The police believe that the plot was hatched in London and New York. The first steps were taken in London but the crusade resulting from the battle of Stepney so disturbed the plotters that they fled to America to complete them, according to the Italian police.

The conspiracy was to have been consummated in Rome when King Peter visits here. Lots have been drawn for the work of death, the police declare and a Russian who is still at large had been chosen to throw the bomb which was to kill the two rulers. He was to be aided in his work by an Italian anarchist named Daniele, who is now being sought.

Lettters in Pocket Led to His Arrest

Montreal Owner of Restaurant Slashed and Assailant, to Escape, Threw Off a Heavy Coat.

Montreal, Feb. 13.—While returning from a visit to his restaurant on St. James street Sunday night, Mr. A. Monette was slashed twice in the cheek with a razor and then his assailant, who had stepped out of a dark doorway ran west on St. James Street. Seeing that he was being overhauled by Mr. Monette, the assailant threw off a heavy coat that he was wearing. Mr. Monette picked this up, and in the pockets discovered a letter bearing the name of Pasquale Biango, 67 Menao street.

A few hours later Biango was brought to headquarters by Detective Leboeuf. When arrainged this morning he pleaded not guilty to the charge and was remanded until Friday for inquiry.

Mr. Monette will be marked for life.

Petition for Banker

Leniency Will be Asked on Behalf of R. E. Cughan, Late of Athens.

Brockville, Feb. 13.—Petitions are in circulation in this section praying for leniency upon the part of the Government towards R. E. Cughan, who was manager of the Farmers' Bank at Athens, and who was sentenced recently to three years in Kingston Penitentiary for falsifying statements to head office.

There is a strong disposition upon the part of the public to judge Cughan leniently in the light of recent developments in the gross mismanagement of the bank at headquarters and in view of Cughan's youth. It is felt that if he had been in firmer hands he would not have made his false step. The petition is meeting with liberal support.

Manuel Gets $40,000

Portuguese Government Shows Generosity Towards Young Monarch.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The Portuguese charge d'affaires has given to the press copies of a despatch received from Larnardo Machado, the Minister of Foreign Affairs at Lisbon, stating that despite the fact that the republic considered the royal debts to the country still unpaid, the Government had ratified the action of Manuel's agent at Lisbon in turning over to the deposed monarch $40,000 in treasury bonds.

The Government is also permitting the administrator of the property of the house of Braganza in Portugal to send the revenues to the former king.

A Mighty Ruler, He Who wisely rules himself.

Curious what a scrap you have now and then (maybe two or three "nows" and several "thens"), with what the old Scotchman called the "deevelish part" of your make-up.

• • •

It's safe to say "you" and not miss the mark, for we all belong to the same lodge, and it seems to be a part of some great plan to try us out and see if we can thus earn the right to rule greater things.

• • •

Most every day some one of the many "warriors of the enemy" comes across your pathway and puts up a scrap to see if he can rule.

• • •

You must be well trained and alert or he will make you bend the knee, or perhaps, break a leg or permanently cripple you.

• • •

There are several of these "enemies" which can be named over, but for the purpose of this article let us speak of the narcotics, the family which includes morphine, whiskey, coffee, cocaine, tea, tobacco, etc., all the same family, each member having a different degree of strength.

• • •

Now, coffee is perhaps one of the most plausible and deceitful of them all.

It has many friends, but coolly and cunningly knifes them, and they don't know where the blow comes from.

• • •

Many and many a poor, nervous wreck, with weak heart, suffers by day and lies sleepless at night without suspecting that his "dear old friend," Mr. Coffee, is quietly pushing him along towards the silent city. No, coffee don't hurt everyone by any manner of means, but it does pick out the highly organized individuals and wrecks them by the score.

• • •

Perhaps the victim realizes it, but has fallen time and again in the battle and been whipped so often that he has given up and bowed the head to the chain of his master.

"I simply cannot give up my coffee," is the wail, and so day by day he grovels and the master stretches him a few turns tighter on the rack of suffering.

• • •

Make sure of one thing. Once you become conscious of the fact that a fight is on, suffering follows steadily until you are able to rule.

• • •

Then comes the reward—comfort, health and happiness for the victor.

It is good work to stand right up and smash away with a "mailed fist" but it's much more comfortable to whip Mr. Coffee by throwing him "right over the side of the mountain" and give his place to Postum.

• • •

A steaming, fragrant cup of this famous beverage has the clear seal-brown color which changes to a rich golden brown under cream.

• • •

Ofttimes, the victory of one's better self over a known enemy is followed quickly by remarkable changes—peaceful sleep, balanced nerves, stronger heart, and all the joy which comes after the removal of a drug and its replacement with natural food elements which old Dame Nature is only too glad to seize upon for the building material so badly needed and so long denied.

• • •

Well, here's best wishes to you, reader. Hope you don't get "licked" too often, it's weakening.

Spring in the Air

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 15.—The breath of spring is in the air in the West and everything is on the move for what undoubtedly will be the biggest of all big years for this part of Canada. Winter is not, of course, over, by any means, but spring work is in active preparation all through the western provinces. There has been plenty of snow so that winter work in lumber and fuel camps has been extremely lively, and neither the lumber men nor the cordwood cutters can complain of unsuitable weather for their industries. There is no expectation of materially lower prices in forest products but the supply will be unusually great and good.

Big Building Boom

Winnipeg Starting Season Well In Building Operations.

Winnipeg, Feb. 15.—As big as the year 1910 was in building operations 1911 promises to be even bigger. January started off with permits for $199,000 worth of new structures, as against $188,000 for January of 1910. Builders are already beginning to excavate for houses, having found that this work is done better, and cheaper before spring loosens up the frost and plunges the country into a week or ten days of mud—a period, short as it is, which the builder chafes over as an obstacle in the way of the speed he must make to keep up with the extraordinary demands made upon him.

There is to be the biggest rush of new people into Canada this year that has ever been seen. Bookings on Canadian lines from the Old Country are all taken until May, and those who have left securing passage until now will have to wait or come through the States. Real estate men with business connections in the United States report the heaviest business from the South that they have ever known.

WOMAN WORE FOUR VEILS

Convicted of Smuggling, Curious Crowd Could Not Guess at Her Features.

New York, Feb. 13.—While a crowd of 500 men and women struggled outside the Tombs to get a glimpse of her, Mrs. Roberta Mangan, Corwin-Hill, the first woman ever sentenced to jail in America for smuggling, was to-day released from the prison. She was in a state of collapse and had to be carried from the place to her father's automobile.

The young woman wore four veils, and the curious ones were unable to get a look at her features.

Mrs. Corwin-Hill was once known as "the belle of Sheepshead Bay." Her first husband was Halsey Corwin. Next she married Major Hill of the English army.

London, Feb. 15.—Lord Kitchener returned from Naples, but is not entirely well yet, and will spend a week at Brighton.

Monday night down near the C.P.R. station two men got into a heated political argument, and so violent did they become that several blows were exchanged before they were separated. Broke Window With Head.

The smashing of glass late on Monday night on Water street, north, woke up the next door neighbor, who was amazed to observe a man butting his head through five or six windows, one after the other. The floor was highly waxed, consequently very slippery. King Alfonso, who was present, laughed loudly at the mishap of his Prime Minister. To-day a deputation of citizens called upon King Alfonso, wishing him and his country success in the fighting against the Riff tribesmen in Morocco.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Third Monday in January Favored by Toronto.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—The holding of the municipal elections on the third Monday in January, instead of on New Year's Day, as suggested by Mr. A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., meets with the approval of the City Clerk, Littlejohn—if any change is to be made at all. Under present conditions, he says, his Department could not prepare for elections early in December. The voters' lists are made up from the assessors' rolls. The assessors start out in March and complete the rolls by September 30th. They could not start earlier in the year, said the City Clerk, because of the inclemency of the weather.

There is little business to do after Christmas, he added, and a business meeting of the Council could be held within a few days of the election for the purpose of putting through any necessary business.

"MILLIONAIRE TRAMP"

Wealthy Man Disguised as a Hobo Will Write His Impressions.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—After a two year tour of the United States, in which he visited every large city and many of the smaller ones disguised as a "hobo," Edwin A. The result of his country-wide investigation will be published in book form.

Both in a Bad Way.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—The Kaiser's indisposition is the subject of much speculation. The doctor says it is a simple cold, but outsiders are inclined to believe it to be a return of his ear trouble. CHINA TO HAVE PARLIAMENT SOON.

Consul-General to Canada Announces Its Establishment in Two Years.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Constitutional law will be put in force in China in a little over two years, and a Parliament will be then summoned. Chinese merchants abroad will have the right to vote for two representatives to lay matters before the Government for consideration, but these will not have the power of voting on them in the assembly.

This was the message conveyed to the Chinese residents of Toronto in Victoria Hall last night, by Mr. S. Y. Wong, of Ottawa, Chinese Consul-General to Canada. An audience of about five hundred was present, and the speeches were all in Chinese. Mr. Wong's secretary, Mr. Chan also spoke.

Before returning to Ottawa to-day, Mr. Wong contemplates paying official visits to his Honor Lieut.-Governor Gibson, Sir James Whitney and Mayor Geary.

WOMAN, EMPLOYED AND UNEMPLOYED.

The Rich are Always Prone to See The Attractive Side of Poverty.

The rich are always prone to see the attractive side of poverty. The poor themselves are not so sure. Mr. Carnegie, being exceptionally rich, is exceptionally genial in his view of the delights accompanying straitened circumstances. The young women whom he addressed the other day in an eastern printing house may have their doubts and reservations. Still, they should bear in mind that their visitor has seen both sides of the matter, while they have experienced but one.

It is to be hoped, however, that these industrious young persons realize the value of useful work and the comfort and happiness that may be derived from it. Many people, merely by means of unremitting industry have been kept from a disquieting and disillusioning perception of their own deficiencies and limitations. The woman to whom this unpleasant knowledge is surest to come is, as Mr. Carnegie indicates, the idle wife of the millionaire. If there is nothing in her she finds it out—or would if she did not make work for herself. The social whirl is her defense from her own vacuity, just as the stir of the factory may be the defense of her less favored sister. Yet even if activity be made to serve as a guard against self-revelation, productive activity is to be preferred to unproductive activity. After all, the balance appears to be in favor of the employed woman, as Mr. Carnegie has suggested.

SHUTTING OFF THE INQUISITIVE JAP.

A General Reluctance to Admitting Them in Schools and Dock Yards.

The general sharpness of the Japanese receives a certain tribute in the fact complained of by the head of a Tokio technical school recently touring Europe, that Japanese students and visitors are coming more and more to be excluded from the factories and technical institutions of England and Germany. There is also shown in the same quarters a growing reluctance about giving Japanese naval officers easy access to dockyards and arsenals.

The opinion seems to be growing generally that the Japanese are showing themselves too clever, too knowing, too imitative and adaptable, and a good deal too free in their dealings with the patterns, trademarks and patents of other peoples. It is also coming to be felt that they can build up their factory system and their naval establishment without much more in the way of help and hints from outside.

This cautious and jealous attitude, has not been, up to the present, the attitude of America. Not only have we shown ourselves willing to give the orientals every opportunity to inform themselves, but we insisted, almost from the start, upon teaching them things they did not at all care to know. This traditional policy will probably continue—if only by reason of the national characteristic of expansiveness—and we shall probably entertain more intelligent Japanese investigators than ever, if England and Germany develop an interesting tendency to turn them off. What the Japanese learn in America will hurt America no more than it hurts the rest of the world, and American open-mindedness may lead Japan to a better feeling for the United States than can continue toward other countries that show themselves less indulgent toward the inquiring mind of the East.

UNION PLACE

LOCAL AND IMPERIAL PATRIOTISM

"South African" writes to the Standard of the Empire on the subject of local and imperial patriotism. He finds that there is a certain demand for "loyalty to the mother country," and the demand irritates him the more because it is addressed only to those who have chosen to leave the mother country and those who have never seen her shores. "South African" thinks there can be only two kinds of patriotism—love for one's native land, and regard for the Empire as a whole.

"A well-regulated and healthy man should be imbued with an underlying love for and devotion to his native land. Beyond that, if he be a British subject, he may well have a kindly reverence for storied Britain as the birthplace of a great and dominating race, and the headquarters of its Empire. His "patriotism" and "loyalty," however, should be for something quite other than his country. They should be for that thing which makes this country great and worthy of reverence; for that which this country has produced; for all that the Flag and the Crown symbolize; in short, for the British Empire. A British subject's patriotism should be a two-fold thing, his loyalty dual. First his native land, his particular portion of the great whole as such; second, and over all, the great whole itself; all that is represented by the Flag and the Crown: the Empire of our race."

The fact is that language has not yet caught up to the new conditions of the Empire. It is quite common to hear of the loyalty which a Canadian should bear to England, but one seldom hears of the loyalty which a Canadian should bear to Australia, or an Australian to Canada. We think of loyalty as due to a superior. The new feeling which is permeating the British Empire is that of loyalty from friend to friend.

The old terminology is used partly as a matter of habit, and partly as a matter of sentiment on the part of recent arrivals from Great Britain. This sentiment is quite natural. The recently arrived Englishman is apt to think of the land he has left with the same affection as the city boy has for the old homestead, where he was born and bred. But obviously, as "South African" says, this feeling cannot be expected in persons who have never seen England, and especially in those whose racial origin is not English. The British Empire is composed of many races. Of its total population nearly three-fourths are of the Indian races. Of the whole population of South Africa a large portion are Dutch.

A good deal of misunderstanding is caused by overlooking these obvious facts. We occasionally hear of the disloyalty of French-Canadians, the fact simply being that a French-Canadian is not an Englishman, and cannot have the feelings of an Englishman for the land across the sea. His local patriotism—the feeling expressed in Scott's line: "This is my own, my native land"—is for Canada alone. It is rather by reflection than by sentiment that he can be made to appreciate the advantages of the Imperial connection. The absurdity of expecting a Boer to entertain the sentiments of an Englishman is manifest. Yet the Boer is likely to become a good citizen, not only of South Africa, but of the Empire.

After the general election in Great Britain there was a good deal of nonsense talked about the United Kingdom being dominated by the "Celtic fringe"—curiously enough by persons themselves to be Unionists and Imperialists. To understand the British Empire requires a cosmopolitan sympathy, a sympathy not limited by race or even by color.

Only Safety of Europe From Infection Borne From Manchuria.

Paris, Feb. 13.—Dr. Burnett, of Paris University, who has made a special study of the bubonic plague, says the only way for Europe to prevent the spread of the disease from Asia is by isolation. In spite of the easy communication from Manchuria, where the plague is raging, by the Trans-Siberian Railway, he says that Europe will not be infected unless it is done through absolutely criminal carelessness.

VOL. XXXIV NO. 39 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, THURSDAY FEBRUARY 16, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

AN APPEAL TO SAVE THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Words of Democrat Leader Rouses the Press of Great Britain---Will Make Canada Pause

London, Feb. 15.—England is aroused to-day over the fear of losing Canada in case the American-Canadian reciprocity agreement is ratified.

The press is particularly disturbed because of the statement made by Speaker-elect Champ Clark in the House yesterday that he had no doubt that the time would soon come when England would gladly look forward to the turning over of her possessions in North America to the United States.

The Conservative press is exhibiting the nearest approach to "Americaphobia" that it has ever displayed, as even the papers friendly to reciprocity are censuring Clark for his so-called indiscretion.

The Westminster Gazette, which has led the fight for reciprocity, says today:

"Clark must be singularly innocent if, desiring this consummation, he imagines it will be promoted by such a frank avowal at the present moment. But we will probably get the right kind of measure, despite his utterance."

MAKE CANADA PAUSE.

"The speech will surely make Canada pause before assenting to the tariff agreement," The Globe declares.

The Times says that if its correspondent is right in stating that it is doubtful whether the American people take the annexation talk seriously "the Americans show their good sense."

The Pall Mall Gazette asserts that "Englishmen cannot much longer be blind to the fact that preference signifies union."

An appeal to the English people to "save Canada
"save the Empire" is sounded by the Morning Post. It declares that there is no longer any attempt in America to conceal the ultimate aim of annexating Canada.

Other papers "play up" Clark's words in their news columns, but they are evidently waiting until they have recovered from the shock before making editorial comment.

New York, Feb. 15.—A Times special cable from London says Bernard Partridge has a cutting cartoon in to-day's Punch. Beside a tombstone on which is carved: "Here lie the remains of Imperial preference, killed by reciprocity," with the guise of a scriptural quotation, this paraphrase of the English tariff reformer's shibboleth: "His food will cost him no more." Mr. Balfour stands in deep mourning, but with a sly half-smile nearly hidden by a black-edged handkerchief.

The cartoon is entitled "Resignation," and Mr. Balfour, who is described as "Looking on the bright side," is quoted as saying:

"His food will cost him no more. Beautiful thought! so consoling."

Champ Clark Predicts That Canada Will be Under Stars and Stripes

THE REBIPROCITY BILL SWEEPS THROUGH CONGRESS WITH 128 VOTES TO SPARE.

It Now Passes to the Senate, Where Majority Has Been Against It—Intense Excitement During Swirling Debate.

Washington, Feb. 15.—With the crash of Speaker Cannon's gavel and the shouts of excited men the McCall Canadian reciprocity bill yesterday rode triumphantly through the House of Representatives with an overwhelming majority of 221 to 92 at the end of a debate that lasted for eight solid hours without one moment's relaxation.

It has been a foregone conclusion for some days that the bill would pass the House, but its warmest friends did not expect that it would sweep through as it did. Even with this general expectation in everybody's mind, the interest in the debate was intense and the floor at the House was crowded as it has not been in the last six weeks, except on the day when San Francisco and New Orleans fought over the next big fair. Parliamentary decorum, always some what scarce here, became more so as the end drew near, and Mr. Cannon slammed so lustily with his wooden hammer that his inkpot nearly fell off the desk. Members crowded the aisles and gangway in front of the speaker's desk and question and taunt vied with argument for precedence on the House records.

SPEAKER MUNCHED AN APPLE.

"The gentlemen will desist till the House comes to order. The chair will preserve order. The gentleman entitled to five minutes, and the chair will see that he gets them." Mr. Cannon would shout. Laying aside the apple he had been munching and smiting with all his might, and the uproar would die down for a moment.

Fighting desperately to the last ditch Mr. Dalzell, leader of the Opposition to the bill, was forced back foot by foot. Verily, politics make strange bedfellows and unexpected changes. The whole situation was full of anomolies. In the first place the success of the bill, an administration measure, was due wholly and solely to the opposition party. If the Democrats had not swung into line behind Mr. Taft's bill it would not have had a ghost of a show against the Republicans, of which party Mr. Taft is the most prominent member Then, too, the House was treated to the remarkable sight of Mr. Dalzell recognized representative of the steel trust pleading, almost with tears in his eyes, the cause of the United States farmer. The bond of affection between these had been hitherto somewhat vague to say the least of it. Finally there was the equally surprising spectacle of the Democrats who had fought furiously against gag rules, and finally overthrown Speaker Cannon and the powerful house machine on that very point, turning round as one man and voting for a rule which exempted the McCall bill from any amendments and Mr. Dalzell's other exponents of gag tactics in the past thundering virtuously against the prevention of free debate.

"I hope to see the day when the American flag will wave over the whole North American Continent to the North Pole. The Canadians are of our language. They are the same people. If the tariff treaty of 1854 had not been abrogated, we would have been a good deal nearer together than we are now. I am in favor of universal peace."—Champ Clark.

"Do you think this in the end will bring Canada into the Union?" asked Norris of Nebraska.

"Yes. I have no doubt about it," replied Mr. Clark.

"Do you think that it will tend to peace with Great Britain?"

"Yes, certainly it will. I have no doubt whatever that the time will come when Great Britain will joyfully see all her North American possessions become part of the Republic. That is the way things are tending now."

Favors Reciprocity with All the World

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft and Speaker-to-be Champ Clark, of Missouri, surprised the delegates to the Pan-American Commercial Conference here yesterday by announcing that they favor reciprocity not only with Canada, but with South and Central America, and, in fact, the entire world. In this connection it was learned that informal discussions are already taking place between representatives of the State Department and the Mexican ambassador, with a view to opening the way to reciprocity negotiations with that country.

QUEER JAPANESE MARRIAGE COMEDY

Tokio, Feb. 13.—An amusing matrimonial comedy has been recounted by the "Japan Herald." Briefly put the story is this: Tsune, a pretty girl of 21, took service in Tokio at the house of a peer. Her uncle, Bunzaburo, who got her the post, introduced to her at the end of the service Centaro, a young merchant, who sought her hand. Tsune, or rather her uncle, gave it, and the wedding day was fixed. But Tsune had an elder brother, named Yokei, who did not know of these things, and promised Tsune in marriage to his friend Shojoro. He told Tsune he had arranged for the ceremony, and, hearing she was already engaged, ordered her to cancel the previous engagement. Bunzaburo at this stage took a hand in the game, and protested. On the wedding day of Sentaro and Tsune, Yokei arrived. He wished, he said, to congratulate his sister. He did not stop short at this formality. In addition, he removed her in a rikisha to the house of Shojoro. Here everything to a bridegroom was in readiness for a wedding ceremony, and the ceremony began. Sentaro, with the aid of the police, at length discovered Shojoro and his bride. There was much wrangling and a sensational struggle, but the police insisted that Tsune was Sentaro's in virtue of the prior attachment and engagement. So Tsune went off to Sentara's home, and was married all over again.

SAYS NEGOTIATORS ON NEITHER SIDE HAS ANY THOUGHT OF POLITICAL UNION.

Congratulates McCall—President Expresses Sincere Hope That the Bill Will Pass the Senate.

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft officially registered his anger at Speaker-elect Champ Clark's statement concerning the annexation of Canada, in a letter written to-day to Representative McCall (Republican, Massachusetts), congratulating him on the passage of the reciprocity bill, in which he said:

"This agreement, if it becomes law, has no political significance. No thought of future political annexation or union was in the minds of the negotiators on either side.

"Canada is now and will remain a political unit."

The President added: "I sincerely hope that the bill will pass the Senate and become part of our statutes."

A SWEEPING BILL AGAINST BONUSES

MEASURE IN LEGISLATURE TO ABSOLUTELY PUT AN END TO THE SYSTEM.

Gift, Loan, or Guarantee—Lease of Land at Nominal Rental, or Free Water or Power Included.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—J. J. Craig, East Wellington, has given notice that he will introduce into the Legislatura bill to prohibit all municipal bonuses by repealing all the clauses in the present statute relating to bonuses and prohibiting all bonuses of any kind. His amendment contains a specific prohibition of bonuses to manufacturing industries, iron, smelting or refining works, beet sugar factories, rolling mills, or grain elevators.

For the purpose of the prohibition the definition of a bonus is greatly enlarged. Mr. Craig would have bonus include any grant of money as a gift or loan, the guaranteeing of any loan, the gift of land, or leasing of land at a nominal rental, the carrying out of any local improvement for the particular use or benefit of any manufacturing industry, the supplying of light, water, or power to any industry free, or at rates less than those generally charged, and any act involving any special expenditure on the part of the municipality.

A prominent member of the French Address Committee admitted this, and stated that no address would be presented in the event of Bishops Fallon of London, and Scollard of North Bay, taking any part in the welcome.

ARSENIC FOUND IN THE STOMACH

STARTLING FACTS BROUGHT OUT IN THE LOBINSKI MURDER MYSTERY.

Inquest Resumed Yesterday—Arrest Likely to Follow Verdict—Authorities Have Not Been Sleeping as Supposed.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—The latest disclosure made in the Lobinski murder case at Wellesley in January is the discovery of arsenic poisoning in the stomach which was forwarded to Toronto for analysis.

As a bottle of poison was found in the house the result of the analysis willprove material evidence at the inquest which will be resumed at two o'clock in Wellesley to-day.

VERDICT TO-NIGHT.

The authorities who have constantly been on the ground intimated before leaving for Wellesley this morning that the jury would to-day bring in a verdict of an unusual nature, an arrest will follow as a result of the grist of evidence already submitted together with that of to-day's inquiry.

It is learned that only recently the detectives searched the residence of the Mowak brothers, of Berlin, two material witnesses in the case. The apparent silence and inactivity of the Crown authorities have given rise to much criticism from the farmers in the Wellesley neighborhood.

BURN CAUSED OPEN SORE.

Zam-Buk Worked a Wonderful Cure.

Sometimes a bad burn, a deep cut, or some similar injury, sets up a more permanent injury, in the form of an open discharging sore. In such cases Zam-Buk will be found of unequalled value.

Mr. J. Nixon, of 901 William Ave., Winnipeg, a blacksmith at the C.P.R. shops, had his foot badly burned by some molten metal falling upon it. He says: "The burn was a very bad one, and after the first few days it left an open sore, which showed marked signs of blood-poisoning. It discharged freely and caused me terrible agony. For three weeks I suffered acutely and could get no ease. At last I obtained a preparation from the doctor, which seemed to stop the discharging and made me quite hopeful, but finally the wound became as bad as ever.

"I was then advised to use Zam-Buk, and from the first application the balm gave me relief. The inflammation was thoroughly checked, and the poisonous matter cleared away in a very short time after beginning with Zam-Buk. Healing then began, and in less than two weeks the wound was thoroughly healed."

One of the main lessons of this case lies right here—try Zam-Buk first for any any injury, sore, skin disease or wound. It is equally good for piles, blood-poisoning, festering wounds, chaps, cold sores, children's eruptions, scalp sores, varicose ulcers, chilblains, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful substitutes and inferior preparations, which yield a bigger margin of profit and are sometimes pushed as being "just as good." Nothing is just as good.

Building Fell Carrying Down Sixty People

THREE SCORE OF OCCUPANTS WERE CARRIED DOWN IN THE COLLAPSE.

One Woman Fatally Hart—Others Dug Out of the Debris and Conveyed to Safety—Loss is $100,000.

Winnipeg, Feb. 15.—Nares' block in the centre of the city collapsed today, carrying down in the debris three score of occupants. By prompt action all were rescued. Many of them were women, and their screams and terror rendered the work of the squads of firemen and police sent to their rescue, most difficult.

Mrs. John McLeavy, a woman of 70 years, was fatally hurt. Dozens were dug out of the debris and carried to safety although severely injured.

The collapse was the result of adjacent building operations, and the five storeys began to crumble without warning. The various suites in the buildings were occupied by the following families: John Campbell, Alexander Watson, Allan Adams, William Lewis, John McDonald, Milford Schmidt, J. Bloomfield, Sam. Allen, George Bimpson, John McLeavy, A. Campbell.

Sixteen young women on the top floor were in a precarious situation. They climbed to the roof of the shaking building, as all exits were closed and their screams of terror were heard for blocks. The scene of the accident was at the corner of Lombard and Main streets, in the heart of the big building district. The loss is $100,000.

Champ Clark Stands By Annexation Talk

Refuses to Add or Take From His Remarks in Congress Yesterday.

Washington, Feb. 15.—With a storm of comment breaking about his head, Speaker-elect Champ Clark today stood pat on his "Canadian annexation" speech of yesterday, declining to alter or add to his declaration that the time will come when Great Britain will watch complacently the absorption of Canada by the United States.

"I said all that I had to say about that yesterday," declared Clark today, "and I have nothing to add to it. The statement needs no explanation or comments."

Among members of the House Clark's statement awakened more interest than his demand for Canadian reciprocity. His position as Speaker for the next House gave rise to much talk.

The French physician, Dr. Mesni was not inoculated. He was infected owing to a patient coughing in his unmasked face.

Dr. Jackson, a British physician, died of exhaustion, after continuous hard work among the infected coolies. Sir Edward Grey concluded by declaring that Sir John Jordan reports that the heroism of the physicians is beyond praise.

DID WILFULLY MURDER CHILD

Coroner's Jury Finding in Case of Pearl Smith at Collingwood—Hearing in Police Court.

Collingwood, Feb. 15.—The inquest on the body of the unknown baby found in the ice and willows here was resumed yesterday by Coroner McFaul, with Crown Attorney Cotter conducting the enquiry. Pearl Smith or Anderson, the eighteen-year-old girl charged with wilfully murdering the child, and Mrs. Beeson, matron of the Salvation Army Shelter in Toronto, were also present. On opening the inquiry Mr. Cotter called Miss Anderson. Her counsel, Col. Bruce, strenuously objected, on the ground that a person charged with a crime could not be compelled to be a witness. His objection being overruled he flatly refused to let his client enter the box, and the other witnesses were proceeded with.

The jury returned a verdict that the male infant was the child of Pearl Smith, alias Anderson, and that it died from exposure by being placed in the willows in the willows near the railway track on Jan. 23, 1911, by Pearl Smith. The jury added a clause expressing their appreciation of the Salvation Army Rescue Home, and as a further evidence of their sympathy with its work unanimously donated it their allowances for sitting at the inquest.

The Gallant Colonel to Defend Canada

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—When the orders of the day were called in the House of Commons this afternoon, Col. Sam. Hughes drew attention to the alleged remark by Champ Clark in the House of Representatives at Washington: "We are preparing to annex Canada," and asked what the Canadian Government was going to do about it.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied: "The Government is not aware of any such speech, but if the worst comes to the worst, we will call upon the honorable member, gallant soldier that he is, to come to our defence."

Col. Hughes: "Will the Premier leave the question in my hands?"

The Premier laughed and shook his head.

In answer to Dr. Reid, of Grenville Hon. Mr. Fielding stated that the quarantine regulations of neither country were affected by the reciprocity agreement.

WAKING OF BANK-NOTES.

Bank-notes are a subject of perennial interest, although to some the interest is neither intimate nor financial, but more or less abstract and academic. An entertaining address on the making of bank-notes was given in Toronto recently by Mr. Jose Machad, of Ottawa. Mr. Machad outlined the history of this necessary commercial commodity and said that the first bank note was made by the Chinese in 1399. It was printed from a wooden block and bore a legend which stated that anyone who counterfeited it would be executed. This bill was stolen from the palace at Pekin by an American and the American Bank Note Co. now owned it, having paid $1200 to obtain possession of the curio. The first banknote on this continent was engraved in 1815 by Paul Revere, and a man named Perkins started the engraving of them in England. The firm which he founded established a branch in Canada in 1897 to make postage stamps and Canadian bills. The speaker said that a plan to guard against duplication of bills had recently been devised. The companies incorporated minute colored disks into the bill where the signatures were placed and these could not be made by any forger. Another safeguard against forgery were the fine line cuts used in the pictures and portraits. A family of engravers named Crean had the secret for these cuts and had manufactured them for nearly a century.

A FAIR ALLOWANCE.

In taking entirely on itself the responsibility of proposing an increase in the sessional indemnity of members of the Legislature the Ontario Government is not likely to receive any severe criticism except from those persons who rarely go deeply into the facts attending such an increased expenditure. The necessities of life have increased very materially during the past ten or fifteen years. The indemnity at present is $1,000. To men who are able to earn large incomes in law, medicine or other professions or business this is a small payment for the time and effort he is supposed to give as a representative of the people. As pointed out, the living expenses of members of the Legislature are in almost every respect as high as they are in Ottawa. True, the session does not last as long, but the House of Commons now pays the member $2,500 apiece, and $1,500 for a member of the Legislature is out of proportion. Men who go to either provincial or federal Parliament must sacrifice much of their private time and private interests in the public service. It is only right that when the salaries of all civil servants have been increased from year to year, when the cost of living has gone up and the country's revenue is large, men entrusted with the framing of important legislation should be reasonably well paid for their labors.

Kingston Standard: Bourassa went on a mission to Rome to secure the help of the Pope in his Nationalist campaign. Now, in his newspaper, Le Devoir, he is pitching into Postmaster General Lemieux for also making a pilgrimage to Rome for the purpose of offsetting what Bourassa may have done, and getting the Pope to intervene in the naval question in favor of the Laurier Government policy. It is a great mistake for the pot to call the kettle black—and it is a greater mistake still to invoke the aid of Rome in connection with purely secular matters. Both the Roman Catholics and the Protestants of Canada will resent it.

THE RED YEAR

presence of a man of the 3rd cavalry in the palace that morning was a sinister fact that led to only one conclusion. No matter what the motive, he felt that Chumru and he were trapped. There was no avenue of escape. Whether they went ahead or made a dash for the city, their pursuers could keep them well in sight, as their tired horses were incapable of a sustained effort at top speed after having been on the move nearly twenty hours.

He had to decide quickly, and his decision must be governed not by personal considerations but by the needs of his country. If he had been recognized, the enemy would follow him. Therefore, Chumru might outwit them were he given a chance.

"Listen, good friend," he shouted, as they clattered up the hill. "Thou seest the tope of trees in front?"

"Yea, sahib."

"This, then, is my last order, and it must be obeyed. When we reach those trees we will bear off towards the palace. Pull up there and dismount. Give me the reins of your horse, and hide yourself quickly among the trees. I shall ride on, and you may be able to dodge into some ditch or nullah till it is dark. Rejoin those men from Gwalior if possible, and try to get away from the city. Tell the General-sahib what you have seen and that I sent you. Do you understand?"

"Husoor!—"

"Silence! Wouldst thou have me fail in my duty? It is my parting wish, Chumru. There is no time for words. Do as I say, or we both die uselessly."

There was no answer. The Mohammedan's eyes blazed with the frenzy of a too complete comprehension of his master's intent. But now they were behind the trees, and Malcolm was already checking Nejdi. Chumru flung himself from the saddle and ran. Cowering amid some shrubs of dense foliage, he watched Malcolm dashing along the road to the Lahore Gate of the palace. A minute later the rebels thundered past, and they did not seem to notice that one of the two horses disappearing in the curved cutting that led to the drawbridge and side entrance of the gate was riderless.

Chumru ought to have taken immediate measures to secure his own safety. But he did nothing of the kind. He lay there, watching the hard-riding horseman, and striving most desperately to do them all the harm that the worst sort of malign imprecations could effect. They, in turn, vanished in the sunken approach to the fortress, and the unhappy bearer was imagining the horrible fate that had befallen the master, whom he loved more than kith and kin, when he saw the same men suddenly reappear and gallop towards the Delhi Gate, which was situated at a considerable distance.

Something had happened to disappoint and annoy them—that much he could gather from their gestures and impassioned speech. Whatever it was, Malcolm-sahib apparently was not dead yet, and while there is life there is hope.

Chumru proceeded to disrobe. He kicked off his boots, untied his puttees, threw aside the frock-coat and breeches of a cavalry rissaldar, and stood up in the ordinary white clothing of a native servant.

"Shabash!" muttered he, as he unfastened the military badge in his turban. "There is nothing like a change of clothing to alter a man. Now I can follow my sahib and none be the wiser."

With that he walked coolly into the roadway and stepped out leisurely towards the Lahore Gate. But he found the massive door closed and the drawbridge raised, and a gruff voice bade him begone, as the gate would not be opened until the King's orders were received.

CHAPTER XVI.

In the Vortex

Malcolm was not one to throw his life away without an effort to save it. Once, during a visit to Delhi, Captain Douglas, the ill-fated commandant of the Palace Guards, had taken him to his quarters for tiffin. As it happened, the two entered by the Delhi Gate and walked through the gardens and corridors to Douglas's rooms, which were situated over the Lahore Gate. Thus he possessed a vague knowledge of the topography of the citadel, and his visit that morning had refreshed his memory to a slight extent. On that slender reed he based some hope of escape. In any event he prayed that his ruse might better Chumru's chances, and he promised himself a soldier's death if brought to bay in side the palace.

Crossing the drawbridge at a fast gallop, he saw a number of guards looking at him wonderingly. It occurred to him that the exciting events of the early hours might have led to orders being given on the question of admitting sepoys in large numbers. If that were so, he might gain time by a bit of sheer audacity. At any rate, there was no harm in trying. As he clattered through the gateway he shouted excitedly:

"Close and bar the door! None must be admitted without the King's special order!"

The spectacle of a well-mounted sepoy officer, blood-stained and travel-worn, who arrived in such desperate haste and was evidently pursued by a body of horse, so startled the attendants that they banged and bolted the great door without further ado.

Already the story was going the rounds that the precious life of Bahadur Shah had actually been threatened by the overbearing sepoys—what more likely than that this hard-riding officer was coming to apprise his majesty of a genuine plot, while the flying squadron in the rear was striving to cut him down before the fateful message was delivered?

Not to create too great a stir, Malcolm pulled up both horses at the entrance to the arrade.

He called a chaprassi and bade him hold Chumru's steed. Then, learning from the uproar at the gate that the guards were obeying his instructions literally, he went on at an easier pace.

The palace was humming with excitement. Its numerous buildings housed a multitude of court nobles and other hangers-on to the court, and each of these had his special coterie of attendants who helped to advance their own fortunes by clinging to their mas

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roeslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very valuable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an option of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

Wild Man Captured After Desperate Fight

FOR FOUR YEARS HE HAS RANGED THE WOODS, WITH THE REPUTATION OF A GHOST.

Said to Have Lived on Raw Flesh of Wild Animals—Captured by Constable Grassick After Desperate Struggle.

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Word has just been received at the headquarters of the Provincial Police of the capture of a wild man near Vermillion Bay, which reads like a page from fiction. The man has lived alone in the bush for four years, subsisting on roots, berries, and raw meat and fish. He imagined that he was the owner of about thirty-six square miles of timber lands and strove to keep everybody out of that area. Lumbermen in the district for a long time thought that he was a ghost and would refuse to go out in the district at night. It was only about a year ago that people in the district realized that was thought to be a ghost was really a demented man. When, on the complaint of the lumbermen, Police Constable Grassick went to capture him, he put up a tremendous fight, and it was only after assistance had been secured that the constable was able to secure him.

The man gave his name as John Beck. Four years ago his left hand was blown off while he was fishing with dynamite. After the wound had healed he took to the woods. For three years his identity was unknown and the general notion that he was a ghost was borne out by the great speed with which he could move through the bush. Seldom more than a glimpse could be caught of him. He is said to have been able to overtake any animal in the bush and kill it without a weapon of any kind, eating its flesh raw.

When he became seized with the idea that he owned the land he began to warn the lumbermen away, threatening to burn their camps. On several occasions he did attempt to set fire to them during the night. He was found by the constable living in a little shack built in a small crevice in the hill. He fought desperatelyfor his freedom, and after he had been bound with ropes only gave up when absolutely exhausted and unable to move a muscle. When taken to the jail at Kenora his hair was about fifteen inches long and his face was covered with an inch of matted hair and grime. He was clothed in sheep skins fastened together with wire.

LAUDS BOTHA

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux takes no stock in the cabled report that Premier Botha of South Africa will, at the coming Imperial conference, propose the abolition of the tariff preference in favor of Great Britain, and will instead suggest the substitution of a cash vote for the Imperial navy. Mr. Lemieux says that when he was in South Africa he found no sentiment in favor of the elimination of the British preference. On the contrary, Premier Botha was as enthusiastic as possible over the idea which he adopted upon the suggestion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier after the last conference.

But Mr. Lemieux adds that he also found a strong sentiment in favor of a substantial increase in the contributions of South Africa towards the navy.

Mr. Lemieux believes the grant to be made by the new Union will prove to the world that United South Africa is a unit in support of the Imperial navy. There is no desire there for a local fleet, it being regarded that South Africa, being on the main line to India, is in a different position from Canada and Australia and New Zealand.

HANNA DEFENDS ONTARIO POLICE

FROM THE CRITICS WHO HAVE DENOUNCED THE SALE OF LIQUOR IN THE NORTH.

He Quotes Some Figures Which He Considers Prove That They are Doing Very Good Work.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—Criticisms made in some quarters on the methods of the Provincial police in rounding up blind-pig supplies in Northern Ontario have aroused Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, to come to their defence and to make a statement of what has been done in the north.

Mr. Hanna said: "There seems to be a persistent effort in certain quarters to discredit the work done by the Provincial police in the enforcement of the Liquor Act. The facts are that no body of men could do more than the Provincial police under Superintendent Rogers are doing in this, as evidence the siezures made since November 1, 1910, a little over three months. This is the list: 3678 bottles of whiskey, 37 gallons of whiskey, 5 barrels of whiskey, 48 bottles of gin, 37 gallons of high wines, 27 gallons of wine, 4 barrels of wine, and 60 bottles of wine.

"This does not include the carload of beer siezed by Inspector Caldbick on the 5th, or the beer seized at Cochrane last week."

RUSSIAN STUDENTS UNDER ARREST

HUNDREDS TAKEN INTO CUSTODY FOR SINGING THE "MARSEILLAISE."

Details Ringleaders—Threat to Close the Women's College Has a Salutary Effect.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—With the help of police lectures at the university were read as usual to-day. A single attempt at disturbance in the lecture-room by the singing of the Marseillaise, led to the arrest of several hundred students, whose identity was established. They are liable to expulsion from the university and may be handed over to the courts to be dealt with. All were released temporarily, with the exception of the ringleaders.

The university has been closed for several days, owing to the determination of the students to remain away from lectures as a protest against the deprivation of certain privileges by the Government. The announcements of the Government's intention to close the women's university here for four or five years, unless studies were resumed, has had a salutary effect.

Disturbances also occurred to-day at the University of Moscow, 26 students there being detained under arrest.

No Husband in Georgia Has Exclusive Claim Now to Services of His Spouse.

New York, Feb. 14.—A despatch from Savanah, Ga., printed here says "I'd rather work for a living than sit at home and darn socks," Mrs. Myra G. Brown told the judge in the Superior Court here to-day, when explaining why she wanted an injunction to restrain her husband from interfering with her desire to keep her position and the court showed his sympathy by making the restraining order permanent.

The husband Gilbert Brown, is well to do and his wife made no denial of his statement, that he had provided well for her in the matter of life's necessities. But she left home to a business position.

The decision practically means that no husband in Georgia has an exclusive claim on his wife's services.

The late David Boyle, the well-known archaeologist, who died in Toronto on Tuesday last, was known to quite a number in Peterborough. About 10 or 12 years ago he visited Peterborough with Lord Kelvin, President of the Royal Society of Science, which met in Toronto that year and proceeded to Rice Lake by steam er North Star, to inspect the famous serpentine mounds near Keene. Dr. Boyle gave a short address on the steamer on the homeward trip, explaining the history of these Indian graves.

The Coming Fashions

Women who occupy themselves during Lent with preparations for their summer wardrobe will be glad to know that simple, straight-hung skirts, slightly fulled to a round waist line, with a bertha, fichu or "baby" corsage, and short sleeves, are the general lines that are expected to prevail next summer.

Soft, coarse, semi-transparent cotton and linen materials, with an excessive quantity of lace and embroidery a jour and raised designs, will compose what is called washable gowns. The highest chic is to have the gown, coat or blouse embroidered after it is cut and fitted. When this is not possible a cunning use of fancy open stitches, in combination with narrow trou-trou, accomplishes wonders in the way of concealing the joining of the decoration to the material of a gown. In this country, where hand work is cheap, square or round motifs of coarse but good lace are applied with admirable results to the finished costume; attached by thick, close, over and over stitches, with heavy white linen thread, the material is then cut out beneath, and the raw edges turned back and sewed flat. When the linen or muslin of the costume is a different shade of white from the lace or embroidered motifs the effect is enhanced. Motifs of Madeira embroidery used as trimming on white gowns, laid over a lining of pale pink, blue or green batiste, makes an adorable summer toilette with a wide sash matching the lining in color.

Wise women who look ahead will finish this season their tunic gowns of frail diaphanous stuffs. They are likely to be quite out of the running next season. Indeed, the best gowned women of the present season have already discarded them for gowns made entirely of pretty soft, brocaded silks, trimmed with a little lace on the sleeves and corsage, and fashioned after the alluringly simple lines of the gowns worn by the women of the Revolution. Alluringly simple, truly! Tempting inexperienced people to copy them to their despair and undoing. With ample folds and plenty of applied trimming, bad work and faults of fitting are easily disguised, but only master hands can achieve the straight, simple lines of skirt and little, round-necked corsage with its three-seamed back stretching into short basques.

A COWARDLY ATTACK.

Anonymous Writer Insults the Protestant Clergy.

To the Editor of The Times:—

Sir,—My attention was called to a letter in one of your evening contemporaries, in which a vicious and cowardly attack is made on the Protestant clergy of Peterborough. The gratuitous insults of the writer are only excelled by his untruthfulness. He says that there is a bitter feeling between religious denominations in this city. So far as I can learn Anglicans, Presbyterians, Methodist and Baptists, which comprise the leading denominations, are living in perfect harmony. The Roman Catholic body is the only exception. And why? Simply and purely because these people demand special privileges and favors. Does one ever hear of a demand that Mr. So-and-so be given an office because he is a Methodist or a Baptist? Then why should our Roman Catholic fellow citizens look for anything different? The insulting and cowardly suggestion that the Industrial Commissioner be asked to give the Protestant Minister something to do "on week days" to keep them from stirring up strife, is on a par with the rest of the letter. If the writer would be man enough to disclose his identity, he would very soon find out where he is at.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.

SIX SUPER-DREADNOUGHTS.

Admiralty Plan, But Radicals Say Four Will Do.

London, February 16.—With reference to the reported discussion of the Liberal Party over the Naval estimates, it is learned that the Admiralty wants six new super-Dreadnoughts laid down this year. Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, favors five, but the radical section of the Cabinet and party insists that four will suffice.

HUNDRED BRIDES ON STEAMER.

All Going to Canadian West to be Wedded—Miss Le Neve Not on Board.

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 15.—A thorough search of the steamer Royal Edward, which arrived yesterday from Bristol, England, failed to disclose any trace of Miss Ethel Clare Le Neve, the young woman who fled to Canada last summer with Dr. H. H. Crippen, the American dentist, who was later hanged in London for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore. It has been reported that a young woman resembling Miss Le Neve had boarded the steamer at Bristol, was bound for the Canadian Northwest to meet a prospective husband.

Although the Le Neve woman was not among the passengers, more than a hundred prospective brides came from England, Scotland and Ireland. All of the young women were bound for the Canadian Northwest in search of husbands. They were in charge of a matron appointed by the steamship Company, and the matron will chaperone them as far as Toronto, where special representatives will accompany them further west. Most of the young women have decided to settle in the vicinity of Regina.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise eearning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr, Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

VOL XXXIV NO. 40 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, FRIDAY FEBRUARY 17, 1911 PRICE TWO CENTS

MR. BENNETT SAYS THAT HE IS SERIOUS

Republican Representative of New York Thinks Political Union with Uncle Sam is the Proper Course

Washington, Feb. 16.—Representative Bennett, of New York, one of the Republicans who voted against Canadian reciprocity today introduced in the House a resolution requesting the President to enter into negotiations with the British Government looking to the annexation of Canada by the United States.

THE RESOLUTION.

The resolution was:

Resolved, by the House of Representatives and the Senate concurring that the President of the United States be requested to enter upon and prosecute from time to time such negotiations with the British Government as he may deem expedient for the annexation of the Dominion of Canada to the United States of America.

The resolution, which created a mild ripple of excitement in the house will die a natural death, for after it is referred to the foreign relations committee it will slumber there indefinitely.

SAYS HE IS SERIOUS.

In speaking of his resolution Mr. Bennett insisted that he was both serious and sincere. He declares that to his mind annexation was the logical result to be looked forward to following reciprocity. He declared the reciprocity measure passed by the House was not equitable and would not please the majority of the people. For instance, it placed wheat in free list, but kept a duty on flour; it put cattle in free list, but maintained a duty on meat and meat products.

Mr. Bennett is from New York city and he asserted that city people wanted benefits from finished products. He insisted he would ask for consideration of his resolution in the committee on foreign affairs of which he is a member.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY TO SPEND OVER SIX MILLIONS

MANY CHANGES AND IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE IN TORONTO—WHERE THE MONEY WILL BE USED.

The General Manager and His Assistant Are in Toronto, in Connection With the Work.

Mr. David McNicholl, general manager of the C.P.R., accompanied by his capable lieutenant, Mr. J. W. Leonard, has been in Toronto during the past few days, where they explained to the business men of the city the changes and improvements which it is proposed to be made in the terminal facilities at Toronto. The plans show the big developments which the company proposes to carry out. These developments include a handsome new passenger station immediately east of Yonge street at North Toronto, the cost of which will be about three million dollars.

On the Old Government House property the company will lay out a freight yard, but this will be hidden from Wellington, Simcoe and King streets by a big office building that will cost about a million dollars, and be used for ticket, telegraph and express purposes. There will also be new freight yards at Parkdale, Bloor street, West Toronto, Cherry street, and at the foot of George street. Altogether the plans call for an expenditure of about six million dollars.

Asked whether the big new station which the company intends to put up means that they will withdraw from the Union station, Mr. McNicholl replied that it did not. The big travel would always go from the Union Station, which was in the centre of the hotel and wholesale business districts, and plans had therefore been prepared for rebuilding this station. The new independent station would be simply for the convenience of passengers coming from the residential district living north of College street.

GENERAL MANAGER OF THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

DARK WAR CLOUD LOOMS ON HORIZON

Russia Notifies Britain and Other Powers of a Military Demonstration---Will Invade Turkestan

London, Feb. 16.—The relations of Russia and China are strained to the breaking point. Russia to-day notified the Governments of Great Britain, France and Germany of her intention to make a military demonstration on the Russo-Chinese frontier, owing to China's persistent violation of the St. Petersburg treaty of 1881.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 16.—To-day's Ritz prints a long story filled with apparently official details of the reported intention of Russia to re-occupy the Ili region of Chinese Turkestan. Kuldana will be the first town seized, the Ritz says. Further conferences were held to-day at the Ministry of War, the purpose of which was not disclosed. It is generally accepted that they had to do with the military preparations for the threatened invasion.

Under the treaty of 1881, the Russians evacuated the Ili Province, after having held it for ten years, in return for which Russia was to receive commercial concessions in Ili, Mongolia, and Manchuria.

It is said that these rights have gradually been curtailed until the treaty is practically ignored. While the invasion, if undertaken, will be called equivalent to the declaration of war, it is not believed here that actual hostilities will be engaged in, as it is considered certain that China will yield at the first show of military aggression. Should she resist war is considered inevitable.

Among the violations alleged against China are the hindering of Russian merchants from selling tea in Chinese territory and the refusal to permit Russian consuls in many Chinese cities.

Several Wounded In a Lively Riot

GENERAL CONFLICT BETWEEN ROMAN CATHOLICS AND A STREET CROWD—SHOTS FIRED.

Serious Rioting Followed Meeting of Catholic Association—Police were Powerless.

Oporto, Portugal, Feb. 16.—Serious rioting occurred last night following a meeting of the Catholic Association, and many persons were wounded.

As the Catholics came out from their hall they were jeered by a crowd in the street. One of those insulted fired a revolver and badly wounded two republicans. This was the signal for a general conflict. Shouting, a rapidly swelling mob marched on and destroyed the offices of the Catholic newspaper La Parole, and the headquarters of the Workmen's Catholic Club.

During the clash many shots were exchanged. The police were powerless. In consequence of the rioting the civil Governor of Oporto resigned to-day.

Confesses to Murder

Reading, Pa., Feb. 15.—Matthew Evanman, charged with murdering his wife, Mary Evanman, aged 20 years, was given a hearing before Magistrate Koch, and made a clean breast of the murder, declaring that he shot his wife while she slept. His main purpose, he said, was to get rid of her to enable him to marry Miss Ellen Wessen of Blandon, with whom he was infatuated. He denied setting the house on fire, stating that his wife upset an oilstove in her death struggles.

BUT REFUSES TO ORDER ARREST OF ANYONE FOR MURDER OF AGED MAN.

Jury Professed to Believe That the Crown Had Failed to Furnish Sufficient Evidence on Which to Order an Arrest.

Berlin, Ont., Feb. 16.—The jury called to inquire into the death of Franz Lobinski, the old farmer murdered in his shack near Wellesley, returned a verdict implicating four young men in the crime.

The jury professed to believe that the Crown had failed to furnish sufficient evidence on which to order the arrest of anyone.

But, they said, circumstantial evidence led them strongly to the conclusion that Joseph Nowak, jr., Phillip Nowak, Martin Nowak and Tony Hintz were implicated.

The finding of the jury as outlined was unanimous.

MISS HAZEL NICHOLLS DEAD.

Revolver in Dresser Discharged by Catching in Wearing Apparel.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—A very sad accident occurred last evening at the residence of Mr. Frederic Nicholls. Returning from the theatre his second daughter, Hazel, went to her room to retire. Shortly afterwards a report was heard by her brother. He rushed to her assistance, but she had expired before he reached her.

In taking some apparel from a drawer, a small revolver she kept there was discharged accidentally, the bullet entered the brain. Dr. J. L. Davison was called in immediately and stated that death had been instantaneous.

We are sure the hearts of the people of Peterborough and country generally will go out in the profoundest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls in their terrible sorrow.

PREMIER REFUSES BOTH REQUESTS OF BIG TEMPERANCE DEPUTATION.

Many Cries of Dissent—Did Not Relish Sir James' Firm Stand—Mr. Spence and "Political Treachery"

Toronto, Feb. 16.—There was no soothing salve of "serious consideration" or soft platitudes in the replies of Sir James Whitney and Hon. J. W. Hanna to the deputation of 500 men and women from the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance that waited on the Cabinet at noon to-day.

They asked for a Provincial measure of prohibition, or in default of that the abolition of the three-fifths clause. They carried away— and a few of them departed in an angry mood—a refusal to do either, reinforced by a statement from the Premier that he was more convinced of the advantages of the three-fifths than ever before, and that the majority of the people were steadily coming to support it. Mr. Hanna declared that now the liquor men recognized in it the greatest enemy to the traffic.

Apart from vigorous expressions of dissent from time to time the interview developed a remarkedly frank expression from both representatives of the Government of their opinion of Rev. B. H. Spence, secretary of the Alliance, who was reported to have charged the Government with a dark brand of "political treachery" for the three-fifths measure.

The three speakers were the Rev. Dr. McTavish, Kingston; Mayor Lees Hamilton; and Mr. Joseph Gibson.

There could be no such thing as Provincial prohibition, for the Province could not prevent ship loads and trainloads of liquor from coming in, and it would be stupid to pass a law under those conditions.

Asto "three-fifths" "I am more and more convinced as to its wisdom as the days go by," said the Premier, and many laughed.

Mayor Lees, of Hamilton, had charged license inspectors with laxity and Sir James said he was sorry to hear of it and promised, if the Government were given information, to do all they could to help remedy it.

Referring to a report of words used by Rev. B. H. Spence, Sir James said, "I was not at all surprised to hear of it. I don't believe Mr. Spence will ever live long enough —and I hope he lives 1,000 years—to believe a Conservative can do anything right."

The Premier expressed surprise that when such kindly words had been spoken there, that one of there number should have accused the Government of being traitors.

Rev. Mr. Kettlewell began to deny the report and Mr. Spence said: "I never said it."

Sir James—"It was a pity you did not deny it five minutes ago."

Mr. Hanna—"Before I used the report, I made inquiries and the accounts tallied closely, but I accept Mr. Spence's word."

Mr. Hanna, speaking of this before, said he resented it strongly, and cited instances after instances where temperance measures had been passed and enforced by the present Government.

B. C. LEGISLATURE CONDEMNS BILL

WITH ONLY ONE DISSENTING VOTE, HOUSE REGRETS RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT.

McBride's View of It—Will Not Help the Empire and Is a Departure From Established Policy.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 16.—The British Columbia Legislature yesterday adopted the resolution introduced two days ago, condemning the proposed reciprocity agreement between Canada and United States. There was only one dissenting vote.

Premier McBride spoke at length on the resolution, asserting that he regards reciprocity with the United States as unnecessary and uncalled for. He said that, although he believed freer trade with the United States would not weaken Canadian loyalty to Great Britain, it would not assist in bringing the Dominion and the Mother Country closer together. He interprets the agreement as a departure from the established policy which both parties in Canada have recognized as vital to the welfare of the Dominion.

CHEERED ANNEXATION.

Some One Mentioned It in the Commons.

London, Feb. 14.—Referring to Mr. Sydney Burton's reply in the Commons regarding preference, the Daily Express says: "The refusal to meet the Dominion half-way means the handing over of seven millions from British workers to the workers in America. In Congress some one mentioned annexation. Like a flash the response was wild cheering. We may leave it at that."

The same journal, in a character sketch of the Hon. R. L. Borden, says he is pre-eminently a business man. In Canadian politics he has none of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's airy phraseology. He has always fought with political cleanness.

The millionaire tramp has retired from the road. Thus, it is evident, that you need no longer be tied to Weaverville in hope of entertaining an angel unawares.

ARE UNEASY AS TO POPE'S CASE

IF BRONCHIAL TROUBLE AFFECT THE LUNGS THE OUTLOOK WOULD BE SERIOUS.

Temperature Goes Down—His Respiration Is Rapid and Throat and Chest Constricted.

Rome, Feb. 16.—Pope Pius X., who is experiencing an attack of influenza had a relatively calm night, and early to-day his temperature was found to have fallen during the night from 100 to 99 only half a degree above normal.

Dr. Guiseppe Pitacci, private physician to his Holiness, visited the sick chamber this morning and remained a long time. He considers that the disease is taking its normal course, and has ordered the usual remedies and also that extreme care be exercised and absolute rest on the part of the patient.

The Pope's respiration is rapid, and his throat and chest are constricted.

At noon it was reported that the Pope's condition showed a slight improvement, and he was resting comfortably. The greatest uneasiness of the doctors arises from the Pope's advanced age, 75 years. Should the bronchial affection spread to the lungs, the chances for the Pope's recovery will be considered slight.

Pope Pius has had several sick spells since he succeeded Pope Leo in 1903. He has been almost a constant sufferer from gout and rheumatism. He takes his indisposition cheerfully, and to-day asked the forgiveness of his doctors "for putting them to so much trouble."

MANY LIVES WERE LOST AT SEA

Spanish Steamer Wrecked and 70 Passengers and Crew Perish.

Rouen, France, Feb. 16.—The captain of the Spanish steamer Ollargan which has arrived here, informed the Spanish consul that the Spanish steamer Abereon, which left Rotterdam for Bilbao at the same time as the Ollargan, foundered in a tempest and that seventy passengers and the crew perished. There is no confirmation of the captain's story from other sources.

Inciting Demonstration—Conservatives are Said to be Urging Laval Students to Disturb U. S. Consul.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 16.—Alarmed by the report that the McGill students, aroused by reading Champ Clark's "annexation speech," were coming to tear down the American flags, the management of the Shubert House here last night substituted Union Jacks and Royal Standards in the steamer scene. A warning had been conveyed by some one, presumably at McGill, and by the time several hundred students had obtained seats, the offending emblems had been removed.

A prominent French-Canadian university man declares that an agent of the opponents of the bill, a leading member of a strong French-Canadian Conservative organization, has been going among the students of Laval University endeavoring to persuade them to join in a demonstration which is planned to end with a riot in front of the American consul's house. A number of students declare they have been approached and asked to participate.

When given as soon as the croupy cough appears Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will ward off an attack of croup and prevent all danger and cause of anxiety. Thousands of mothers use it successfully. Sold by all dealers.

LATEST MOVE OF SUFFRAGISTS

Propose to Upset the Coming Census in Great Britain.

New York, Feb. 16.—A cable from London to The Tribune says the Women's Freedom League has definitely decided to carry out its threat to upset the coming census by organizing an opposition to it on the part of the militant suffragists.

Since the idea was first put forward an unexpectedly large number of women have intimated their readiness to co-operate in this latest move against the Government. Elaborate preparations are being made to carry out the proposed boycott on the largest possible scale.

If you guess that all the pneumonia germs were caught in the snowstorm and are now perishing under the ground banks, you have another guess coming.

WEALTHIEST MAN

California Citizen Said to be Richer Than Rockefeller.

Pasadena, Cal., Feb. 16.—Although the rumor that Frederick Weyerauser the rich lumberman, is desperately ill, after a stroke of apoplexy, has been denied by his son-in-law, Prof. Jewett, it persisted to-day.

Doctors were seen leaving the Weyerauser home, but when questioned they would say nothing regarding the condition of their aged patient.

Weyerauser, who is reputed to have more millions than Rockefeller, came here from St. Paul a few weeks ago in poor health.

Oranges Bring Both Surprise.

Because a well known business man of this city has been greeted the past few mornings at the breakfast table by more delicious and juicy oranges than he had been accustomed to, and because some very attractive new orange knives and spoons caught his attention, prompted him to ask his wife the cause of the breakfast's added charm.

Her answer resulted in his buying theatre tickets that night. The thrifty wife had been reading the newspaper "ads" which tell of a particular brand of extra fine California oranges whose wrappers bring the spoons and knives free.

Now all her neighbors are following her example and as a result most of the local fruit stands are doing an enormous orange business.

MAN, WOMAN AND TWO CHILDREN AS CANIBAL VICTIMS OF FAMISHED CHINESE.

Rioting Very Frequent—Whole Villages are Depopulated, While the Dead Bodies Lie Around on All Sides.

Pekin, Feb. 16.—Several cases of cannibalism, the result of the great Chinese famine, were reported to-day from the Province of Kiang-Si, the centre of the starvation zone. According to these reports a man, a woman and two children were killed and their flesh eaten by villagers in the community west of the Tayuling Mountains, just south of the tea district.

INSANE FROM SUFFERING.

From the Canton and Shanghai despatches were received to-day from missions, which confirm the stories of barbarism. Missionaries in the field in the famine belt have sent word that the famished people are insane from suffering and that rioting is frequent. Soldiers sent into the district have been attacked.

DEAD BODIES STREW ROAD.

Along the valley of the Kan river, whole villages have been depopulated and dead bodies strew the roads and fields. In the tea district, the crop is rotting because hands cannot be found to till the ground and attend to the vines.

THE MORNING TIMES

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1911.

RECIPROCITY AND PREFERENCE.

The objection that the reciprocity agreement will injure the British preference is answered in a few words by the Montreal Herald.

The outstanding feature of the British preference is its application to manufactured articles.

The outstanding feature of the new tariff arrangement with the United States is its application to natural products.

Therefore the proposal now under consideration does not conflict with the preferential tariff established by the Canadian Parliament at the instance of Mr. Fielding in 1897. On the contrary, one arrangement is the complement of the other; and the two measures are in accord with the policy agreed upon at the Liberal convention of 1893; freer trade with the world, especially with Great Britain and the United States.

Our trade with the United Kingdom would be affected not so much by the changes in the Canadian tariff of the United States. If the people of the United States buy more freely from Canada, a certain portion of the trade which now flows east may flow south. But as the Hamilton Herald points out, this is a matter over which the Canadian Government has no control. "Without any reciprocity negotiations it is in the power of the United States at any time to give free admission to natural products from Canada. Even the objectors would hardly propose to check the exportation of our foodstuffs and raw material to the United States by the imposition of export duties."

Some of the objectors to reciprocity are placing our national existence and British connection on a very insecure basis. These conditions are precarious enough if they are based upon our exclusion of the products of the United States; still more precarious if they depend upon the exclusion of Canadian products from the United States. That would mean that our national existence and our connection with Great Britain depend upon the will of Congress. At any moment they may cut the Imperial tie and sweep us into continental union by the simple process of taking the duties off fish, wheat, and other natural products.

For those who hold this view, the outlook must be dar. Because nothing is more certain than that the export from Canada to the United States will increase. The trade has attained to very large proportioos in spite of the high tariff, for the simple reason that the people of the UnitedStates require our products. They are growing at the rate of a million and a half a year, and the growth is largely in consumers of farm products, so that the demand for Canadian goods will constantly be enlarged.

The terrible temptation arising out of this trade will, therefore, become more formidable every year. And as we cannot remove this temptation the best thing we can do is to grow accustomed to it, and turn to other modes of preserving national existence than that of commercial non-intercourse. If it is foolish to lean upon the friendship of a neighbor, it is still more foolish to lean upon his continuance of a policy of exclusion.

WILL EXPEND HUGE SUM IN TORONTO

Canadian Pacific Plans Call for Expenditure of Five Million Dollars There.

Toronto, February 16.—Canadian Pacific plans calling for the expenditure of about $5,000,000 in Toronto were laid before the Board of Control and will be discussed again. A large office building for the Dominion Express Company will be erected on the Government House site, King and Simcoe streets, while a portion of the grounds will be laid out as a park. A viaduct will be built across the north end of the city, and a large station put up near Yonge street north. At the corner of King and Yonge streets an office building of 13 to 15 storeys in height, and costing a million dollars will be erected. A new union station on the water front will be erected whether the viaduct proposition goes through or not. Several new freight yards will be established in outlying portions of the city.

THE RED YEAR

—by—

LOUIS TRACY.

CONTINUED.

ter's skirts. The jealousies and intrigues that surround a throne were never more in evidence than at Delhi during the last hours of the Great Mogul. Already men were preparing for the final catastrophe. While the ignorant mob was firm in its belief that the rule of the sahib had passed forever, those few clearer-headed persons who possessed any claim to the title of statesmen were convinced that the Mutiny had failed.

Nearly four months were sped since that fatal Sunday when the rebellion broke out at Meerut. And what had been achieved? Delhi, the pivot of Mohammedan hopes, was crowded with a licentious soldiery, who obeyed only those leaders that pandered to them, who fought only when some perverted moullah aroused their worst passions by his eloquence, and who were terrible only to peaceful citizens. All public credit was destroyed. The puppet of the King, nominal within the walls of his own palace, was laughed at in the city and ignored beyond the walls. The provincial satraps and feudatory princes who should be striving to help their sovereign were wholly devoted to the more congenial task of carving out kingdoms for themselves.

Nana Sahib, rehabilitated in Oudh, was opposing Havelock's advance; Khan Bahadur Khan, an ex-pensioner of the Company, had set up a barbarous despotism at Bareilly; the Moulvie of Fyzabad, intent on the destruction of the Residency, meant to establish himself there as "King of Hindustan" if only that stubborn entrenchment could be carried; Mahudi Hussain, Gaffur Beg, Kunwer Singh, the Ranee of Jhansi, and a host of other prominent rebels scattered throughout Oudh, Bengal, the Northwest Provinces and Central India, cared less for Delhi than for their own private affairs, and were consequently permitting the British to gather forces by which they could be destroyed piecemeal.

From Nepaul, the great border state, lying behind the pestilential jungle of the Terai, came an army of nine thousand Ghoorkahs to help the British. At Hyderabad, the most powerful Mohammedan principality in India, the Nizam and his famous minister, Sir Salar Jung, crushed a Jehad with cannon and grapeshot. In a word, the orgy had ended, and the day of reckoning was near.

Malcolm, therefore, was confronted with two separate and hostile sets of conditions. On the one hand, he was threading his way through a maze of conflicting interests, and this was a circumstance most favorable to his chances of escape; on the other, every man regarded his neighbor with distrust and a stranger with positive suspicion, while Malcolm's distinguished appearance could not fail to draw many inquiring eyes.

He crossed the large garden beyond the arcade and was making for an arch that gave access to the long covered passage leading to the Delhi Gate, when he saw Akbab Khan standing there.

The rebel leader was deep in converse with a richly-attired personage whom Frank discovered afterwards to be the Vizier. Near Akbab Khan an escort of sowars stood by their horses, and Malcolm felt that the instant the former lance-corporal set eyes on either Nejdi or himself recognition would follow as surely as a vulture knows its prey.

He could neither dawdle nor hesitate. Wheeling Nejdi towards the nearest arch on the left, he found himself in an open space between the walls of the fortress and the outer line of buildings. Underneath the broad terrace, from which troops could defend the battlements, stood a row of storerooms and go-downs. At a little distance he could distinguish a line of stables, and the mere sight sent the blood dancing through his veins.

If only he could evade capture until nightfall he would no longer feel that each moment might find him making a last fight against impossible odds. Dismounting, he led Nejdi to an unoccupied stall. As there was nothing to be gained by half measures he removed saddle and bridle, hung them on a peg, put a halter on the Arab, adjusted the heel-ropes, and hunted the adjoining stalls for forage.

He came upon some grain in a sack and a quantity of hay. All provender was alike to Nejdi so long as it was toothsome. He was soon busily engaged, and Malcolm resolved to avoid observation by grooming him when anybody passed whose gaze might be too inquisitive.

He took care that sword and revolvers were handy. It was hard to tell what hue and cry might be raised by the troopers against whom the guards had closed the Lahore Gate. Perhaps they were searching for two men and the finding of one horse in charge of a chaprassi might suggest that the rider of the other and his companion had dodged through the Delhi Gate. Again, his pursuers might have galloped straight to the other exit and thus made certain that he was still in the palace. If that were so, and they ferreted him out, as well die here as elsewhere. Meanwhile, he chewed philosophically at a few grains of the gram, and awaited the outcome of events that were now beyond his control.

A wild swirl of wind and rain seemed to favor him. There was not much traffic past his retreat, and that little ceased when a deluge lashed the dry earth and clouds of vapor rose as though the water were beating on an oven. Now and again a syce hurried past, with head and shoulders enveloped in a sack. Once a party of sepoys trudged through the mud, towards the water bastion of the palace, and the men whom they had relieved came back the same way a few minutes later.

Nejdi had seldom been groomed so vigorously as during the passing of these detachments, but no one gave the slightest heed to the cavalry officer who was engaged on such an unusual task. If they noticed him at all it was to wonder that he could be such a fool as to work when there were hundreds of loafers in the city who could be kicked to the job.

The rain storm changed into a steady drizzle and the increasing gloom promised complete darkness within half an hour. Malcolm was beginning to plan his movements when he became aware of a man wrapped in a heavy cloak who approached from the direction of the arch and peered this way, took and cranny.

ASSETS OF THE COMPANY

$10,000,000 of stock still in the Treasury.

$10,000,000 pooled for 9 and 18 months.

500 acres of land; value, $3,000 per acre.

6,500 feet deep waterfrontage; value, $200 per front foot.

154 patent improvements obtained over the present most modern sleeping car as shown by patent rights and model and approved by railway experts.

A subsidy obtained from the Municipality of North Vancouver of 5 per cent. for 15 years on $200,000, and freedom from taxation of our plant and 30 acres of land for 10 years.

A subsidy obtained from the Dominion of Canada, 3½ per cent. for 25 years on $1,214,000, for the purpose of building a dry dock of 15,000 tons at Roslyn, the Company's townsite.

A very vauable brick clay deposit has been discovered on the Company's property. This will be developed to its fullest capacity, as brick clay is very rare here, Vancouver even importing from Seattle millions of brick annually.

NOTE.—A shareholder participates in every asset of the Company.

LIABILITIES OF THE COMPANY

Amount yet owing on land, extending over a period of four years, $446,000.

REMARKS

MORE LANDS

The Company proposes to purchase lands surrounding their townsite, and to this end are securing options on about 250 acres, with about 2,800 feet of deep waterfrontage adjoining that which they now own.

MINES

They have also secured an optian of purchase of a group of ten claims of very valuable iron deposits situated within twelve miles of their townsite. The Company believe, located as they are in a country which abounds with everything necessary to the smallest detail for turning out a perfect car, should go to nature's storehouse for their material, and with this end in view have secured the above group.

SHIPBUILDING

In addition to building the Imperial Sleeping Car, cars of every description will be contracted for, and just as soon as their dry dock is completed, the Company intend to use it to the greatest advantage in building ships of the largest tonnage. As there will be but three or four docks in the whole Dominion, they will encounter but very little competition in the building of the larger class of vessels.

SALE OF LANDS

The Company do not intend to sell any of its land until its dry dock, car works, sawmills and other industries are in operation, and in this way secure as nearly as possible all the profit derived from the establishment of these great works.

CLEARING OF LAND

The Municipality of North Vancouver have under consideration a proposition from the Company whereby the Company promise to clear their whole townsite on condition the Municipality will at once clear and grade all the streets, charging the cost of same to local improvement taxes. The Municipality view the Company's proposition with great favor. This plan would at least double the price of the Company's holdings.

PURCHASING STOCK

A small block of stock is now on the market and can be had on very easy terms of payment. This once sold, the Company will have no difficulty to borrow on their assets at from 4 to 5 per cent. any money they will require for improvement purchases, and in this case all stock will be withdrawn from the market.

Private Capital to be Interested in Line

Should the Ontario Government refuse to consider favorably the construction of the proposed branch of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway from Charlton to Gowganda, a scheme is under way to achieve the same end by means of private capital.

Those who have invested their funds in those newer mining areas to the west of Cobalt, and several millions of dollars have already found their way into that region, are determined that they shall have railway connections with the outside world.

If the Government assumes the work the line will be built on the same substantial basis as the original undertaking: if it is left to private capital the construction will be much lighter and the motive power will be electricity.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effectual. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Thousands have testified to its superior excellence. Sold by all dealers.

GERMAN SCHOOLS

A close technical training is the knife with which, during the past generation, she has opened her oyster. But one's oyster, as good authority declares, is the world itself—and the world to-day is wider than it was. Germany having pried open Europe, is preparing to apply the same method to Asia.

According to the dispatches, German captalists are about to establish a chain of engineering schools in China. Big banks and manufacturers have subscribed liberally to a fund of half a million dollars. This step is taken, evidently, in competition with the Americans and English who have enjoyed heretofore almost a monopoly in higher instruction in the Orient.

No country has been more successful than modern Germany in welding business and education into a powerful implement for the furthering of worldly success. Her latest action may well awaken new tremors in England and is quite worth watching on the part of the United States.

Pastor's Fight to Down White Plague

Berlin, Ont., Feb. 15.—Waterloo county will have a good tuberculosis sanitarium, or Rev. F. E. Oberlander will know the reason why.

Preaching from his pulpit for the first time in nine weeks, because of illness, Pastor Oberlander in St. Peter's Lutherian Church, he announced his plans to combat the spread of the white plague. If they do not miscarry, the good pastor will outdo the good Samaritan in visible fruits of "loving thy neighbor as thyself."

Last summer, it must be explained, Rev. Mr. Oberlander went on a trip through Europe. While there he spared no efforts to investigate in a practical way the methods used to prevent the spread of consumption. Last night he intimated that as a result of his investigations he has secured land upon which he proposes to erect a sanitarium from plans, in which, will be copies of all the best ideas of successful sanitariums in Germany, France and Italy. These plans are not completed, as yet, but a more definite announcement will be made in a few days.

FRESH AIR WORK.

So full of enthusiasm for the "fresh-air" work is Pastor Oberlander that he has erected a miniature sanitarium in the rear of his home. His one patient a lad of 15, was considered hopelessly infected with tuberculosis. After the pastor's homely and loving treatment, he is now walking the streets, a healthy boy.

Andrew Barden, aged 22, a member of the male chorus of Pastor Oberlander's Church, was borne to the grave this week, a victim of tuberculosis. The minister's sermon included a reference to this untimely death which undoubtedly backed up his statements with much force.

MR. BECK'S OFFER

While confined to bed last summer, recovering from a serious operation, Rev. Mr. Oberlander read in a newspaper of the offer of Hon. Adam Beck speaking in Waterloo county, to contribute $1000 personally toward the erection of a county sanitarium. The pastor was delighted with the enthusiasm and spirit of generosity shown.

But, said he, at the rate of progress which has been made up to the present time, the cornerstone will be laid in about ten years. He added, that when "his" sanitarium has been erected that length of time there will be no cases for Mr. Beck's institution.

The pastor has no money, strange to say, or even subscriptions, at the present time, toward the ambitious project which he has gathered, but is none the less confident that when his announcement is made the money will be forthcoming, as much as is necessary.

SHOT HIMSELF AND HIS FRIEND

Bullet Went Through Two People's Brain and Girl Then Took Poison.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 14.—When William McCrary fired a bullet through his brain yesterday because of business and marital troubles he not only took his own life, but killed a friend and probably cost the life of the woman he is supposed to have been in love with. The bullet passed through McCrary's head and entered the brain of Arthur Knowles, a bartender, who was standing beside him. Knowles died shortly before midnight.

When Mrs. Julia Sohn, with whom McCrary is said to have been infatuated, heard of his act she took carbolic acid, and was found unconscious several hours later in a room across the hall from where McCrary and his wife were living. She was taken to a hospital, and probably will die.

Litigants Have to Wait Two Years to Get Cases Tried.

Montreal, Feb. 15.—Resolutions condemning the state of affairs in the Court of Review and the Circuit Court, that necessitated litigants waiting two years before their cases can come to trial, and asking why their former resolutions and delegations to Ottawa and Quebec have not brought a remedy, were passed last night at a meeting of the Junior Bar Association. The members were unanimous in declaring that immediate reform is imperative.

Harry Nederlander, an automobile salesman was instantly killed, and Paul R. McKenney, manager of a motor car company, was probably fatally injured, while the balance of the party were badly hurt. The latter included three actresses who are playing this week at one of the threatres.

Hit By a Snow Plough.

Lindsay Warder:—What might have been a serious accident occurred today when a snow plough on the C.P.R. tore up Ops station platform. THOUGHT IT WAS CANCER.

Sores Spread From Eye to Neck.

Miss Mary Conley, of 184 Colborne St., Montreal, writes: "Over a year ago I became bothered with an unsightly spot on my right cheek. The sore spread until the whole cheek was covered from the eye to far down on the neck, below the ear. It was so noticeable that people asked me if I had cancer, and I began to fear I had. I fully expected the sores would heal some day, and I tried numerous highly recommended salves and ointments, but nothing did any good.

"I was about to consult a specialist when a lady friend spoke of Zam-Buk, and advised a trial of it, first. Acting on her advice I procured a box and was surprised to notice the immediate effect the balm had on the sores. I used three boxes only, and as I kept applying it each evening before retiring I could see how the sores were being cleaned and dried up. This improvement continued until my face was cleared of sores completely. Zam-Buk is certainly a marvellous balm."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bites, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, boils, scalp sores, ringworm, inflammation patches, babies' eruptions and [illegible] plaster, cuts, burns, bruises, [illegible] skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box. Post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful imitations and substitutes. A MONTREAL GIRL AT COURT

Does a wife marry the political opinions of her husband? That is the question now asked in Paris, because certain ceremonies of the last few days show well known American women to be more royalistic than their husbands.

Most conspicuous among the American royalists at the masses just celebrated for Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette was the Marquis de Charette, formerly Miss Susan Henning of Kentucky. The Marquise and her husband are responsible for the services held in the Church of St. Germain of L'Auxerrois, the bells of which church sounded the signal for the massacre of Huguenots on the feast of St. Bartholomew. The service was made the occasion for a political demonstration in favor of the Duke D'Orleans, pretender to the throne of France. The Duke was represented at the ceremony by Baron de Fonscolombe president of the royalist committee.

The Marquis de Charette is half American, for his mother, the Baroness de Charette, was Miss Polk, of Nashville, Tenn. The Baroness is a strong royalist, having adopted the political opinions of her husband. They insist upon calling the Duke D'Orleans King Louis Phillippe.

Another fighting American royalist, also in evidence during these anniversary days of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, is the Marquise de Martimpre, formerly Miss Drouillard of Nashville. Another American called frequently to do "service" at the court is the Duchess de Dino, formerly Miss Symes, of Montreal. Mme. Anna Gould, now the Princess of Sagon, was also one of the "fighting royalists" when she was the wife of Count Boni de Castellane. As the Princess de Sagon and Duchess de Talleyrand she is a legitimist, and stands for the elder branch of the Bourbons.

Bishop Fallon May Succeed the Late Archbishop Ryan

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Among some of the most prominent Catholic Churchmen of Toronto, the opinion is being voiced that Bishop Fallon of London, Ont., is one of the prelates whose qualifications are being considered with a view to his appointment to the See of Philadelphia, in succession to Archbishop Ryan.

Signal honors were conferred upon Bishop Fallon when he was appointed to the diocese of London. As a rule prelates are selected from among the secular clergy, but Bishop Fallon is among the very few who have been taken from among the regular, or order clergy, he having been a member of the Order of Mary Immaculate and one of the heads of Ottawa University.

He is considered a very able churchman, and some of his former colleagues believe that his present sphere is somewhat too limited for his activities. Echos of the stir he caused in connection with the question of bi-lingualism since his elevation to the episcopacy are known to have reached Rome and his attitude has been discussed at several Papal conferences. This has brought him to the attention of many of the cardinals, with whom rests the appointment of a successor to Archbishop Ryan.

REPRIMANDED?

Le Temps, Ottawa, says editorially:

"Again we hear of Bishop Fallon, but this time, if rumors be correct, he is no longer taking the role of autocrat and Censor, but of a person reprimanded and censured.

"These terms perhaps may demand modification but, we are assured on good authority that at the recent meeting of Bishops at the Archbishop's palace in Toronto, the English-speaking Bishops of the Province of Ontario blamed Mgr. Fallon for his escapade in the matter of bi-lingual teaching. We will probably have more definite facts next week."

FIGHTING THE WHITE PLAGUE

The statistics of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in the United States, have just been published, and they are significant as showing what a widespread awakening of the public conscience there has been in regard to the white plague. According to the report just issued no less than $15,000,000 was spent in the United States last year in the crusade against the white plague, almost double the amount expended in the previous year.

As an assurance that this vast amount of money has not been wasted one has only to note how widespread has been the public education on this subject. A few years ago the popular attitude of mind toward tuberculosis was that it was a dread disease that was fated, in some mysterious way, to carry off a certain proportion of human beings; that there was little use in trying to escape it, and that if the disease once got hold on a person there was no use in fighting.

At least the campaign of education has taught us all better than that. We know now that the prime weapon against tuberculosis is cleanliness and so we find, enacted through the popular will, in practically every municipality, ordinances against expectoration in public places, and regulations looking to the prevention of the spread of the scourge.

There is every reason to hope that as the fight goes on backed by the best intelligence of the world, the resources of science and with ample funds, the white plague will be driven from among the ranks of civilization. Organized and intelligent effort has already accomplished much; it can accomplish much more if the organizations is backed up and supported.

It is important that every community should do its share in this titanic battle against the white plague, and in this warfare which means so much for the benefit of the human race we are sure that Buffalo will be found, as it has been in the past, always to the fore.

An aviator named Coffynhas broken the world's aeroplane record for altitude. Mr. Coffyn, it will be noticed, bears a name that grimly suggests the perilous nature of his business.

READ EVERY WORD OF THIS

It Will Be Money In Your Pocket To Do So

Everyone is anxious to make money. Everyone has an ambition to get rich. Some men DO get rich. Others remain poor. The difference is simply a difference of methods. Nearly all of us save some money, but we do not let these savings earn anything for us. THE MAN WHO SAVES HIS MONEY AND LETS THE SAVINGS EARN SOMETHING FOR HIM is making it do double duty. Take the history of all the very wealthy men of the country and learn how many of them made their fortunes by simply saving what they earned. Not one of them did. They saved but they immediately put their savings to work for them. YOU WANT TO GET TO THE TOP OF THE LADDER, YOU WANT TO ACCUMULATE SOMETHING FOR YOUR OLD AGE. THEN YOU HAD BETTER PUT YOUR SAVINGS TO WORK AND LET THEM HELP YOU DO IT.

In almost any ordinary investment a man cannot make his money earn over 8 per cent. Mining offers you greater opportunities. I am going to offer you an opportunity that has promise oearning for you 800 per cent or even more. I want to take you into partnership with me, in an enterprise that will probably make us all independent for the balance of our lives. YOU MUST TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFERING. The Gold Queen Mining Company, of which I am president, has over 135 acres of rich mineral ground in one of the most prosperous mining districts of the world. We have already expended thousands of dollars in developing this property and we have struck ore that is very rich. We need a mill to extract the precious metal from this ore. We need a little help in building this mill. Are you willing to subscribe a portion of the amoont necessary to do it? In numbers there is strength, and even though your subscription be a very small one, we are willing to give you a part ownership in this great enterprise, in return for it. We are willing to take you in on an equal basis with us and give you the benefit of all your savings may earn for you. The men behind this proposition are all successful business men. They are in this business to make it pay and for every dollar they earn for themselves they will earn one for you. REMEMBER: THIS IS NOT A PROSPECT—IT IS A MINE WITH ORE-IN IT. But a small amount of money is necessary to build our mill. We have decided to offer only a very limited number of shares at the present price, and as soon as this amount is secured the price will be advanced to a much greater figure. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO ACT. YOU ARE GETTING IN WITH THE ORGANIZERS OF THE COMPANY AT GROUND FLOOR PRICES. YOU ARE COMING INTO A BONA FIDE PARTNERSHIP WITH US AND WITH NO PARTNERSHIP RESPONSIBILITIES. Read what Mr. Van Wagenen, one of the foremost mining engineers of the country has to say: "I would advise the immediate erection of a ten-stamp mill with cyanide equipment, to treat your gold ores, and a separate concentrating plant to handle your copper pyrites, thus reducing the shipping weight 6 to 1, and eventually put in a smelter in connection with the mill, with a ten-stamp mill on your property and a daily production of 50 tons of ore. I CAN PROMISE YOU A NET EARNING OF $300.00 PER DAY or $109,500 per year and that can be increased to ten times as much as soon as tunnels A and B are finished, and added milling equipment is installed. The economical method is the best. Start with a ten-stamp mill and let your stockholders be content with 10 per cent per annum until you have increased your milling facilities, and install your smelting plant to treat your concentrates. THEN YOU CAN PAY THEM 400 TO 500 PER CENT DIVIDENDS PER YEAR FOR THE NEXT TEN YEARS ON THE PRESENT VALUATION OF YOUR STOCK, 5 CENTS PER SHARE, and this out of the new discovered vein alone." Now if you want to get in with us on this proposition you must act quickly, for the present allotment of shares will not last long. The man who buys now will get his shares at the very rock bottom price. The one who waits until later will without a doubt pay many times what it is being offered for now. Arrangements may be made to pay for your subscription on the easy payment plan. Write at once for full information and detailed literature explaining all about it. Write today. Do not wait another minute or you may be too late.

POLICE COURT.

Crowd Beyond Control, Invade Royal Theatre.

At yesterday's session of the Police Court, the first case disposed of was that of Frank James, charged with having having imbibed too many examples of "Canada's Curse." James, who had never been in the court before, was allowed to go.

Mr. M. Pappas, proprietor of the Royal Theatre, through Mr. Gordon, pleaded not guilty to having obstructed the passage ways of that place of amusement. Chief Thompson, in evidence, said that on the 13th, he had notified P. C. Maher to see that the aisles of the Royal were not filled up. Witness went to the theatre at 8 o'clock. The sidewalk and rotunda were so packed, people could not move. He first moved the people on the pavement. Witness could get no further than inside the door. The passage ways were filled and the swing doors held open. There are three aisles. One lady fainted outside in the rotunda. Mr. Pappas told him the crowd was so large it was beyond control, people running in without buying tickets.

To Mr. Gordon, the Chief thought there must have been 300 or 400 people outside the theatre doors.

P. C. Newhall said at 7.30 the Royal was comfortably seated. Officers Adams and Maher were also continuously there. At about 8 o'clock people outside commenced that they could not get in. At 8.45, when a show was over, there was difficulty in getting people out. At 9.15 the aisles were clear. People who could not get to the ticket office crushed in without tickets, "any amount of them." The crowd outside were out to the car tracks.

Mr. Gordon here said that the evidence so far, showed that the people crowded in so that neither the staff of the theatre, nor the police could control the rush. P. C. Newhall, recalled, said that both Mr. Pappas and his employes were in their places and tried to control the crowd. The case was then dismissed.

A BLUE-BLOOD BOUT AT LAKEWOOD, N.J.—HON. ROBT. BERESFORD WON.

U.S. Millionaire Worsted—Brother of Lord Decies Trims Up Anthony J. Drexel in Private Bout.

New York, Feb. 17.—The much talked-of boxing bout between Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia, husband of Marjory Gould, and the Hon. Robert Beresford, of England, a brother of Lord Decies, took place on Saturday night last in a private gymnasium at Georgian Court, the country home of the Goulds, at Lakewood, N.J.

Details of the bout vary, but all agree that "Battling Bobby" was victor after three rounds. One version says that young Drexel was knocked out and all assert that after his seconds threw up the sponge in thethird round. The bout was scheduled to go six rounds.

Beresford weighed 166 pounds and Drexel 161. They were clad in regulation fighting togs, and Mrs. George Gould gave a silver cup to the winner.

The bout was witnessed by the family of George Gould and a score of guests, including Lord Decies mother and sister

MASSACRES MIGHT FOLLOW INVASION

Britain and Other Countries Advise Russia To Arbitrate Disputes---U. S. Backs China

London, Feb. 17.—European Chancelleries are to-day warning Russia to proceed cautiously in her threatened military demonstration against China. In several instances these warnings are said to have taken the form of official notes to the Russian Foreign Office.

The English press is particularly apprehensive over the outcome of the proposed occupation of Kuldja, in Chinese Turkestan, by Russian troops

"In the present state of affairs in China," to-day's London Times declares, "any threat or forcible action by a foreign power may be attended by far-reaching consequences. It is hoped that before Russia proceeds to the extremity of an invasion of Chinese territory, she will weigh the possible results."

Fear of anti-foreign outbreak in China, should Russia make good her threat, is expressed by many statesmen familiar with Chinese affairs. China has shown a willingness to arbitrate the question of her alleged violation of the treaty of 1881, and this gives rise to the hope that she may yield before actual hostilities are precipitated.

PANTCHENKO IS FOUND GUILTY

HE GETS OFF WITH ONLY FIFTEEN YEARS AT CONVICT LABOR.

Life Term for the Count—De Lassy Made Doctor a Tool—Muravieva Fainted on Acquittal.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The trial of Dr. Pantchenko, who confessed to murdering forty persons by inoculating them with microbes and Count Patrick O'Brien De Lassy for the murder by poisoning of Count Bouturlin, ended yesterday. The jury returned a verdict of guilty against Count De Lassy, and found extenuating circumstances in the case of Dr. Pantchenko on the ground that he was Count De Lassy's tool.

Mme. Muravieva was acquitted. She forthwith fainted and was removed from the court-room.

Sentence on the convicted men was pronounced at 2.20 yesterday morning. De Lassy was condemned to convict labor for life and Dr. Pantchenko was sentenced to fifteen years of convict labor.

Pantchenko sat in a dazed condition after the sentence, while Count De Lassy rose and shook hands with his defenders.

SAYS ITS JUST LIKE TORONTO

LITTLE SURPRISE FELT BY THE LIBERALS AT OTTAWA OVER BOARD OF TRADE VOTE.

Conservatives Are Happy—Say Ontario Will Follow Suit—Bankers and Railway Men Opposed to Bill.

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—The general opinion in political circles here as to the vote of the Toronto Board of Trade yesterday in condemnation of the reciprocity agreement is "Just what could be expected." Toronto is always opposed to anything which a Liberal Government does and it would not make any difference if they voted to give an old-age pension to everyman, woman and child in Canada. Toronto would oppose it because it was a Liberal move.

That is, of course, the Liberal view TheConservatives, on the other hand, say that as Toronto goes, so will Ontario go, and they lay special stress upon the fact that the resolution was moved by Sir Edmund Walker, and that this is significant of the opinion of the banking and railway interests of the country.

MR. BENNET REBUKED

By a Vote of 9 to 1 Committee on Foreign Affairs Smothers Annexation Motion

Washington, D.C., Feb. 17.—The Committee on Foreign Affairs did not waste much time over Congressman Bennet's resolution of yesterday over the annexation of Canada. The Committee spent most of its time considering how best to show its little regard for the resolution, and finally decided that the best thing to so was to dispose of the whole thing at a special session.

Congressman Foster, of Vermont, is chairman of the committee, and he with Mr. McCall, called at the White House this morning and saw President Taft, who urged immediate action. Following the call a special meeting of the committee was called. Exactly eight minutes were spent, the resolution was put to a vote and got the magnificent total of one, that of its author, Mr. Bennet. The other nine gentlemen present voted against it.

A brief report was made to the House—that the resolution was adversely reported without any comment. This is the end of a silly attempt.—Bennet is getting universal condemnation and ridicule.

Kansas City, Feb. 17.—In an address at the Centennial Dinner of the Knife and Fork Club here last night Cy Warman, of Montreal, the poet and author, warned his audience that the United States must silence the annexation talk if they wished Canada to accept the proposed reciprocity measure.

"I am not in favor of annexation but I am in favor of reciprocity, said Mr. Warman. "It's the greatest thing for the good of the two countries that has been proposed in the last hundred years.

"But if the people of this country talk annexation they will defeat the reciprocity in the Canadian House Don't spoil a good thing by wanting too much."

Action of Council in December Upheld

THE PRINCIPLE OF EXEMPTING REVENUE PRODUCING INSTITUTIONS TURNED DOWN.

The Committee of Legislature Was In Session Yesterday.

The following extract from The Mail and Empire of yesterday, contains the gist of a situation that was bidding fair to become unbearable. The action of the City Council in December last when the principle of exemptions was pronounced upon is approved. It may confidently be expected that in future, unless the people vote for it, no attempt will be made to extend or continue special privileges for ratepayers and others:

"It did not take the members of the Private Bills Committee very long yesterday to decide on the principle that in future no Y.M.C.A. or similar association should be exempt from school taxes, no matter what others they are not called upon to pay. They decided also that every Y.M.C.A. or Y.W.C.A. would have to pay all taxes on every building used for revenue-producing purposes.

The question was raised when the bills presented on behalf of the Hamilton Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations were under discussion, they having been left over from Wednesday, so that the committee could arrive at some definite decision on the question of exemption from taxation. The unanimous opinion of the committee was that school taxes should be paid by every institution, and that question was settled in short order. But on the question of exemption on buildings used for revenue-producing purposes there was a longer debate. Some of the members drew attention to the fact that a Y.M.C.A. could erect an office building, use one floor, and rent the remainder, and be exempt from taxation. There was a difference of opinion as to the wording of the new regulation, and a committee composed of Messrs. Gooderham, Brewster and McGarry, was appointed to confer with the law clerk to draft a new clause in a bill which will be introduced in the House."—The Mail and Empire.

It refused to relegate the signing of debenture coupons to some person other than the Mayor.

It allowed the dog tax to be substituted by a license.

HE WILL NOT GIVE UP

Will Make Another Effort Looking Forward to the Annexation of Canada.

Washington, Feb. 17.—After his resolution looking to the annexation of Canada to the United States had been defeated to-day in the Foreign affairs Committee, Representative Bennet said that he would make some other effort later to bring the matter up in another way in the House.

Mr. Bennet added:

"This will not be the end of my effort looking forward to the annexation of Canada by the United States. I will make another. Canada ought to become a part of the United States."

When Champ Clark was informed of the vote on the Bennet resolution, he smiled, but refused to discuss the matter.

GRADED SCHOOLS FOR ARTISANS

DR. JOHN SEATH OUTLINES A SYSTEM UP TO PROVINCIAL COLLEGE.

For the Special Trades—Special Schools With Evening Training for Workmen—Extension of Agricultural Training.

In a report covering nearly four hundred pages, Dr. John Seath, Superintendent of Education for Ontario makes a number of recommendations in regard to a complete system of technical education that shall apply not only to school children and those under seventeen or eighteen years, but workmen in the shops. It embraces among other heads drawing and art, agriculture, commercial training, and the work of the artisan These recommendations are based on an exhaustive research that included a visit to European countries at the close of 1909, as well as far-reaching correspondence,

Mr. Seath lays down two principles "A good general education as an essential preparation for all vocations" and "A closer connection between our schools and the activities of life."

For those who leave school at or before fourteen, the present manual training and Household Science courses should be extended.

For the smaller number who remain at school, there should be a general Industrial School, a special Industrial School (for the trades) and the Technical High School.

For workmen and workwomen engaged in their occupations by day the following schools should be established:

The apprenticeship school, the evening part of it provided by the employer himself.

The evening school, supplementing the day shop work and other schools

The correspondence study school part by correspondence, part by a staff of travelling teachers.

He suggests the appointment of a special departmental officer to assist the various school boards.

An Ontario Industrial and Technical College—for training industrial teachers, workmen, pupils who have spent some time at industrial schools and to conduct a correspondence study school.

All of these, the industrial and technical evening schools, with liberal support from the Ontario Government are the most urgent.

NO ELECTIONS ON NEW YEAR'S

RURAL MEMBERS DEFEAT BILL BEFORE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

Cannot Control Suburb—General Feeling Against Any Civic Interference With Laying Out Streets—Mayor Must Sign Coupons.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Changes in the Municipal Act came thick and fast when the Municipal Committee of the Legislature met for the first time this morning.

The bill of Mr. Nickle, Kingston, declaring that property of charitable institutions shall not be exempt from taxation if they are tenanted passed without discussion.

Fines collected from reckless motorists will hereafter go to the municipalities, not to the constable who lays the complaint. This was Mr. McElroy's (Carleton) bill, and Mr. Hanna endorsed it as a "good one." Mr. MacElroy wanted the same conditions to apply as in the case of liquor fines.

Mr. Nickle's bill to give municipalities the right to regulate the place for the storage of rags and bones also carried.

The municipal elections will not be held on New Year's Day, except in the case of those cities that have special charters. But the present date of the first Monday in January is likelyto be changed to the first Monday in December.

The request of Peterborough City Council, through Mr. Bradburn's bill, for municipalities to be allowed to charge for the oiling of streets in the same way as for watering, was granted, but no city that is divided into wards will be allowed to hold one central meeting for aldermanic nominations.

It was agreed that with 21 vacancies and several times that number of applicants there would be little opportunity to discuss local questions in which each ward was interested.

Nor will a mayor be allowed to relegate the work of signing debenture coupons to the treasurer or some other official, as this might open the way to coupons being signed by improper persons.

ORANGE JUICE INEBRIATE CURE: MAKES BAR ODOR "DISGUSTING."

Doctor Tells Vegetarian Society Cooked Food Is Source of 95 Per Cent. of All Human Ills—Unfried Viands Ideal.

Knights of the flowing bowl, attention!

If you wish to stop dallying with the cup that cheers, eat oranges.

The advice was given by Dr. George J. Drews to the Chicago Vegetarian Society in an address on "Cooked Food vs. Unfried Food."

"Orange juice is the best antidote for an alcoholic appetite," he said. "When any one feels a desire to drink anything intoxicating all he has to do is to buy a couple of oranges. After eating them the desire will soon pass away. The secret lies in the sugar of the orange. It immediately causes a wholesome disgust even for the odor of a barroom.

"About 95 per cent. of all diseases are caused by eating cooked food. That is because food coming in contact with fire makes it unnatural. It gives it a sweet taste which causes an abnormal appetite. In consequence the system becomes overworked and the blood deteriorates."—Chicago Tribune.

DUMPED IN THE SNOW.

The Tribulations of an Auctioneer And His Assistant.

A story of misfortune and suffering reached a Times reporter when making his rounds yesterday. It appears that a well known auctioneer and his assistant, who happens to be a young man in a prominent real estate office, were on their way to conduct a sale in the country, and were gracefully gliding over the well beaten road, at a 2.40 clip, The air was crisp and exhilerating, thus creating an appetite for an expected sumptuous dinner on their arrival at the farm house where the sale was to be held. Like a bolt from a blue sky they were, without a second's notice, precipitated into a huge snow bank, the rig having suddenly turned bottom up. The horse, which was a spirited animal, did not stop, and proceeded onward at a high rate of speed. The auctioneer, as soon as he could get thesnow out of his mouth, nose and ears, exclaimed, "Great Scott, Jack, she's off!" His assistant, when he got squarely on his feet and realized what had taken place, made for the nearest farm house, where fortunately there was a telephone, and calling up the next farmer farther on, hurriedly requested him to stop the flying steed, but alas! too late, as the animal had just passed at a furiousgait. After considerable effort the two unfortunates gathered up the cushions, robes, whip, etc., and in the course of a short time were overjoyed to see their horse approaching, having been caught further up the road.

In the meantime the appetite of the travellers, owing to the excitement, had faded away, and they had lost their ambition to wield the knife and fork around the festive board. Although a trifle late in starting, the sale was conducted in a satisfactory manner.

QUEBEC HOUSE DISCUSSES BILL

HENRI BOURASSA RAISES THE RECIPROCITY QUESTION IN THE LEGISLATURE.

Gouin Makes Statement—Premier Says His Government Would Make Quebec World Centre of Paper Industry.

Quebec, Feb. 17.—Replying to a question put by Mr. Henri Bourassa in the House yesterday afternoon, as to the attitude of the Provincial Government regarding the reciprocity negotiations which have resulted in a tentative agreement between the Dominion and the United States, and whether the Government would make any change in its decision as to the exportation of pulpwood. Premier Gouin stated that Quebec was waiting to see what might happen at Washington and Ottawa before making any announcement.

Mr. Bourassa raised the question rather unexpectedly. He did not ask the Government to give a definite reply, he said, as he recognized the question required study, but he was of the opinion the Provincial Government should reach a decision before the conclusion of the debate at Ottawa, as on Ontario and Quebec would depend the attitude of the lumber interests regarding the treaty.

Premier Gouin said that the desire of the Government was to make Quebec the centre of the pulp and paper industry of the world—and there was noreason why it should not be accomplished, seeing that Quebec had the pulpwood and the water-power. If the Government had to choose between the Dominion and the United States, the choice would be for the Dominion, and if the choice lay between Quebec and Ottawa, the interests of Quebec would receive first consideration.

COMING from CALIFORNIA!

The "SUNKIST" Special, Moving at Express Train Speed, is Bringing TWENTY THOUSAND Boxes of Famous "SUNKIST" Oranges

Special Sale of "SUNKIST" Oranges All Next Week

Another big sale of "Sunkist" oranges will begin Monday next, continuing till the close of the week.

These special sales, which are held from time to time, are proving immensely popular.

Nearly everybody now knows the excellence of "Sunkist" oranges and they look forward with great interest to these announcements. If you and your people have never eaten "Sunkist" oranges, please try them. Until you do so, you can not imagine the delicious taste of fresh picked, tree-ripened oranges.

Special "Sunkist" Train

Two giant locomotives, pulling 48 refrigerator cars laden with fresh-picked, tree-ripened oranges—the select crop of 5,000 groves—will soon arrive from California.

So carefully have these oranges been picked; so rigidly were they inspected and graded; so rapidly are they being transported, that the people of this vicinity will be able to secure oranges as fresh, sweet and wholesome as can be bought in Los Angeles or San Francisco.

Your dealer and all other local dealers will be supplied with "Sunkist" oranges from the "Sunkist" Special Train.

"Sunkist" is the Perfect Orange

"Sunkist" is not a species or variety of oranges—it is a certain grade or quality, the choicest of each of five thousand California Orange Farmers, who produce 60% of the state's entire crop. They pack all their perfect oranges under the one name, "Sunkist," and ship them East by special fast freight.

Every "Sunkist" orange is firm, solid and sound. It is picked by a gloved hand. No orange that falls to the ground or becomes bruised or damaged in any other way, ever bears the "Sunkist" name.

Cheapest You Can Buy

"Sunkist" oranges are not only the finest flavored, freshest and most healthful of all oranges, but they are actually the least costly you can buy. Being seedless, fibreless and thin-skinned, the percentage of waste is extremely small. The tender, luscious pulp comprises 95% of the orange.

So it means economy to buy "Sunkist" oranges.

Buy "Sunkist" by the box. You can obtain a worth-while reduction on a box from your dealer. Because of their excellent condition "Sunkist" oranges keep better than others.

Many Ways to Serve Them

Oranges are the most appetizing and nourishing foods one can serve—at breakfast—in the sick-room—between meals—in salads, ices, sherbets and puddings.

There is no limit to the number of excellent dishes of which "Sunkist" oranges form the basis.

Doctors Recommend Them

It is very unusual to find a food that people like and can safely eat as much of as they please. Leading physicians say that to counteract the meats and other heavy foods we eat, one should eat oranges liberally. It is a universally known fact that orange juice is an excellent food for the brain cells and a tonic for run-down nerves. No better laxative than sound, ripe oranges can be found.

He was surprised at how the nerves healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicine the symptoms would break out again with new force, blotches, pimples, loss of hair, sore throat, swellings of the glands, pains of the bones scalding pains of the skin, dyspepsia, constipation, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years previous to his case, and took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I felt encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared, my general health was restored, and in the years of my experience since, I have never had a return of any of these troubles. By the way, these years are, I am glad to say, happy and healthy. I can truly and conscientiously recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can make any use of me privately, but you are welcome to use this testimonial as you wish. W. H. S.

GOLD BELT ACROSS DOMINION! DOMINION OLD MINES, LIMITED

It is becoming more evident continually that that part of the Dominion covered by the granites and schists of the Laurentian formation is heavily mineralized, wherever there are unions with the Hutonian rock or where quartz or other veins are interposed, St. Francis Beauce, Porcupine Cobalt, Bruce, Ont., and Sturgeon Lake are proof spots of this theory, corresponding to the test probings of diamond drills in a mining claim.

This last locality has received but slight attention as yet in the newspapers, though a good deal of successful development has been done on the spot. The lake itself is connected at its south end with Port William by a branch of the Grand Trunk and runs an irregular, greatly indented course, amid capes and islands over 40 miles to the north, where it is only eight miles away from the Transcontinental line of the same railway. Gold is found over a wide stretch of the country about the upper end, and several opening have been made with excellent prospects in nearly every case. The Dominion Gold Mines, Limited, control six claims covering 220 acres of land generally heavily timbered. That locality gives the lie direct to any but the most extravagant theories regarding the extent of the pulpwood reserves of that Dominion, being covered with spruce of good size and quality. At the present it looks as though the fate of all the timber within the sight is to fill the stokehole of power-producing boilers. There is enough of it in sight to drive drills and mills for many a decade of years.

EXPERT OPINION.

During the week Mr. Beidelman, a mining engineer and prospector of very wide experience, extending from James Bay to Mexico, from British Columbia through all the mining states of the West, told The Standard something of what he had himself seen in the Sturgeon Lake, or Thunder Bay district.

"In all my experience, I have never seen more gold showing at the surface," he said. "The geological stratum is perpendicular, as a rule, and the vertical fissures, which are numerous, are all heavily mineralized, the ore being generally copper pyrites bearing gold. The Keewatin runs in veins, from a foot and a half up to some feet in width. Where the Dominion Gold Mines, Limited, are working, for instance, they have two parallel veins of good ore, only a few feet apart, and the rock between the two veins is full enough of mineral to make it a good low-grade proposition. It is to get out this matter and mill it that the company is offering 200,000 shares for sale at a very low figure in Montreal. A mill will have to be built, and the material reduced to a condition of readiness for refining, though I believe the cyanide process could be applied right on the spot."

From the general excellence of the assays made by the Dominion Government analyst, Dr. J. T. Donald, and Mr. W. W. Bennet, assayer to the U. S. Steel Corporation, which shows results ranging from never below $17 up to $424 a ton in gold, it will be seen that there is no doubting the presence of the precious metal in paying quantities. The specimens dealt with were not hand-selected chips, of which the Standard has seen many from that section of much greater richness, but good-sized blocks, representative of the whole texture of the veins.

It is clear that Canada is to have her reputation established as a land of gold by a widely-dispersed series of gold camps. It is many years—60 at least—since Nova Scotia astonished the world by stories of gold discoveries. Northern Quebec is still to have her possibilities developed. The Peace River and Rocky Mountain section s have shown mineral for many years, and so the band of gold which weds the East and West is probably about to be proved to be a reality. Ontario is having a wonderful development, and the new camp at Sturgeon Lake will add greatly to her wealth. Only the future can make it clear, whether the banner agricultural province is to maintain the position she at present promises to fill, of being also in mineral production.
